IN EXILE: ST. HELENA BY (1815-1821) MITH TWO COLOURED FRONTISPIECES FROM THE COLLECTION OF A M BROADLEY

VOLUME II

LONDON. STANLEY PAUL & CO.
STREET, STRAND, W.C.

First Published in 1915 WILLIAM SERMOON AND BON LYD. PRINTERS, PLYMOUTH, ENGLAND

CONTENTS

CHAPTER XVI.	THE DEPORTATION OF LAS CASES	PAGE 9
XVII.	SIR PULTENEY MALCOLM	25
XVIII.	THE PAIN IN THE SIDE	· 51
XIX.	THE DEPARTURE OF GENERAL GOURGAUD	71
XX.	THE DISMISSAL OF O'MEARA	94
XXI.	THE CONGRESS OF AIX-LA-CHAPELLE .	109
XXII.	THE COURT-MARTIAL ON SURGEON STOKOE	123
XXIII.	DEPARTURE OF COMTESSE DE MONTHOLON	152
XXIV.	ARRIVAL OF ANTOMMARCHI AND THE PRIESTS	166
XXV.	THE LAST ILLNESS	189
XXVI.	DEATH	208
XXVII.	Post-Mortem	226
XXVIII.	THE FUNERAL	243
XXIX.	THE FATE OF SIR HUDSON LOWE .	255
XXX.	THE WILL OF NAPOLEON	278
XXXI.	LEGENDS AND APOTHEOSIS .	297
	BIBLIOGRAPHY	313
	APPENDIX	323
	INDEX	353

ILLUSTRATIONS

BERTHAND'S HOUSE, NEW LONGWOOD AND LONGWOOD H From a painting by Robert Cordwell, executed from drawings made on it spot by Frederick Allison in 1811. In the possession of Dr. Arnold Capita
	Dri PA
WOOD From a photograph by Graham Ballout.	1
THE BARN THE SEA, AND THE LONGWOOD HOUSES, FROM DEADWOOD CAMP From a contemporary water-colour.	ų 2
REAR ADMIRAL SIR PULTENEY MALCOLM, G.C.B From the enerating by W. Ward, after the pulnting by Sammel Lade.	8
FRENCH CARICATURE	44
BARRY EDWARD O MEARA Reproduced by Mad permission of the "Custury Magazina.	_ 56
Napoleon in 1818 After Beatl Jackson.	64
ALEXANDER BAXTER, M.D. From "A St. Haiona Who's Who.	68
Napoleon Dictating to Gourgaud From a lithograph after Stenbes.	72
THE ROBINSON CRUSOE OF ST HELENA A French caricatura.	80
DEPUTY-COMMISSABY-GENERAL DENZIL IRBETSON From the picture in possession of his daughter, Miss Laum Indexion,	96
WILLIAM BALCOMBE From A St. Haiena Who's Who."	104
Napoleon and the Rats at St Helena Frech curculum.	112
LONGWOOD GUM TREES, WITH FLAGSTAFF HILL IN THE BACKGROUND Trop a photograph by Graham Balker.	120
NAPOLEON AT ST HELENA From a water-colour by Captain (afterwards Mr David) Entities.	182

REAR-ADMIRAL ROBERT J PLAMPIN	136
NAPOLEON'S FAVOURITE CHAIR AT LONGWOOD Purchased at the sale at Jamestown in 1822 by Denzil Ibbetson, and now in possession of his daughter, Miss Laura Ibbetson.	152
MAJOR-GENERAL SIR GEORGE RIDEOUT BINGHAM, KCB. From the engraved portrait by W Ward, after H W Pickersgill, R.A.	160
THE SHUTTERS AT BERTRAND'S HOUSE, WITH THE OBSERVATION HOLES CUT FOR NAPOLEON From a photograph by Graham Balfour	162
FLAGSTAFF HILL AND THE BARN, FROM THE VERANDAH OF NEW LONGWOOD	168
ONE OF THE PONDS MADE BY NAPOLEON IN HIS GARDENS From a photograph by Graham Balfour	180
NAPOLEON IN 1818	184
MOUNT PLEASANT, SIR WILLIAM DOVETON'S HOUSE AT SANDY BAY	192
NAPOLEON, 6 MARCH, 1821	200
THE IRON RAILINGS ROUND BERTRAND'S HOUSE AND NEW LONGWOOD .	204
ARCHIBALD ARNOTT, M.D	20 8
THE DOORWAY THAT FACED NAPOLEON ON HIS DEATH-BED From a photograph by Graham Balfour	216
STEUBEN'S PICTURE OF THE DEATH-BED OF NAPOLEON .	220
KEY TO STEUBEN'S PICTURE	220
ARNOTT'S PENCIL NOTE ANNOUNCING NAPOLEON'S DEATH, WITH ENDORSEMENT BY LOWE. Photographed by permission of the Earl of Crawford from the original in his possession.	224
NAPOLEON AFTER DEATH From the sketch by Captain Marryat, in the Broadley collection.	228
CAPTAIN MARRYAT, RN, CB From an engraving after a drawing by William Behnes	230
Draft of the First Report on the Autopsy of Napoleon	232

ILLUSTRATIONS

8

	CING PA
THOMAS SHORTT M.D. From "A St. Helens Who's Who."	28
THE DEAD NAPOLEON From the off picture by Densil Inbrison, in the Broadley collection.	24
THE DEATH MASK OF NAPOLEON, MADE BY DR. BURTON From an oath copy	24
FRANCIS BURTON, M.D. From "A &L Rekma Who's Who.	24
NAPOLEON 8 FUNERAL THE PROCESSION LEAVING LONG WOOD From a memotiat, after Mantrat.	- 24
THE FUNERAL PROCESSION OF NAPOLEON APPROACHING THE GRAVE From an aquality after a water-colour by John Kerl.	3 250
THE BURIAL OF NAPOLEON Prom a contemporary accounts.	256
NAPOLEON ON HIS DEATH BED From the sketch by Easien Ward, in the collection of Alfred Brewis.	264
THE TOMB OF NAPOLEON IN JUNE, 1821 From a water-colour by E. E. Vidal, in possession of Mrs. M. A. J. Levis.	272
Napoleon 8 Tomb and the Valley From a photograph by Graham Baltone.	280
NAPOLEON 8 TOMB, IN 1914 From a photograph by Graham Ballour	288
NAPOLEON'S TOMB, IN 1914 From a photograph by Grahess Ballour	294
THE BODY OF NAPOLEON AS IT APPEARED ON EXHUMA TION OCTORER 15 1840 From a drawley by Jules Hep.	804
THE BODY OF NAPOLEON BEING TAKEN FROM JAMESTOWN TO THE FRENCH FRIGATE BELLE POULE, OCTOBER 18 1840 After Domnot-Brown.	810
THE TOMB OF NAPOLEON AT THE INVALIDES, PABIS	812
MAPS
New Longwood	126
LONGWOOD SITE	176

NAPOLEON IN EXILE: ST. HELENA

CHAPTER XVI

THE DEPORTATION OF LAS CASES

HE servant of Count Las Cases at Longwood was a mulatto, named James Scott Las Cases sent Scott with a secret message to Baroness Sturmer, a fact which the Baron at once communicated to Sir Hudson Lowe; who then learned that Scott had been engaged as servant by Las Cases without the sanction of Sir George Cockburn, and that he did not bear a good character. On the 13th November, 1816, he informed Las Cases that he would have to change his servant, to which the Count replied, in the Longwood manner of sulky defiance, that the servant of his choice might be taken from him but he could not be compelled to accept the substitute offered by the Governor. Lowe was hardened to that kind of reply. Scott was removed on the 15th, and forbidden all communication with Longwood

The loss of his servant came at a time when Las Cases was most anxious for an honourable excuse for leaving St Helena. The weak state of his eyes prevented him from writing much, and so the daily journal had to be dictated to his son, who in his turn had developed a heart weakness of a somewhat alarming nature. Las Cases and his son were in the smallest and most uncomfortable rooms, at the back of the house. They were at this time the most miscrable of the followers, and the journal having now attained a substantial size, Las Cases gave evident signs of restiveness

His relations with the other followers had never been good and had been steadily growing worse. Gourgaud told Bertrand, who appears to have agreed, that the complaints against Sir Hudson Lowe merely aggravated their position that it was all due to "the follies and intrigues of Las Cases, his promenades, his meetings on horseback. "Las Cases is always urging on His Majesty, and so does him much harm. Gourgaud was right Las Cases was the inspirer of much of the violence against Sir Hudson Lowe, and the cause of many of the Longwood troubles

When Scott was removed Montholon told Gourgaud he was sure Las Cases would soon go In effect he was much upset 'His Majesty,' writes Gourgaud, "takes a great interest in this poor man We dine. The Emperor sends for news of this poor Las Cases Ali returns with the report that he is in bed but hopes to manage some soup and a nice fowl 'Ah, the poor man, exclaims Montholon To which His Majesty makes no response. After dinner His Majesty sends the young one to keep his father company and then talks again about his dear Las Cases 'The vexations of the Governor without doubt have been the cause of his illness. I object,' says Gourgaud, that I suffered as much as M. Las Cases when they took my servant, and that for three days I had no domestic to attend me.

Next day there was a scene. Bertrand was instructed by Napoleon to tell Gourgaud that Las Cases, being a chamber lain, should take precedence over him, to which Gourgaud answered by citing all the privileges to which he was entitled from his position of Chief Orderly Officer to His Majesty concluding with the remark. In no event will I a soldier, give way to a chamberlain who is not in reality anything but a titled valet.

Napoleon sent for Gourgaud and Montholon. He expressed to them his appreciation of the society of Las Cases, a-man of great ment, and told them they ought to make friends with him. Gourgaud replied that the chamberlain was too much of a Jesuit for him, whereupon Napoleon told him bluntly that as regards character he had less even than a child. Gourgaud appealed to Montholon, who remarked that, for his part, he had been a Minister Plenipotentiary, he was a General, also a Chamberlain, he had served his country seventeen years, and that never, under any pretext, would he give way to Las Cases. Napoleon said that if he had seniority as a Chamberlain that made a difference—a remark which preluded an attack on Gourgaud who, he observed, thought too much of himself and was jealous also of Montholon. Gourgaud replied that he was in agreement with Montholon, that nothing would ever affect their good relations, that his only hope was that His Majesty could not intend the hard words by which he was crushing them. The Emperor ended by laying down that after Bertrand and Las Cases came Mme. de Montholon, and that as for Gourgaud and Montholon they were two children who together counted only as one "My calculation is," concludes Gourgaud, "that the young Emanuel should go before me, since at thirty-three years of age, and after seventeen years of service, I am treated like a child."

When, before dinner, Las Cases and Mme. de Montholon were in attendance on the Emperor in the salon, Madame being in tears, Napoleon told her he did not mean a word of what he had said to her husband. Gourgaud adds in triumph that he walked into the dining-room before the chamberlain, and that "His Majesty is very affable towards us, but not to Las Cases." This effort to soothe the feelings of the outraged Generals did little good. Gourgaud had to resort to medicine to relieve his sufferings, and Montholon declared that he would leave St. Helena rather than give precedence to Las Cases. Next day, to prevent further scenes, Napoleon dined in his room, Las Cases in his, and Gourgaud in his, leaving the Montholons to take the house dinner by them selves in the dining room.

Las Cases writes in his journal of the horrors of his situa tion, ' exiled, and probably for ever, to a deserted rock two thousand leagues from home, confined in a small prison beneath a sky, in a climate, on a soil, totally different from that of my native country I am hastening to a premature grave, the only probable conclusion of my misery Bereft of my wife, children and friends, who though they still live may be said to be no longer in the same world with me, shut out from all communication with mankind, I deplore the recollection of family affections, and the charms of friendship and society Then he turns to his one consola Here I am not surrounded by mere illusions and historical recollections. I am in actual contact with the living man who has accomplished so many produges. Every day, every moment, I may contemplate the features of him who with a glance, ordered battles, and decided the fate of Empires. I may gaze on the brow, etc.

I may presume to touch the hand etc. 'I hear the voice of him who etc 'I converse, almost familiarly with the monarch who etc. I see him, I hear him speak, I attend on him, and, perhaps, even help to console him Can I then lay claim to pity? On the contrary, will not thousands envy my lot?

These pleasures however genuine and honourable, were not potent enough to reconcile Las Cases to a life of permanent exile. The hostility of the Montholons and Gourgaud strengthened his longing to escape. His opportunity now came.

James Scott contrived, in the darkness of evening to evade all the sentries and enter the apartment of his former master Las Cases proposed to use him for further clandestine communications, this time with correspondents in Europe, whither Scott would go as the servant of some officer return ing to England.¹ Las Cases broached the matter to Napoleon, who looked through the documents which might be utilized, and talked about the work of transcription, but gave no positive orders. Next day when Las Cases spoke again about the project Napoleon evinced no sign of interest, from which the Count concluded that it was to be prosecuted but not in such a manner as to implicate the Emperor in case of discovery. As Gonnard observes:² "He left Las Cases to take the risks while retaining for himself the chances of success and the possibility of repudiating Las Cases in case of failure." Las Cases for his part rushed willingly into danger, hoping that as a result he might be deported from the island.

Scott passed through the sentries a second time, and was told to return next day. There was still left some of the satin on which young Las Cases had written the Montholon Remonstrance, for Santini. Emanuel now copied on it, in minute characters, letters from his father to Lady Clavering, a French lady who had befriended Las Cases in England, and to Lucien The satin was given to Scott, who sewed it in his clothing, and then passed through the sentries once more and returned to Jamestown The success of these passages to and fro does not speak well for the watchfulness of the guard. It would seem that, in spite of the sentries, who were said to be close under his windows, Napoleon could have left Longwood in the night if he had been so minded.

James Scott showed the waistcoat to his father, John Scott, a white man, who reported the matter to Sir Hudson Lowe, with the result that James was arrested, at Jamestown.

Then came the turn of Count Las Cases. On the 25th November, 1816, at 4 pm, Las Cases and Gourgaud were with Napoleon in the garden. "Five oranges were brought on a plate, with a knife and some sugar," writes the chamber-

¹ Las Cases told Lowe that Scott had "offered" his services, and when Lowe replied that Scott denied it, Las Cases said by "offered" he meant that the servant raised no objections
² "Les Origines," p 362

Major Gorrequer told Las Cases that the Governor would at once have dinner sent for him from Plantation House, and expressed the Governor s regret at the distance it would have to travel (about four miles), and said the Governor ordered that anything Las Cases required should be provided. Las Cases was effusive in his thanks !

On the 28th November the two Las Cases were removed from Major Harrison s to a cottage belonging to Balcombe, not far distant, whence the house and grounds of Longwood are plainly visible. The cottage is still in existence—it is of small dimensions—Here was Balcombe's poultry farm, where the fowls ducks, geese, and turkeys were fattened for Napoleon's table. There was a small garden in which the prisoners could take exercise—The sentrics were kept as much as possible out of sight.

The Governor came nearly every day to see Las Cases. The Count told him, in the presence of Major Gorrequer that he "found him reasonable and frank in all his proceedings that on his part he felt pleasure in saying he now saw things in a different light 'at Longwood, he said 'one sees things through a veil of blood this veil had now been withdrawn from before his eyes, and he now spoke as a stranger to Longwood, and with all the frankness natural to him. He repeated this on a subsequent occasion he said that 'he now spoke and saw things as a stranger to Longwood that many circumstances appeared to him in a very different light than when he was there—that the same good might result to others by proper explanation and the bloody veil which was extended over Longwood might thus be removed. He acknowledged with pleasure the attention he had received from the Governor since he was in his present situation.

Dr Baxter who attended Emanuel Las Cases at Bal

Dr Baxter who attended Emanuel Las Cases at Bal combe's cottage, reported to Lowe that the Count 'said that, however your actions might be influenced by political motives and circumstances, your conduct towards him since his removal from Longwood has been marked with that politeness and attention which was in every way agreeable to his feelings, and that he saw at present your character in a very different light and through quite another medium than when at Longwood."

¹ In the Mémorial he is not ashamed to say, that when at 11 p.m. he mockly saked for a morsel of bread the sentries "answered me by presenting their bayonets."

DEADWOOD, WITH FLAGSTAFF HILL, AS SEEN FROM LONGWOOD From a photograph by Grahım Balfour

Las Cases was, doubtless, most anxious to obtain a good footing with the Governor, but that the change of feeling was genuine is shown by an entry in the "Mémorial," of the 7th December, 1816. "I must confess that this Governor, since he has had me in his power, has behaved towards me with the utmost politeness, and the most marked attention I have seen him go myself and remove a sentry who might, he said, have offended my sight, to place him behind some trees in order that I might no longer see him."

When Las Cases arrived at the Cape his opinion of the Governor there underwent a similar change. He wrote: "I now discovered how greatly the Governor's character had been misrepresented to me. Lord Charles Somerset was, indeed, far from meriting the reports I had heard respecting him. Almost every man has his detractors, and those who have high functions to discharge seldom escape the tongue of calumny."

Las Cases admitted now that on leaving Longwood he for the first time saw things in a reasonable light, and found that Sir Hudson Lowe was a very different man from what he had been taught to believe In the foul atmosphere of Longwood, thick with the miasma of intrigue, deceit, jealousy, and hatred, it was impossible to see things correctly. Those who emerged and were able to throw off that baneful influence, were astonished at the changed aspect of affairs, when the normal powers of vision had returned.

In one of his interviews with Lowe, Las Cases made some interesting remarks about Napoleon. He said, speaking of the mental disposition, "C'est un vrai malade," that one irritation had been followed by another, till it had brought him "au dernier dégoût de la vie ' "He must be looked upon as a sick man, great allowances should be made for him, he expresses himself with warmth, he is by nature of a quick temper, he is of the proudest spirit, we must remember how many years he has been a sovereign, and that he has not been in the custom of restraining himself in the choice of words, at the same time he weighs things well and is very slow to form a judgment. Be persuaded, Sir Governor, that if you knew him you would find him a man of the best natural disposition Napoleon at St. Helena was frequently peevish, ill humoured violent. But he was not always in the melancholy mood. One day, not feeling well he asked Bertrand how he was looking "Rather vellow replied the Grand Marshal. Napoleon rose from the sofa and chased Bertrand round the table. "Rather vellow, indeed! Do you intend to insult me? Do you mean to assert that I am bilious morose, splenetic, passionate, unjust, tyranucal? Let me get hold of your ear and I will have my revenge.

¹ This passage has been cut out of some editions of the "Mémorial,"

While living at Balcombe's cottage Las Cases dictated to his son many letters, some of them of portentous length. They are not all printed in the "Mémorial, for he says, 'I omit a pretty voluminous correspondence. His letter to Lowe of the 19th December would cover forty large pages of print. He inflicted this arduous work upon his son, although Baxter told him it was this copying that had affected the boy's heart. The papers found in the trunks consisted of the manuscript of the campaign of Italy, dictated by the Emperor, which Lowe sent back to Longwood copies of the correspondence between Longwood and the English authorities, from the time of Sir George Cockburn, which Lowe also returned to Longwood and the journal. Napoleon claimed the journal as relating exclusively to himself, and consisting very much of matter derived from him in conversa tion Las Cases claimed it as his own handiwork. Lowe decided to keep it.

Having secured his own exclusion from the case, Napoleon denounced Las Cases for his conduct; "not," said he to O'Meara, "that I disapprove of his endeavouring to make our situation known, on the contrary; but I disapprove of the bungling manner in which he attempted it. I am sorry for it, because people will accuse me of having been privy to the plan, and will have a poor opinion of my understanding; supposing me to have consented to so shallow a plot."

On the 30th November Las Cases wrote a long letter to Lowe in which he asked to be sent to England, a request he repeated in a second letter, of the 2nd December, and again in a letter of the 4th December, in which he said: "I demand of you, officially and formally, to be so good as to remove me from St. Helena and restore me to liberty" He was afraid he would be detained in confinement, until orders as to his fate were received from England. Napoleon, who was under the same impression, wrote his follower a letter of sympathy and appreciation, with the advice that he should insist on being sent away at once. The letter contained rather more than the normal abuse of Lowe. The passages relating to Las Cases were as follows: "Your conduct at St. Helena has been, like the whole of your life, honourable and irreproachable; I have pleasure in giving you this testimony. . . . Your company was necessary to me. You are the only one who can read, speak, and understand English. How many nights have you watched over me during my illnesses! However, I advise you, and, if necessary, I order you, to demand of the Governor of this place to be sent to the Continent; he cannot refuse, since he has no power over you, but by virtue of the act which you have voluntarily signed. As there is every reason to suppose that you will not be allowed to come and see me before your departure, receive my embrace, and the assurance of my friendship. May you be happy." The letter concluded with the words in Napoleon's handwriting, "Votre dévoué, Napoléon."

The object of this letter was to force Lowe's hand and make him decide at once, either to send Las Cases away, or to allow him to return to Longwood and Napoleon expected that the latter alternative would be taken. So it proved. On the 17th December, Las Cases wrote to the Governor to inform him that his son's illness had become very serious, and he made the remark that at Longwood there was a medical officer on the spot, to be called in at any moment. Las Cases meant to imply that it was a matter of importance to remove them at once from St. Helena, but Lowe supposed he was expressing a desire to return to Longwood. He went, with Gorrequer to Balcombe's cottage, and told Las Cases that in consequence of his last letter, taking into account the state of his own and his son's health, and under the im pression that such a step would be gratifying to General Bonaparte, he would allow them both to go back to Long wood until final instructions were received from England 'provided the Count would write him a letter on the subject, says Major Gorrequer "Count Las Cases replied, the Governor had misunderstood him if he conceived he meant by his letter to solicit his return to Longwood. Las Cases was determined never to return to Longwood, not even if the only alternative offered him was a lengthy imprison ment at St. Helena. His reply to Lowe was that he did not intend to go back unless he was asked to do so by the Emperor himself. He wrote to Bertrand to the same effect, knowing well that Napoleon was the last man in the world to ask formally for the presence of any person who wished to stay away

When Napoleon heard from O'Meara that Las Cases declined to return, he was very much astonished, said it was impossible (questo e impossible) and made O'Meara repeat his statement several times before he would accept it. The reasons which had originally impelled Las Cases to wish to leave Longwood, the discomfort, the ennui the quarrels, his weak eyes and his son's ill health, the profitable state to which his journal had already attained, were now reinforced by other considerations. He could not bring himself to return, to be received with reproaches for his bungling, and suspicion as to the motives which prompted it. Gourgaud and the Montholons would use the unfortunate issue of the Scott affair to impugn his ability, and to suggest that he had ridden for a fall. Gourgaud wrote in his journal, that it looked very much like it. O'Meara wrote to Finlaison that the bungling had been deliberate, in order to earn a desired deportation. Balmain reported to his Government that the general opinion was to that effect. The remark of young Las Cases to O'Meara, already quoted, places the matter beyond doubt

Las Cases would have stood, in the Longwood society, with a tarnished reputation both for ability and for loyalty There was something still worse in the background. There was the fear of a permanent exile. When, later on, the orders of Lord Bathurst were received, it was found that the Minister approved of Lowe's offer to Las Cases to remain, an arrangement which he considered "likely to conduce materially to the comfort of General Bonaparte," but that if Las Cases made that deliberate choice, he must not "expect to be released from the obligation thus voluntarily imposed upon himself, upon any future change of opinion to which circumstances may give rise." Las Cases, in short, was to be a prisoner on nearly the same terms as Napoleon, for an indefinite period, perhaps for life. All the other followers knew that if their honour allowed it they could ask for and obtain leave to depart Las Cases was to be denied the hope of ultimate freedom; he was to be in a separate category, in permanent disgrace in the Longwood household, and confined to St. Helena for many years. He anticipated this decision, and was determined not to run any risk of such a fate

Napoleon enjoyed the society of Las Cases, and would have been glad to have him tied to Longwood He instructed O'Meara to tell him informally that the Emperor would like him to stay, but when Las Cases insisted on a formal pronouncement through the Grand Marshal, all that Napoleon would allow that high official to announce was, that the Emperor would be pleased if Las Cases departed and pleased if he remained To a man anxious to remain, the latter phrase would have sufficed, but Las Cases was positively sick with desire to go Bertrand tried verbally to induce him to stay, and asked him what were his reasons for declining "Would you not like,' he asked, "to give me for the Emperor some explanation about your position? The reply was that the defails were too long to enter upon.

While at Balcombe's cottage Emanuel became seriously ill with Doctors Baxter and O Meara both in attendance, and the Count himself was in poor health. They were, accordingly, at the urgent request of Las Cases, who wished to get away as soon as possible even from the neighbourhood of Longwood, removed to the Castle, at Jamestown. They were now close to the sea and the sight of it made Las Cases crazy with longing He wrote in his journal "The endless difficulties that had arisen, and my endeavours to avert them, had kept me in a continual state of agitation, and vexation of mind was combined with grief of heart. This complication of misery had wrought a kind of revolution in my whole frame. I suddenly felt myself ten years older However making an effort to collect my strength, I once more begged that Sir Hudson Lowe would give orders for my removal as speedily as possible. He at length determined that my departure should take place two days afterwards.

Every day for some time past he had been bombarding Lowe with supplications to be sent away to any part of the Cape of Good Hope, or indeed to any other place, and soon. Each moment was a torment. As for the promise to be removed in two days, his reply to Lowe was, 'Would it not be possible to go sooner? Bertrand reported at Long wood that, on finding that he could not embark at once, Las Cases became so distraught that he seemed to be in a state of delivium.

of delirium

THE BARN, THE SEA, AND THE LONGWOOD HOUSES, FROM DEADWOOD CAMP From a contemporary water colour

When Napoleon became convinced that Las Cases had positively refused to return, although it had been made clear to him that the Emperor would like to have him back, he turned and rent him, announcing that he had always recognized Las Cases as a man below the standard of mediocrity.

Sir Hudson Lowe drew his character very well in the letter he wrote to Lord Charles Somerset, the Governor at the Cape: "Count Las Cases is a man of considerable talents, of high literary attainments—exceedingly specious, eloquent, and insinuating—is, or appears to be, a fanatic admirer, or rather adorer, of Bonaparte—has lived in closer habits of intimacy with him since his arrival on this island than any other person who accompanied him, and has been certainly the most active in keeping up the irritation of his mind against all the measures of the British Government, even repelling ameliorations of his own situation when offered. He had besides infringed the regulations, in different instances, before his last separation. In other respects he is a person of highly polite and gentle manners, and merits the consideration due to him on such account." This is a discerning and, considering the rude calumniations of Las Cases, a generous letter. Lowe felt no rancour against the man in whose journal he found himself accused of moral turpitude of the basest kind.

It was at last arranged that Las Cases and his son should embark for the Cape, on the evening of the 29th December. A diamond necklace which had belonged to Napoleon's step-daughter, Hortense, had been in the Count's keeping, concealed in a belt he wore; this he contrived to return to Napoleon. He had promised to lend the Emperor a sum of 4000 louis which he possessed in England. Bertrand was sent by Napoleon on the 29th December to receive this money, which Las Cases promised to give him in thirteen bills of exchange of 800 louis each. It would almost seem that this was the amount paid for the privilege of departing These proceedings occupied some time, and prevented the embarkation from taking place that evening, as originally arranged. Las Cases was consumed with anxiety at the delay "which, ' he says, " prolonged the conflict of my mind and lacerated my wounds"

¹ In the "Mémorial," vol viii, p 32, this is represented as a gift, but later, when at the Cape, he writes (vol. viii, p 128), of a deed signed by Napoleon, which constituted a claim for reimbursement.

24

On the 80th Bertrand visited him again, and after endeavouring for the last time to induce him to go back to Longwood meeting with no response, he turned the subject to the bills of exchange, which were at length handed over Gourgaud also came to say good bye, and there was a reconciliation between the two, with mutual expressions of good will.

Everything being settled "Sir Hudson Lowe wrote for me several letters of introductions to his friends at the Cape, who he assured me would prove very agreeable to me. I had not the courage to refuse these letters, such was the sincenty with which they appeared to be offered. At length the long looked for moment of departure arrived. The Governor accompanied me to the gate, and ordered all his officers to attend me to the place of embarkation this he said, was intended as a mark of respect. I eagerly jumped into the boat which was in readiness to receive me. On the 80th December, 1816 the Griffon sailed for the Cape with the fugitives on board.

CHAPTER XVII

SIR PULTENEY MALCOLM

N New Year's Day, 1817, Napoleon received all his followers, with their children, and distributed presents among them. To Hortense Bertrand he gave a bon-bon box which had been gift to him from Pauline; he said it was worth fifty louis. To the other children, Napoléon and Henri Bertrand, Tristan and Hélène Montholon (the latter aged six months), he gave suitable toys. To Mesdames Bertrand and Montholon he had already sent in the morning a cup and saucer each, of the beautiful Sèvres porcelain. Now he brought out the box which Elphinstone had sent him, and gave to these ladies all that it contained in the way of shawls, stuffs, tea, etc. He gave Bertrand the set of chessmen. To Montholon he gave a cross in mosaic, to Gourgaud a spy-glass which had been a present from Caroline. He gave O'Meara a gold snuff-box, a fact which O'Meara at once reported to the Governor. Then there was a family dinner party at which all the followers and their children were present.

The bright laughter of the children turned the Emperor's thoughts to the days of his own youth. He spoke to his followers of his early literary aspirations, his correspondence with Abbé Raynal, his letter against Buttafuoco, his "Souper de Beaucaire," and the essay on "happiness" which he sent – in for the prize offered by the Academy of Lyons in the year 1791. He asserted that he had obtained the prize, which – was not the case. The examiners expressed a poor opinion bills of exchange of 800 louis each. It would almost seem that this was the amount paid for the privilege of departing These proceedings occupied some time, and prevented the embarkation from taking place that evening, as originally arranged. Las Cases was consumed with anxiety at the delay "which, he says," prolonged the conflict of my mind and lacerated my wounds'

24 NAPOLEON IN EXILE ST HELENA

On the 80th Bertrand visited him again, and after endeavouring for the last time to induce him to go back to Longwood, meeting with no response, he turned the subject to the bills of exchange, which were at length handed over Gourgaud also came to say good bye, and there was a reconciliation between the two, with mutual expressions of good will.

Everything being settled, "Sir Hudson Lowe wrote for me several letters of introductions to his friends at the Cape, who he assured me would prove very agreeable to me. I had not the courage to refuse these letters, such was the sincerity with which they appeared to be offered. At length the long looked for moment of departure arrived. The Governor accompanied me to the gate, and ordered all his officers to attend me to the place of embarkation. this, he said, was intended as a mark of respect. I eagerly jumped into the boat which was in readiness to receive me. On the 30th December 1816, the Grifion sailed for the Cape with the fugitives on board.

CHAPTER XVII

SIR PULTENEY MALCOLM

N New Year's Day, 1817, Napoleon received all his followers, with their children, and distributed presents among them. To Hortense Bertrand he gave a bon-bon box which had been a gift to him from Pauline; he said it was worth fifty louis. To the other children, Napoléon and Henri Bertrand, Tristan and Hélène Montholon (the latter aged six months), he gave suitable toys. To Mesdames Bertrand and Montholon he had already sent in the morning a cup and saucer each, of the beautiful Sèvres porcelain. Now he brought out the box which Elphinstone had sent him, and gave to these ladies all that it contained in the way of shawls, stuffs, tea, etc. He gave Bertrand the set of chessmen. To Montholon he gave a cross in mosaic, to Gourgaud a spy-glass which had been a present from Caroline. He gave O'Meara a gold snuff-box, a fact which O'Meara at once reported to the Governor. Then there was a family dinner party at which all the followers and their children were present.

The bright laughter of the children turned the Emperor's thoughts to the days of his own youth. He spoke to his followers of his early literary aspirations, his correspondence with Abbé Raynal, his letter against Buttafuoco, his "Souper de Beaucaire," and the essay on "happiness" which he sent — in for the prize offered by the Academy of Lyons in the year 1791 He asserted that he had obtained the prize, which — was not the case. The examiners expressed a poor opinion of his work. With talk upon these subjects, varied by close estimates as to the exact values of his snuff boxes, which were handed round for examination, the evening passed agreeably Gourgaud writes in his diary, "A good beginning to the year"

Las Cases was no longer there to foment strife, internal as well as external Gourgaud and the Montholons were delighted to be rid of the rival who had stood between them and the Emperor, and they had not yet begun to fight for the vacant position of favourite Napoleon missed the conver sation of Las Cases, but the removal of that creator of irrita tion was followed by an immediate improvement in the relations between Longwood and Plantation Napoleon did not cease to complain to his attendants of the villainy of Lowe, but there was less pungency and heat in his declama tions Sir Hudson was able to report to Bathurst, in March, that ' nothing can possibly be more quiet and orderly than they all now seem to be. As a consequence Napoleon s health was visibly better, and his spirits brighter, in the early part of 1817 than had been the case when Las Cases was inflaming his passions against the Governor

Sir Hudson Lowe's chief trouble now was with Sir Pulteney Malcolm. On the 21st September, 1816 Malcolm, who was about to sail for the Cape, had an interview with Napoleon. From this event developed the friction between the Admiral and the Governor which ultimately grew into a quarrel. In Lady Malcolm's diary which was dictated by Sir Pulteney, the following explanation is given 'The Admiral had no communication with Longwood from the 18th August till the 21st September considering it proper to mark his dis approbation of Bonaparte's conduct to the Governor on that day When the time drew near that he was to sail for the Cape, he thought it would be proper to pay him a visit of ceremony On mentioning this to Sir Hudson, although he did not say that the Admiral ought not to go, yet he showed by his manner that he did not altogether approve.

They argued the matter amicably." Letters passed between the two in which Lowe suggested some objections to the proposed visit, and Malcolm—ever ready to give the Governor lessons in deportment—showed that it was only common, and necessary, civility. Lowe could hardly be expected to enjoy the process of being inducted into the secrets of good breeding by an officer who, on the island of St. Helena, was his subordinate. Sir George Cockburn, who had held a more responsible position than that of Malcolm, towards Napoleon, abstained from visiting the Emperor when he was about to leave permanently for England. Malcolm's absence was to be for only two months. There was no adequate reason for his making an unnecessary visit, in direct opposition to the wish of the Governor. It should have been his first and chief care to support the Governor's authority, whereas he was setting the example of defiance, and casting discredit upon Sir Hudson by parading his own good relations with Napoleon. Sir Pulteney's behaviour towards Sir Hudson was so incorrect, that people concluded that he desired to obtain the Governor's appointment—as, in fact, was the case. That such a rumour should have been current on the island is conclusive evidence of his improper attitude.

Malcolm was followed to the Cape by the deported party from Longwood, Piontkowski and the three domestics. Sir Hudson Lowe wrote to Lord Charles Somerset, the Governor at the Cape, proposing that they should be kept there for some time before being allowed to return to England. But immediately on their arrival at the Cape Sir Pulteney Malcolm, disregarding Lowe's wishes, made arrangements for their departure as soon as possible. Lowe was justified in regarding this as officious interference. He learned afterwards that the Admiral had also, when at the Cape, criticized and blamed him, in conversation with the officers at that station ¹

Soon after his return to St. Helena a disagreement arose
¹ B M, 20130, p. 101

her pet, and she lavished on me all the means in her power I was always well dressed, and had every indulgence that a child could with for

I was about nine years old, I think, when my kind protectress died of fever while Ismail was on one of his excursions, and I was taken by a neighbour to his house until he returned. I shall never forget his despair when he found his home desolate Young as I was, I could do but little to console him but he used to go and deck his wife s tomb with flowers every Friday and bitter were his lamentations over her grave.

Poor Minam | for that was her name-it was well for you that you died had you lived, what would now have been your condition! As the wife of a noted Thug your reputation would have been blasted and you would have become an outcast!

Sahib! she never knew what Ismail was. He was to her a man in prosperous arcumstances. She had everything she could desire and not a want remained unsatisfied and so deeply and well laid were his plans, that she would never have known, till the day of his capture, that she was the wife of a professed murderer!

I pass over the next four or five years of my life, as I can remember no modent in them worth relating Ismail, soon after the death of his wife, removed from the village where he had hitherto resided and took up his abode in the town of Murnae, which was then in Sundia s possession, and I was put to school with an old man, who taught me to read and write Person.

As I grew older I observed that Ismail used very frequently to have a number of men at his house by night, and I was maturally curious to know who they were and why they assembled. One evening that I know they were expected, I fergued to he down and go to sleep as usual but when they had all come I got up cautiously and hid myself behind a purdah or screen at the farther end of the room where they sat. After they had eaten what was pre pared for them, they all drow together and began conversing in a language I only partially understood and I thought this strange as I knew Hindoostance and the common dalect myself having picked up the latter by associating with the boys of the town. By and by Ismail went to a closet very near where I lay and his movements alarmed me greatly as I was fearful of being discovered he took from it a box, which he placed in the circle and opened it Rich as I had always thought him I had no idea of the wealth it contained there were quantities of gold and silver ornaments of all kinds, with strings of pearls and other valuables they seemed parcelled out into lots, as equally as possible and to each man he gavo one reserving a considerable share for himself
At last they began to speak in Hindoostanee a language I under stood One of them, an elderly man with a venerable beard, said to Ismail,

"What do you intend doing with Ameer? He is almost a young man, and if he is to be one of us, it is high time he should be taught what to do It is very dangerous to have him about the house, he might discover something, and be off before you knew anything of the matter"

"Oh, I have no fear of him," said Ismail, "he is too fond of me, besides, he has no other protector in the world but myself He was the son of " * * * * * "

And here the conversation was carried on by Ismail again in the language I did not understand

"It does not matter," said another man, whose name was Hoosein, and whom I knew very well, as he was employed by Ismail, to all appearance, as an agent for selling his cloth, "the lad is a smart active fellow, and a great deal too knowing for you to let him go about everywhere with so little restraint, he will find out all one of these days, if he is not fairly brought among us. Besides, he is old enough to be of use in many ways, and he ought to be instructed in our profession, if he be ever to learn, depend upon it, the sooner he eats the goor, the more relish he will have for it I brought up a lad myself, and when once he got his hand in, he was a perfect tiger at the work, and became so expert, that our oldest hands could hardly compete with him "

"Well," said Ismail, "I believe you are right, and I foretell great doings from this boy He is brave and stout beyond his years, and there are but few who can excel him in his quarut, which I have taught him ever since he was a child, but he is of so kind and gentle a disposition, that I do not know how to break the matter to him I almost fear he will never consent"

"Pooh!" said a third man, whom I had never seen before, "these very kind-hearted boys are the best we could have, they are the more easily led and won over, and one has more dependence upon them Put the matter in the proper light, talk to him of the glory of the business, and of our surety of heaven Describe to him all about the hours which our blessed prophet,—may his name be honoured! has promised us, and tell him too of the heaven of India, all of which you know we are sure of, the one by our faith as Moslims, and the other by our profession He will soon be won over, I am certain"

"I think," said Ismail, "you have hit on the right way, the lad goes to the old foolish moolla of the mosque whenever he can get a moment's lessure, who has so filled his head with stories about paradise, which he reads to him out of the blessed Koran, that he is at times half beside himself, and this is the only point on which he is assailable. I will talk him over and have no doubt he will soon belong to us.

The sooner he better said Hoosein, laughing "I like to see the first attempt of a beginner he always looks so simply innocent when the cloth is put into his hand, and he is told-

Silence! oned the old man. Suppose he were now to hear you (and you were going on with a relation of the whole matter) he might take a different view of the subject, and be off, as I said, before.

No there is no fear of that, said Ismail "but are you not tured with your march? remember we have far to travel tomorrow and, by Alla ! it is for some good too "

Ay! said all, getting up let us go to sloep it is too hot to rest here we shall be cooler in the open air and they left the room. You may believe, suhib, that my currosity was at the highest pitch. Who was Ismail? who were the rest? what was it I was to know or to be taught? my mind was in a whirl. I could not sleep that night I never closed my eyes I seemed to be in a force so intense was my curiosity and I may say my desire to know everything and to become a partner with Ismail in whatever he was. Hitherto I had been looked upon, and treated as a child now that was to be cast aside I was, like a snake, to throw off my old skin, and to appear in a new and brighter form Who could my parents be? I had gathered enough from the conversation, that Ismail was not my father and I taxed my memory to recollect such portions of my previous existence as might throw some light on the subject but all was dark within me I could remember nothing but poor Miriam, my mother as I had used to call her beyond this, though hard did I endeavour I could recollect nothing It was only in after times, as I have told you and during a long impresonment of twelve years, that my memory aided me

The old moolla of the mosque had hitherto appeared in my eyes the most learned of men he had stored my mind with passages from the Koran, which had made me an enthusiast. When he spoke to me of the glories of heaven; of the thousands of hours who would be at the command of every true believer described their beautiful forms, their eyes like sapphires their teeth of pearls their lips like rubies, and their breath like the perfume of must; the palaces of lewels, and the fountain of immortality and never-ending youth: -I believed that I was destined to enjoy all They had inflamed my imagination, and as I used to repeat them to Ismail, he too anpeared as delighted as I was, and used to regret that he had never studied the blessed book, that he might enjoy its beautiful de-scriptions yet the moolla was called a fool by Hoosein, and I understood from him that theirs was a higher calling their ruwards more splended than even those of the Yoshim! What could they be? I burned to know! and resolved, that if Ismail did not break

the matter to me, I would, of my own accord, lead him to the subject I said, I think, that my eyes never closed that night, when I rose in the morning, I found that Ismail and the others were gone He did not return for some days. This was nothing uncommon, certainly, but his proceedings had become mysterious to me for a long time before, and I could not help connecting his frequent and long absences with his true profession, whatever that might be He could not be only a cloth merchant, there was nothing in that plodding business to hold out to him or to me the splendid hopes which Hoosein and the rest evidently entertained, and with which I had no doubt he was familiar It must be something beyond this, which I could not compass, and to see whether I could get any clue to it, I betook myself to the old moolla

Azeezoolla, for that was his name, received me with his usual kindness, but remarked that I must be ill, as my face, he said, was full of anxiety, and as though I was suffering from fever I said I had had ague, but that I was better, and that it would soon pass from me I took my usual lessons in the forms, positions, and words of a Mahometan's daily prayers, and when these were ended, I begged him to open the Koran, and explain again to me my favourite passages The old man put on his spectacles, and rocking himself to and fio, read to me passage by passage of the book in Arabic, explaining the meaning to me as he read They were the same I had heard often before, and when he had finished, I asked him whether there were not other portions of the book which he had concealed from me

"No, my son," said he, "I have concealed from you nothing My knowledge of this blessed book is indeed very limited, but oh, that you could have seen and heard the commentaries which my revered preceptor, peace be to his memory had written upon it in them, so deep was his knowledge, that every sentence of some chapters, in which the true meaning is purposely hidden from the uninspired, formed a separate treatise, nay, in some passages every word, and indeed every letter, was commented upon. But he is gone, and is now enjoying the delights of the paradise I have revealed to you. All I can do is to read to you, and I will do it again and again. and again, till you have by heart the parts which most interest you, and which are the cream of the book "

"But," said I, "have you never heard of anything beyond what you have told me, in all your long experience? You are surely concealing something from me, which you fear to tell me on account of my youth"

"No, indeed," said the old man, "it is true that some professors of our religion, Sofees and others, whose creeds are accursed, have from time to time promulgated heterodex doctrines, which are plausible enough, and entrap the unwary but they lead to ultimate perdition, and I think you are now too wall grounded in your belief to be led away by them, young as you are.

"Thanks to your kindness, I am said I "and it was only to try whether I had more to learn, that I have now questioned you as I have for I saw he eather could not or would not reveal to me But tell me, father what profession ought I to adopt to carry your wise instructions into the best effect?

Become a moolla, and he "you will have to undergo much pounful study but in the course of time this obstacle will be over come and depend upon it, there is no station or profession so acceptable to God as that of one of his ministers. I will instruct you in the rudiments of Arabic, and your father when he sees your mind bent upon it, will not oppose you may he will send you to Dehlie to complete the education I shall have begun."

Well, I will think of it, said I But it was very far from my intention to become a moolla. I could not disguise from myself that Assessoella was misurably poor and was dependent upon con tributions he with difficulty collected for his maintenance Besides. Ismail was not a moolle, nor Hoosens, nor any of their set and I must become one of them, be they what they might, before my mind could be at rest. I went no more to him. I had got from him his little store of knowledge and if once I had broken the subject of my future life to him I should only be subjected to continual argu ments in support of his view of what would tend to my benefit and as I did not like them, I thought it better to stay away

Would to God I had become a moolla! Anything would be proferable to my state at present, which must now for over remain as at is. It is my fate however and I ought not to murmur at the decrees of Providence. If it had not been written, would my father have been murdered? If it had not been written, should I have over become a Thug? Assuredly not! Who can oppose Fate? who can avert its decrees? Yet would you not, sahib, release me and provide for me if after many years you found me faithful?

Never ! said I. You Things are too dangerous ever to be let loose again upon the world; your fingers would itch to strangle the first man you met, and before long we should hear of Ameer Ali Jemadar with a gang of forty or fifty fellows, who would give us infinite trouble to catch. Would it not be so?

I believe you are right said Ameer Alt, laughing In spite of my remorae at times, the opportunities would be too tempting for me to lot them pass And you know I have caten the goor and cannot change. I am better as I am, for if you caught me again you would lung me

I have not the least doubt we should, Ameer Alı But go on with your story, you will forget what your train of thought was, if you

digress in this manner He resumed

Nearly a month elapsed, and after this weary time to me, Ismail neturned, accompanied by Hoosein My father, for so I shall call him, remarked a change in my appearance, which I accounted for as I had done to the moolla, and he seemed satisfied But was I? Oh, no! I was consumed by my burning curiosity to know all that was hidden from me I could not sleep at nights, and became sullen, and oppressed with thoughts which led me to no conclusions At one time I had formed the determination to leave my father, and seek my fortune, and had actually packed up a few of my clothes, and a little money I had, and resolved to leave the town in the night, httle caring where my fate should lead me, but when the time came, the sense of my desolation so pressed upon me, that I abandoned the idea, and remained I trusted to time for clearing up the mystery that hung over me, but at the same time determined that I would be more watchful over my father and his companions than I had ever been before And many were the resolutions I made to speak to him on the subject nearest my heart, yet even when opportunities occurred, I could not bring myself to the task It was not that I was timid—naturally I was brave—it was a mysterious consciousness that I should hear something (whenever I should hear it) that was strange, nay, fearful, that deterred me, but why this feeling should have so possessed me I cannot now tell, yet so it was

One evening, Ismail sent for me to his sleeping-room. I had been rarely admitted to it, and my heart beat fearfully, with a presentiment that I was upon the crisis of my fate. Ismail seemed to me to be disturbed, he bade me sit down, and we sat silently for some time gazing on one another, there was only one small oil light burning in a recess of the wall, which made the apartment very gloomy, and this trifling circumstance contributed still more to increase the morbid feeling within me. I believe I almost gasped for breath, I could bear it no longer. I arose, threw myself at his feet, and burst into a passionate fit of weeping

"Why, Ameer, my child, my son," said he kindly and caressingly, "what is this? what has troubled you? has some fair one bewitched you? have you got into any difficulty while I have been away? Tell me, my boy, you know you have no one in the world so fond of you as your father, and, alas! you have now no mother"

When my feelings gave me power of utterance, fearfully I repeated to him what I had heard from him and the rest, on the memorable night I have before related When I had finished, I rose up, and with a throbbing heart said, "I have erred, my father, my curiosity, a boy s curronty overcame me but since then my feelings have changed, why I know not I am no longer a boy for I feel that I can do anything and only implore you to put me to the proof and I folded my hands on my breast, and stood silently. He was evidently much moved duak as it was, I could see his face working with emotions, and under expressions new to me.

At last he broke the silence which had become to me insupport able. "My son," he said, you know more than I had ever in tended you should. I have now no alternative but to make you such as I am myself, and my knowledge of your character leads me to anticipate much from you.

"Trust me, only trust me! I personntely exclaimed. "You shall never have cause to regret it !

I believe yon, said he "and now attend well to what I shall say for upon it your future existence depends. There can be no heatation no falling back on the world, when once you know all You will have to undergo a trial which will stretch your courage to its utmost. Will you go through with it? dare you to brave it?" I dare, oried I for I was reakloss.

He seemed to be absorbed in thought for a few moments, and then and,—

Not to-night, but I swear to you that in three days at the farthest, I will conceal nothing from you.

I was disappointed, yet full of hope, and he dismissed me to my repose.

Innail performed his promise but I can hardly describe to you calib, the effect it than had on my mind. Shall I endeavour to relate what his tale was? I only hesitate as it began by his giving me a sketch of his life which I fear would lead me from my own story; yet it would interest you greatly

I doubt not that it would, Amoer Ali, said I; and when you have finished your own adventures you can return to it.

Fon are right, sahib, I will omit it at present, all except his concluding words which with his tale of wrong endured and revenged made me hate the world, and cleare to Thuggee as the only profession and brotherhood in which I could hope to find good faith exist ing. They were these and they have over been indelibly impressed

on my memory

Thus far my son, have I related some events of my life for your matraction, and I have hitle more to said. I need hardly now mention that I am a Thug a member of that glorious profession which has been transmitted from the remotest periods to the few selected by Alla for his uncerning purposes. In it, the Hindoo and the Moslim both unite as brothers; among them had faith is never known a sure proof that our calling is blessed and sanctioned by the Divine authority For where on this earth, my son, will you find true faith to exist, except amongst us? I see none in all my dealings with the world, in it, each man is incessantly striving to outwit and deceive his neighbour and I turn from its heartlessness to our truth, which it is refreshing to my soul to contemplate From the lowest to the highest among us, all are animated with the same zeal Go where we will, we find the same brotherhood, and though differing perhaps, in many parts, in customs and points of practice, yet their hearts are the same, and all pursue the great aim and end of Thuggee with the same spirit Go where we will, we find homes open to us, and a welcome greeting among tribes of whose language even we of Hindostan are ignorant, yet their signs of recognition are the same as ours, and you need but to be thrown among them as I have been, to experience the truth of my assertions Could this be without the aid of God? So clashing are human interests, and so depraved is the social state of our country, that I own no such feeling could exist without the Divine will Some repugnance you will feel at the practice of the profession at first, but it is soon overcome, for the rewards held out are too glorious to allow us to dwell for a moment on the means we use to attain them Fate,—the decree of the blessed Alla and who can withstand it? If he leads us into the undertaking, he gives us firm and brave hearts, a determination which no opposition can overcome, and a perseverance which never yet failed to accomplish its object. Such, my son, is what I would make you. You will enter on your calling at once in a high grade, under my auspices— grade which others spend years of exertion to attain, you will never know want, for all my wealth shall be shared with you Be firm, be courageous, be subtle, be faithful, more you need not These are the highest qualifications of a Thug, and those which ensure honour and respect among our fraternity, and lead to certain success and high rank As for me, I look but to see you at the head of a band of your own to retire, and in quiet pass the remainder of the years allotted to me, content with hearing the praise which will be bestowed upon Ameer Ali, the daring and enterprising son of Ismail! till then I shall be your guardian and instructor"

CHAPTER III

Falstaff—He's no swaggerer, hostess, a tame cheater he, you may stroke him as gently as a puppy greyhound. He will not swagger with a Barbary hen if her feathers turn back in any show of resistance.

2nd Part of King Henry IV, Act 11, Scene 4.

"My father," said I, "you need say no more, I am yours, do as you will with me Long ere I heard this history from you, I had over-a boys currenty overcame me but since then my feelings have changed, why I know not I am no longer a boy for I feel that I can do anything and only implore you to put me to the proof; and I folded my hands on my breast, and stood silently. He was evidently much moved; dusk as it was, I could see his face working with emotions, and under expressions new to me

At last he broke the alence which had become to me insupport able My son," he said, you know more than I had over in tended you should. I have now no alternative but to make you such as I am myself and my knowledge of your character leads mo to anticipate much from you.

Trust me only trust me "I passionately orclaimed. "You shall never have cause to regret it!"

"I believe you," said he "and now attend well to what I shall ear for upon it your future existence depends. There can be no hesitation no falling back on the world, when once you know all You will have to undergo a trial which will stretch your courage to its utmost. Will you go through with it? dare you to brave it?"

I dare " cried I for I was reckless. He seemed to be absorbed in thought for a few moments, and then raid.— Not to-night, but I swear to you that in three days at the farthest I will conceal nothing from you

I was disappointed yet full of hope and he dismissed me to my

тего е

Ismail performed his promise but I can hardly describe to you rahib the effect it then hal on my mind. Shall I endeavour to relate what his tale was. I only besitate as it began by his giving me a sketch of his life which I fear would lend me from my own a orr; yet it would interest you greatly

I doubt not that it would, Ameer Mi, said I; and when you have fine hed your own adventures you can return to it.

You are right, salth, I will omit it at present all except his con clu ling words; which, with his tale of wrong endured and revenged made me bate the world, and cl are to Thuggre as the only profes eion and brotherhood in which I could hope to find good faith exist in. They were there and they have over been indelibly impressed on my m more

Thus far my s n, have I related some events of my life for your in tru : n. and I las hittl more to add. I need hardly now rection that I are a Thore a member of that glorious profession will blas I a transmitted from the remotest periods to the few I cted by Alla f r his uncrring purpos . In it, the Hindoo and the Meel mil at next as brithers amone them hal faith is never Le un a sure proof the our calling is ble ed and senctioned by heard a conversation between Hoosein, yourself, and some others, regarding me, which has caused me great unhappiness; for I feared I was not thought worthy of your confidence, and it weighed heavily upon my mind. That was in fact the cause of the sorrow and heaviness you have remarked and I longed for an opportunity to throw open my heart to you, and to implore of you to receive me among you. I am no longer a child, and your lustery has opened to me new feelings which are at present too vague for me to describe but I long to win fame as you have done, and long to become a member of the profession in which you describe true faith and brotherhood alone to exist. As yet I have seen nothing of the falso world, and assured ly what you have said makes me still less inclined to follow any call ine which would lead me to connection with it. Heartless and deprayed I have heard it to be from others bould yourself, and I feel as though I was chosen by Alla to win renown it can only be cained by ending in your footsteps, and behold me ready to follow you whithersoever you will lead me. I have no friend but yourself, no acquaintance even have I ever formed among the youths of the village for when I saw them following what their fathers had done and what appeared to me low and pitiful pursuits, my spirit rose against them, and I have cast them off. My only friend is the old moolla, who would fain persuade me to become one like himself and spend my days reading the Koran but there is nothing stirring in his profession, though it is a holy one, and it consequently holds out no inducement to me or any hope of gratifying the thirst for active employment which is communing me. I have wished to become a soldier and to enter one of the hands in the service of Semdin to fight against the unbelieving Feringhees but this too has possed away and now I desire nothing but to become a Thug and follow you my father through the world. I will not disappoint you; my thirst for fame is too ardent for anything but death to quench it.

"May God keep it far from you, said Jamail with feeling "You are the only solace to a life which has now no enjoyment but what is produced by the development of your thoughts and actions. I know my son, you will not desproint me. You see the state of presperty I am blessed with, but you little know the power I have my authority is owned by every Thay in this part of Hindostan and a work a notice would see a band of a thousand men ready to obey any order I should give them. This will be proved to you in a f w dive at the festival of the Dusera. We shall all assemble, at len i as many as will be requisite for the opening operations of the year which will be undertaken on a scale of unusual greatness for we have determined to take advantage of the confusion at present pre-timed to the work and a stirring season, and the men are in patient for employment, after a long period of mactivity. I will take you to Sheopoor, which we have decided on as our place of meeting, as the remindar is friendly to us and assists us in many ways. I will introduce you to my associates, and you will be initiated as a Thug in the usual manner."

Thus, salub our conversation ended, the night had passed in its relation, and I went to rest a different being from what I had been for many days before I lose, and found all my former energy and spirit had returned to me; and whereas a few days before I went about like a love-sick maiden, I now held up my head, threw out my chest, and felt a man It was true I was still a boy, I was only eighteen years old, but I did not suffer my thoughts to dwell upon this, a few years, thought I, and, Inshalla! I shall be somebody To prove to you, salub the excitement that possessed me, I shall relate to you the following circumstance. I might have joined in the action before, but never should have dreamed of doing the deed of daring I then did, in the piesence too of men who were soldiers by profession, but who hung back at the moment of danger

It happened, a day or two after the conversation with my father which I have related, that a tigiess with a cub came into a small tract of jungle which lay near our village, the first day she was seen she killed a shepherd, the second day another man who had gone to look for his body, and the third she gilevously wounded the patail of the village, a man who was held in universal estimation, and he died during the night A general meeting of the villagers was held at the place set apart for deliberations, and it was determined that all the active men should proceed in a body and attack the beast in her lair The next morning we all assembled before daybreak There was one man, a huge large-whiskered and bearded pathan, who volunteered to be our leader, he was literally hardly able to move for the weapons he had about him Two swords were in his belt, which also contained an assortment of daggers of various sizes and shapes, a long straight two-edged sword hung over his left shoulder, the point of which nearly touched the ground, he had also a shield across his back, and in his right hand a matchlock with the match lighted He addressed my father as we came up

"Salaam aleikoom! Ismail Sahib," said he, "is a quiet person like you coming out with us, and the Sahib Zadah too?"

"Yes, khan," replied my father, "it is incumbent on all good men to do their utmost in a case of need like this, who knows, if the brute is not killed, but that some one else may become food

"Inshalla!" said the khan, twisting up his moustachies and surveying himself, "we have determined that the beast dies to-day.

Many a tiger has fallen from a shot from my good gun and what is this brate that it should escape? May its sister be defiled the only fear is, that it will not stand to allow us to prove that we are men, and not dogs before it."

As to that, said my father "we must take our chance; but may khan, how will you move with all those weapons about you?

Why you could not run away were she to rush out."

Bun away! cried the khan. "Are our beards to be defiled by a brute? What are you thinking on this morning to suppose that Dildar Khan ever turned from anything in his life? Only let it come out, I say and you will see what use the weapons will be! Trust to me single-handed to finish it. First I shall shoot it with my matchlock it will be wounded them I shall advance on it thus, said he, drawing the long sword and flourishing it, at the same time twirling round and round, and lenging in every possible direction.

There! said he quite out of breath, there! would not that have finished it? Why I am a perfect Roceton in matters of this kind and killing a tiger is only child's play to Dildar Khan! why I could eat one, tail and all. But come along and whon the play begins, let no ome come in Dildar Khans way "said he to the assembled group, "for Inshalls! I mean to show you poor ignorant."

people how a tiger can be killed by a single man.

"I know the khan to be as arrant a coward as ever breathed," said my father to me; "but come, let us see what he will do, for I emfess I am anxious to behold him capering before the tigress."

By Alla! said I, if he does perform such antics, the brute will dine on him to a certainty"

"That is no concern of ours, said my father; "it is a matter of dostmy but I would venture a great deal, he never goes within an arrow's flight of her

We all set out headed by Dildar Khan, who still flourished his long sword, holding his matchlock in his left hand, now and thus smoothing up his inonisticuous, which grow or had been trained to stick upwards from his hips, and reached nearly to his eyes. We soon reached the jungle, and on entering it, I thought the khan showed signs of fear

The beast can be but a panther after all," and he, "and it is hardly worth the while of Dildar Khan to put himself to trouble. See, boys," continued he to some of us, "I will want here; if it should really turn out to be a tuger you can let me know and I will come and kill at.

Against this, however we all protested, and declared that all would go wrong without him; and after some demar he again proceeded.

"I told you," said my father, "how it would be, but let us see how he will end the affair"

We went on till some bones and torn clothes, and the head of one of the unfortunate men who had been killed, lying near a bush, proved very plainly that the animal was not far off, and at these the khan showed fresh signs of fear

"They say it is a purrut bagh," said he, "a beast into whom the unsainted soul of that mad fakeer, that son of the Shitan, Shah Yacoob, has entered, and that it is proof against shot. Why should we risk our lives in contention with the devil?"

"Nay, khan," said a young daie-devil lad, the scamp of the village, "you are joking Who ever heard of a purrut bagh that was a female "Besides, we will burn the beards of fifty Shah Yacoobs"

"Peace!" cried the khan, "be not irreverent. Do we not all know that purrut baghs can be created? Mashalla! did I not see one near Asseergurh, which a fakeer had made, and turned loose on the country, because they would not supply him with a virgin from every village?"

"What was it like?" cried a dozen of us, and for a moment the real tigress was forgotten

"Like!" said the khan, rubbing up his moustachios with one hand, and pressing down his waistband with the other, "like! why it had a head twice the size of any other tiger, and teeth each a cubit long, and eyes red as coals, which looked like torches at night, and it had no tail, and——!"

But here he was stopped short, and our laughter too, by a loud roar from a short distance, and a moment afterwards, the tigress and a half-grown cub, rushed past us with their tails in the air

"Well, khan," said the lad before mentioned, "that is no puriut bagh at any rate. Did you not see the tail of the big one, how she shook it at you?"

"I represent," said he, "that, tail or no tail, it holds the accursed soul of that wretch Yacoob, may his grave be defiled! and I will have nothing to do with it, it is useless to try to kill the Shitan, if he choose, you know, he could blow us all into hell with a breath"

"Namurd | namurd | coward | coward | " cried some of us, " you were brave in the village, how are you now?"

"Who calls me namurd?" roared the khan, "follow me, and see if I am one or not," and he rushed forward, but not in the direction the tigress had gone.

"That is not the way," cried some, and at last he tuined

"This is child's play," said my father, "come, if we are to do anything, we had better set about it in good earnest."

And we went on in the direction the beast had taken

It led to an open glade, at one ade of which there was a large rook, with some very thick bushes upon it.

"She is there, depend upon it," said an old hunter "I nover saw a more likely place in my hie."

We were all about thirty steps from the rock and bushes, and Dildar Khan did not at all relish his proximity to them.

I beg to represent, said he in a low voice to us all, "that having killed so many of these brutes, I know best how to manage them, and as I am the best armed of the party I shall take up my position near yonder bush, by which runs the pathway she will take to it when she is driven out, and then you will see the reception she will meet with from Dildar Khan. Inshalla I shall present the point of my sword to her and she will run on it, then I shall flush her with one blow of my teghs."

We all looked in the direction he pointed, and sure enough there was a bush about two hundred paces off, on the pathway to the village

"Not that one surely" said my father "why man, you will never see the beast from thence."

"Trust me," said the khan, and off he went.

"I told you how it would be, continued my father "directly he sees the animal, he will be off down the road as fast as he can. But come," said he to the men, "ance the khan thinks he will be of more use down yonder I will ked you on, and we will see whether this eater of men cannot be got out.

We were immediately divided into three parties, one to go on either ade of the bushes, the other by a circuit to got behind the rock and if possible upon it, in order to shoot her from above if she was to be seen if not, at any rate to dislodge her by throwing stones. The arrangements were quickly completed, and though we were all within only a few yards of the bushes, there was no sign of the tigress. She expressed no displeasure at our near approach or preparations, as she had been districted before and of course could not easily be driven out of her place of refuge. I was with one of the parties on the side, and had no arms but a swortl and a light shield; indeed, I had gone more as a spectator than anglit else. We waited a few minutes, and one of the party who had been sent round, appeared on the top of the rock; he was soon followed by three others.

"Are you all rendy? cried one of them "I shall heave down this stone."

Bismillah! Away with it!" cried my father

Three of them applied their strength to it, and at last it rolled over the face of the rock, and thundering down, split into a thousand fingments. There was a moment of intense anxiety and suspense but no tigress followed. "Try whether you cannot see her," cried my father, "if you do, fire, we are all prepared "

The men looked down in every direction, but said nothing last one of them was observed to be pointing to a particular spot, as though he showed the others something

"By Alla!" said my father, "he sees her. Look out, she will rush forth before you are thinking of her"

Every man blew his match, and planted his feet firmly At last one of the men on the rock raised his matchlock and fired, it was answered by a tremendous roor which tent the skies, and out rushed the cub, apparently badly wounded, for before he had come a few yards he lay down and roared horribly, he was fully half-grown, and made a dreadful noise One of the men of our party fired at him, and he did not move after the shot struck him

"Now we shall have tough work," said my father, "she will be savage and infuriated beyond description, it is hardly safe to be here, but mind your aim, my lads, she will never reach us, I never yet missed mine, but the shot may not be fatal, so look out for vourselves "

Again my father called to the men on the lock to heave over another fragment There was one very large one just on the brink After a good many pushes it gave way, and as the former had done, shivered into atoms with a great noise. It was successful, the tigress rushed out towards our side, and stood for a moment had never seen a tiger before, and could not help admiring her noble appearance There she stood, her tail erect, the end of it only waving from side to side, glaring on us with her fearfully bright eyes, apparently irresolute as to what she would do, and not noticing the body of the cub, which was close to her We were all as silent as death, each man with his matchlock to his shoulder My father fired, and then the others, I could see the whole distinctly, for I had no gun She staggered when my father fired, he had evidently hit her, but the rest had missed, and she charged with another tremendous roar, right at our party, but the shout we set up and the waving of our weapons turned her, and she set off at a low canter towards the bush where Dildar Khan had stationed himself

"Ya Alla!" cried my father, "coward as he is, he will be killed! she will spare nothing now! what can be done?"

By this time the other party caught a glimpse of her, and every matchlock was discharged, she must have been hit again for she stopped, turned round, growled, and showed her teeth, but again sprang forward I imagine Dildar Khan had no idea that she was approaching him, as he had hidden himself behind the bush and could have seen nothing of what had passed "He may escape," said my father, it is possible, yet scarcely, what can be done?" No one made a reply but an instant afterwards I had drawn my sword, and set off at full speed after the enraged brute.

'Ameer Ali, my son! come back, come back instantly! Ya Alla, he too will perish! cried my father in an agony of apprehension.

But I heeded not, and who of that company had my fleet foot ? yet some of them followed me. As I ran, I saw the togress was week, and was badly wounded, but still she ran fast. I saw her approach the bush, and the miserable man Dildar Khan rush from behind it, and stand in her very path, with his arms stretched out, apparently paralysed with fear Another instant she had grouched as she ran, and sprang upon him he was under her and she flercely tearing his body It did not stop me; I heard the cries of those behind me to turn off but I did not. I do not think I gave the danger a thought if I did, the excitement overpowered it. Another bound had brought me close to the brute whose head was down gnawing the body beneath her I made but one stroke at her which, preuse be to God! was successful the blade buried itself deep in the back of her neck, and she seemed to me to drop dead. I bounded off to one side, and watched for a moment. She was indeed dead, and lay her limbs only quivering upon the body of the man beneath her Unfortunate coward! wounded as she was, she would not have turned after him, had he even had the presence of mind to avoid her but he had thought to fly and the night of the animal had paralysed his faculties. Though all passed in a moment, mothinks now sahib, I see him, his eyes starting from his head, and his arms raised and expanded, as though wooing the animal statal ombrace. Coward | had he remained behind the bush, he was safe, and might have shot her as she passed but there he lay a fearful speciacle has face all butten and lacerated, and the blood pouring from wounds in his stomach! He was quite dead. came up immediately he embraced me, and burst into tears.

"How could you risk your life, my boy? said he; "how could you be so rably renturous of your life for so poor a wretch as he? pounting to the body did I not tell you he was a coward? let I am proud of you now my son, and you have shamed as all. See!" continued he to the whole assembly "our faces are blackened this day by a boy who among you could have planted so well-aimed and deep a cut? See the blade has buried itself, and is half through the bone. Mashalla! it is a brave boy! and again my father hugged me to his breest.

"I beg to represent" said old Beneo Singh, my instructor in my athletic exercises, that some of the praise is due to me for my good teaching I always told you, Ismail Sahib that the Sahib Zadah would be worthy of his father; may his riches increase and may he live a thousand years! I ex. sir" said he to me often have I taught you that cut You see, you were running along, and cut over your left hand, it is few that can do that with any certainty, but you have caught the knack, and you want but a little practice to become as good a swordsman as myself Perhaps too," continued he to me laughing, "the heart of your teacher may be made glad to-day, under such an auspicious commencement, the Sahib Zadah will remember the old rappoot"

"That reminds me," said my father, "that I owe you a present, come to me this afternoon Inshalla! we know how to be grateful for kindness, and it shall have its iewaid." And he ieceived

when he came a handsome gift

I must say, however, that under his tuition I had become highly expert at all manly exercises, I could use a gun, throw a spear, wrestle, knew the exact use of every description of sword, straight or crooked, single or double-edged, long or short, and in all these exercises there was not a lad of the village, and I may say of the country round, who could in any way compete with me

That night my father said to me, "Ameer, my son, to-morrow you accompany me to Sheopoor I need not tell you how to-day's exploit will raise you in the eyes of your future companions. Already have I despatched intelligence of our proposed departure to-morrow, and some account of to-day's affair, enough only to make them curious to see the hero of it, and I have mentioned no particulars, which will make them the more anxious to hear them from me. You have litherto been looked on with some suspicion by many members of my band, and were it not for my rank of jemadar, I should have been obliged to explain my intentions in regard to you long ago to them I look therefore upon this event as particularly fortunate, as, knowing you are to be publicly brought amongst them, they will receive you with greater warmth and respect, as having given so undemable a proof of your bravery, in the presence too of old soldiers, who have most of them seen many a tough fight"

"It was God's will," said I, "else what power had a boy like me to do such a thing?"

"You are now no child," replied my father, "you have this day, or I mistake you much, thrown off every lingering feeling of boyhood, the change has been sudden, but it has been complete, and it will last, or I mistake you much"

"You do not," I replied, "I am not what I was, to-day's is the first blood I have seen spilled, I feel that it will not be the last"

CHAPTER IV

1st Alenderer — How dost thou feel thyself now?
2nd Murderer,—Faith, some drops of conscience are yet within me.
Rickard III. Act i. Soens 4.

2nd Murderer -

I am one, my liege
Whom the vile blows and buffets of the world
Have so incensed, that I am reckless what I do to spite the world.—Macbeth, Act lik, Scene 1.

The day after my adventure with the tiger I left our village with my father We travelled on horseback, and on the fourth morning afterwards reached Sheopoor the town from which the grand ex pedition was to set out. It was here too that I was to be admitted into the band of Thuga, and I looked forward to my manageration with much impatience, and perhaps some dread, for I know not what ceremonies I had to go through. We put up in the house of Moodeen, where several other Thug leaders were also and after refreshing ourselves, my father bid me accompany him to the council which was to determine on the future operations. I was presented to the members, ten in number who were the jemadars of the different bands I could see, from the respect and considera tion with which my father was treated, that he was looked upon as the chief of the whole I was gratified by the reception I met with and my conduct in the affair with the tiger the whole circum stances of which were related by my father raised me at once to a high station in their respect.

As it still wanted two days of the festival of the Dasem, my in auguration was postponed to that day, for it is exteemed a particularly fortunate one by the Thugs, and indeed by all classes. On it, you are already aware, that all great undertakings are commenced by armies, and, in like manner by is Thugs; for the breaking up of the rains gives a hope that the adventure will not be impeded by them and the centinance of fine weather which follows it, allows the band to travel in comfort, and with better hope of booty from the chance of falling in with travellers, who also take advantage of the break in the weather to commence long journeys. Above all it is a day peculiarly sacred to Bhowance our patroness and goddess. Still, boing a Mossulman, I could not then see why such respect was paid to the festival of the Dasem, or indeed why it was kept at all; and I applied to my father for a solution of my doubts on the subject.

'It is necessary to your fully understanding this," said he "that I should give you an outline of our belief in the Divine origin of our profession, which is intimately connected with the faith of the Hindoos, and by whom we Moosulmans have been instructed in the art of Thuggee"

"This is wonderful indeed," said I, "how do you reconcile any connection between the faith of unbelievers and that of the blessed prophet?"

"I cannot pretend to solve the difficulty," said my father, "but as their religion is far more ancient than ours, and no doubt had a Divine origin, there are many points in it which one of the true faith may follow without offence, so that he does not join them in all their forms and professions Indeed, this is impossible, as no one can become a Hindoo, but, as I told you before, Thuggee is one of the means by which Alla works out his own ends, and as the profession of it has been handed down to us from ages, and becomes the fate of those who are called to follow it, there is no possibility of avoiding the profession though one desired to do so, and, as a direct consequence, no sin in associating with Hindoos in the practice of it, from whom it has had its origin. Do you understand me?"

"Perfectly," said I; "it was not to question its propriety that I asked the question, but only to know how it was that Hindoo festivals were acknowledged and kept by us Moosulmans" "

"The Dusera is the only one," said my father, "which is observed; and the reason of this is, that it is the fittest time of the year to commence our enterprises, and has been invariably kept sacred by all Hindoo Thugs But I must tell you of the origin of Thuggee, that you may judge for yourself how ancient it is, and how well the instructions then given by Divine command have been followed up In the beginning of the world, according to the Hindoos, there existed a creating and a destroying power, both emanations from the Supreme Being These were, as a matter of consequence, at constant enmity with each other, which still continues creative power, however, peopled the earth so fast, that the destroyer could not keep pace with him, nor was he allowed to do so, but was given permission to resort to every means he could devise to effect his objects Among others, his consort Devee, Bhowanee, or Kalee, for she is known under these names and many others, constructed an image, into which, on this occasion, she was empowered to infuse the breath of life No sooner was this effected, than she assembled a number of her votaries, whom she named She instructed them in the art of Thuggee, and to prove its efficacy, with her own hands destroyed before them the image She endowed she had made, in the manner which we now practise the Thugs with superior intelligence and cunning, in order that they might decoy human beings to destruction, and sent them abroad into the world, giving them, as the reward of their exertions, the plunder they might obtain from those they put to death, and bidding them be under no concern for the disposal of the bodies, as she would herself convey them from the earth. Ages passed on in this manner and she protected her votaries from human laws, and they were everywhere found to be faithful but corruptions crept in among them with the increased depravity of the world and at last, a gang more bold and curious than the rest, after destroying a traveller determined, instead of following the old custom of leaving the body unnoticed, to watch and see how it was disposed of They hid themselves, as they thought, secure from observation in the bushes by the side of the road, and wasted the arrival of the goddess. But what mortal can escape the eye of Drynity? She quickly espect them, and called them before her Terror-stricken by her splendid and terrific appearance, and in the utmost dread of her vengennee. they attempted to fly but she arrested their steps, and in an awful manner upbraided them for their want of faith.

You have seen me, said she, and looked upon a power which no mortal has ever yet beheld without instant destruction but this I spore you henceforward, however I shall no longer protect you as I have done The bodies of those whom you destroy will no longer be removed by me, and you must take your own measures for their concealment. It will not always be effectual, and will often lead to your detection by earthly powers, and in this will con sut your punishment. Your intelligence and cunning still romain to you. I will in future asset you by omens for your guidance but this my decree will be your curse to the latest period of the world.

"So saying she disappeared, and left them to the consequences of their own folly and presumption but her protection has never been withdrawn. It is true, the remains of those who fall by our hands are sometimes discovered, and instances have been known of that discovery having led to the approhension of Thugs, at least so I have heard but during my lifetime I have never known of one and it is my firm belief that such instances have been permitted on purpose to punish those who have in some way offended our protectress, by neglecting her sacrifices and omens. You therefore see how necessary it is to follow the rules which have guided our frater mity for ages, and which cannot be changed without incurring the displeasure of the Divine power nor is there anything in our creed to forbid it. We follow the blessed precepts of our prophet we say our Namas five times a day; we observe all the rules of our faith; we worship no idols; and if what we have done for ages, over one the invasion of India by our forefathers, was displeasing to the apostle, surely we should have had, long ere this, some manifestation of his displeasure. Our plans would have been frustrated our exertions rendered of no avail; we should have dragged on a miserable existence, and, long ere this, should have abandoned Thuggee, and our connection with its Hindoo professors" "I am convinced," said I, "for your relation is wonderful

"I am convinced," said I, "for your relation is wonderful Truly have you said that we are under the especial protection of Providence, and it would be sinful to question the propriety of any usages which have been transmitted from a period so remote, and followed without deviation. I will allow that I had thought this open connection with Kafirs as offensive, because I was led, from the representations of the old Moolla who was my instructor, to believe them sunk into the lowest depths of depravity and bad faith, but he must have been ignorant, or a bigoted old fool"

"I will say nothing more than this," said my father, "that you will be thrown much into the society of Hindoos, all of good caste, and you will find them as faithful and as worthy of your friendship as any Moosulman, such, at least, has been my experience of them ",

On the day of the Dusera the ceremony of my inauguration as a Thug commenced—I was bathed and dressed in new clothes which had never been bleached, and led by the hand by my father, who officiated as the gooroo, or spiritual director, and to whom seemed to be confided the entire direction of the ceremonies—I was brought into a room, where the leaders of the band I had before seen were assembled, sitting on a clean white cloth, which was spread in the centre of the apartment—My father then, advancing towards them, asked them whether they were content to receive me as a Thug and a brother, to which they all answered, "We are"

I was then conducted into the open air, accompanied by the whole number, when my father, raising his hands and eyes to the sky, cried in a loud voice, "O Bhowanee! mother of the world! whose votaries we are, receive this thy servant—vouchsafe to him thy protection—grant to us an omen which may assure us of thy consent!"

We waited for some time, and at last, from a tree over our heads, the loud twittering of the small tree-owl was heard

"Jey Bhowanee! Victory to Bhowanee!" cried the whole of the leaders, and my father embraced me, saying,-

"Be of good cheer, my son, the omen is most favourable We could hardly have expected such an one, thy acceptation is complete '

I was then reconducted to the apartment, and a pickaxe, that holy symbol of our profession, was placed in my right hand, upon a white handkerchief. I was desired to raise it as high as my breast, and an oath, a fearful oath, was then dictated to me, which I repeated, raising my left into the air, and invoking the goddess to whose service I was devoting myself. The same oath was re-pested by me on the blessed Koran after which a small piece of consecrated goor or coarse sugar was given me to eat, and my in auguration was complete. My father received the congratulations of the assembly on the fortunate issue of the ceremony and he then addressed me as follows—

"My son, thou hast taken upon thee the profession which is of all the most ancient and acceptable to the Divinity Thou hast sworn to be faithful, brave, and secret to pursue to destruction every human being whom chance, or thy ingeniity may throw into thy power with the exception of those who are forbidden by the laws of our profession, which are now to thee sacred. These are particular sects, over whom our power does not extend, and whose sacrifice is not acceptable to our Divine patroness; they are Dhobees, Bhats, Sikhs, Nanukshahees, Mudaree Fukeers, dancing men. muncians, Bhungees, Tailees, Lohars, Burraes, and maimed or leprous persons. With these exceptions, the whole human race is open to thy destruction, and thou must omit no possible means (but at all times dependent upon the omens by which we are guided) to compass their destruction. I have now finished; thou art become a Thug and what remains of thy profession will be shown to thee by our gooroo, who will, under the necessary ceremonies, instruct thee in its details.

It is enough, said I I am yours to death and I only pray that an opportunity may soon be afforded me to prove to you my devotion

Thus I became a Thug Had I commenced my career under other and ordinary circumstances.—I menn, had I not been introduced to my profession by one so powerful and well esteemed as my father then was.—I must have entered the lowest grade of all; and had I proved myself to be active, intelligent, and brave, I might have rusen in time to the highest. But this was spared me and though too young myself to become a leader I was in a rank above the rest, and was considered to be, and looked up to as, the person who was hereafter to fill my father s place, whenever it should suit him to writer from active employment.

The bunness which the Thug leaders and assembled to deliberate upon, was a plan of my father a for a large body under himself and two other leaders (one of whom was Hoosein) to take the high road to the Dakhun; to advance together as far as Nagpoor from whence my father was to proceed to Hyderabad; and the others separating one to go to Aurungabad, thence through Khandesh, by Boorhanpoor to Indore, and lack to Shopoor the other also to Aurungabad, but from thence to Poona; afterwards, if povible as far as Surat, and from thence homewards; but if the sexues should be too far advanced, they were to get to Boorhanpoor and home in which was the thibaco. What could have been more complete? such an omen had not been known for years, and promised the utmost success, and splendid booty. Loud and ferrent were the cries of praise to Bhowanes and each turning to his companion, con gratulated him on the prospect.

Seven long hours my father sat on that spot, during which time all was prepared for the journey At its expiration he arose, and we took the nearest road to Guneshpoor

At the stage where we stopped for the evening the thibaoo and pilhaoo were heard by Bhudrinath, who carried the nishan, the pickars, or as it was now called, having been consecrated, laurer and these renewed favourable comens produced an increased confidence in the expedition and its leaders. At the first streamlet we passed the next morning the band all sat down, and some goor and dall, which had been brought with us, was shared to all. Proceeding favourable omens were again seen, and all declared that we should speedily gain a rich booty

To me this was all strange and unaccountable but the implicit faith which every one seemed to place in the omens and the regularity with which the ceremonies were conducted, impressed me with a strong idea of their necessity though, to my shame I say it, as I acquired confidence in myself, I scarned them as foolish until misfortune, no doubt sent by Bhowanee, brought me to my senses.

and made me penitent.

In a few days we arrived at Guneahpoor and as yet we laid no adventure. On reaching the town, the sothaces or inveiglors, whose duty it is to entice travellers into the power of the Thigs, were sent into the town, while we remained under a mange-grove on the outside. They were absent most part of the day and when they returned they were engerly questioned for intelligence. The men who had been sent on this duty were two Hindoos, one by name Bhudrinath, whom I have mentioned before a Brahami and the other a man of inferior caste, by name Gopal but both were persons of the most bland and persuasive manners, and I was told that they rarely failed in their object. I was, among the rest, highly curious to hear their adventures in the town, and joaned my father on his taking his place in the assembly

Bindrinath told us, that he had gone through the whole of the banar without success, when he was attracted to a bunner a shop by a respectable old man, who was in high dispute with the bunner. He went up to him, and the old gentleman who was in a violent passion at some attempted exaction on the part of the merchant immediately accosted him, and begged him to be witness to the transaction, expressing at the same time his intention of laving the man brought before the Lotwal for his dishonesty

"The bunnea was very insolent and abusive," Bhudrinath went on to say, "and after some altercation, I contrived to settle the matter by dint of threats and persuasions The old man seemed highly pleased with me, and it naturally led, after we left the shop together, to a conversation about whither I was going, and who I I took advantage of this, to convince him that the town was no safe residence for a traveller, even for a night, and discovered that he was a Persian mootsuddee, or writer in the service of the

Rajah of Nagpoor, whither he was travelling with his son

"I of course alarmed him as much as I could with accounts of the thieves and Thugs on the road, and represented ourselves to be a company of travellers proceeding also to Nagpoor, on our way to the Dukhun, and associated together for mutual protection, and that we always rested outside the villages, as being the safest places when our number was so large He seemed so struck with the proposal I made to him to come out and join us, that I lost no time in pressing him to leave the town, and I have succeeded I have left Gopal, who joined us, to show him the way out, and assist him in packing up his things, and I have no doubt they will be here be-· fore sunset"

"Barık Alla!" exclaimed my father, "your face is bright in our eyes, Bhudrinath, and I have no doubt, lads," said he to the knot of listeners, "that the old khayet has abundance of money and jewels, and his plunder will help to see us on to Nagpoor, so if he does not come to us of his own freewill, we must even waylay him, and that too in the next march A short time will decide this, and if he does not come, some of you lughaees must be off to prepare the bhil or place of burial"

But we were saved the trouble, for the khayet came into our camp, as he had said, by sunset, and was met at the confines of it by my father and the two other jemadars The respectability of his appearance struck me forcibly, he was evidently a man of polished manners, and had seen courts and good society After arranging his travelling cart to sleep in, by placing some tent walls around it for protection to his women, he and his son, an intelligent handsome-looking youth, came to the spot where my father and the other leaders had spread their carpets, and many of the band being assembled, there ensued a general conversation

Who could have told, sahib, the intentions of those by whom he was surrounded? To me it was wonderful I knew he was to die that mght, for that had been determined when he arrived in our camp, and while he was arranging his sleeping-place I knew too that a spot had been fixed on for his grave, and that of those with him, for I had accompanied my father to it, and saw that it was begun, and yet there sat my father, and Hoosein, and Ghous Khan, and many others The pipe and the story passed round, and the old man was delighted at the company he had fallen into

"I thank you, said he to Bhudringth that you brought me out of that unsainted village truly here is some enjoyment in the somety of gentlemen who have seen the world. There I should have been in perpetual dread of robbers, and should not have slept a wink all night, while here I need not even to be watchful, since I am assured by the Khan Sahib pointing to my father "that I shall be well taken care of.

"Ay! growled out in a whisper an old Thug who sat behind me, 'he will be well taken care of, sure enough, I will see to that.

How? soud L He gave the sign by which I know him to be one of the bhuttotes or stranglers who had been selected.

"I have an old gradge against him, he continued, and the time

18 come when I can repay it.

Tell me how it happened," said I in a low tone, for the man s face were a savage expression as he said it.

"Not now " said he, how can I? I will tell you to-morrow night when we meet in the mujhs. That man is Brij Lall as great a rascal as ever lived, one who has committed more murders and more villances in his life than any of us Thugs. But his cup is full, his breath is already in his mouth one squeeze from me and it will go forth never to return."

And the boy said I, that fair fine boy -surely he will be spared."

To tell all he saw I suppose, said the man to deliver us up at the first place we come to! No, no, Men, we know better and so will you one of these days.

And he went round and scated himself just behind the old man, who turned about as though he were intruded upon.

Sit still, sat still, said my father; it is only a companion. In an open camp like this every one is privileged to hear the conver sation of the evening mujlis, and we usually find some one among us who can coliven the evening with a tale until it is time to rest for the night."

So the old Thug sat still. I could see him playing with his fatal weapon, the handkerchief, now pulling it through one hand and now through the other; and I gazed on the group till my brain reclod again with excitoment-with intenso agony I might call it with more truth There sat the old man beside lum his noble looking boy behind them their destroyers, only awaiting the signal; and the old man looked so unconscious of danger was so entirely put off his guard and led into conversation by the mild, bland man ners of my father, that what could he have suspected? That he was in the hands of those from whom he was to meet his death? Ah, no! And as I gazed and gazed, how I longed to scream out to him to fly! had I not known that my own death would have followed instantaneously, I had done it. Yet it would have been of no use. I turned away my eyes from them, but they returned to the same place involuntarily. Every movement of the men behind seemed the prelude to the fatal ending. At last I could bear the intensity of my feelings no longer. I got up, and was hurrying away, when my father followed me

"Where are you going?" said he "I insist on your staying here, this is your initiation, you must see it, and go through with the whole"

"I shall return directly," said I, "I go but a pace or two, I am sick"

"Faint-hearted," said he in a low tone, "see you do not stay long, this farce must soon end "

A turn or two apart from the assembly restored me again, and I returned and took up my former place, exactly opposite the old man and his son. Ya Alla! Sahib, even now I think they are there (and the Thug pointed with his finger), father and son, and the son's large eyes are looking into mine, as my gaze is riveted on them

Ameer Alı looked indeed as though he saw them, and stared wildly, but passing his hands across his eyes, he resumed

Taajoob! said he, wonderful! I could have sworn they both looked at me, but I am growing old and foolish. Well, salub, as I said, I gazed and gazed at them, so that I wonder even now they saw nothing extraordinary in it, and did not remark it. But no, the old man continued a relation of some treaties the Nagpoor Rajah was forming with the English, and was blaming him for entering into any league with them against his brethren, when my father called out "Tumbako lao (bring tobacco)!" It was the signal. Quicker than thought the Thug had thrown his handkerchief found the neck of the old man, another one his found that of the son, and in an instant they were on their backs struggling in the agonies of death. Not a sound escaped them but an indistinct guighing in their throats, and as the bhuttotes quitted their fatal hold after a few moments, others who had been waiting for the purpose, took up the bodies and bore them away to the already prepared grave

"Now for the rest," cried my father in a low tone, "some of you rush on the servants, see that no noise is made, the bullock-driver and others can be dealt with easily"

Some of the men ran to the place the khayet had chosen, and surrounded the unsuspecting cart-driver and the other servants, who were cooking under a tree I saw and heard a souffle, but they also were all dead ere they could cry out.

"Come! said my father and Hoosen taking me by the arms and hurrying me along "come and see how they are disposed of

I went, or was rather drogged along to one side of our encampment, where there was a ravine some feet deep, in the bottom of which a hole had been dug and by the side of which eight bodies were lymg The father and son, his two wives, the bullock-driver two male servants, and an old woman also a servant, who was in the inclosure with the women. The bodies were nearly naked, and prosented a ghastly spectacle, as they lay in a confused heap, but just visible from the heak of the raying

Are they all here? asked my father

'Yes, Khodawund, suid one of the lughaces, whom I know

'Then in with them! cried my father and they were quickly deponted in their last resting place, the head of one over the feet of another so that they might he close

"We had better open them, said the lugha, "for the ground is loose and they will swell.

So gashes were made in their abdomens, and the earth quickly filled in on them it was stamped down, the top smoothed, and in a few moments no one could have discovered that eight human beings had been secreted beneath the spot. We turned away from it, and every one betook himself to repose.

Sahib, can I describe to you how I passed that night! Do what I would, the father and son appeared before me the old man a voice rung in my cars, and the son's large eyes seemed to be fixed on mine. I felt as though a thousand devils sat on my breast, and sleep would not come to my eyes. It appeared so cold blooded so unprovoked a deed, that I could not reconcile myself in any way to have become even a silent spectator of it Yet my father had joined in it, my father whom I loved intensely and Hoosein too But all would not do I could not tranquillize myself I crept from beneath our little tent, and gat down in the open air. The moon shone brightly as ever as now and then she emerged from beneath a passing cloud, and there was a cool breeze which fanned my hurn ing face and soothed me. I watched her as she appeared to travel nlong in the heavens till she became overcast and a few heavy drops of rain, as if she wept over the deed she had witnessed drove me again under the tent I crept close to my father who was sound nalcep, and embracing him with my arms sleep came to my cyclid and I woke not till the usual hour of prayer arrived when I was roused by my father to join in the morning supplication.

We spread our carpots, and I repeated the form with him; but my thoughts were with the old man and his son, and the event of the preceding night.

Immediately after it was over, our horses were saddled, and we set out on what proved to be a long march, for it was necessary to get as far as possible from Guneshpoor, that no suspicion might attach to us

In due time we milled at the stage, and a man was sent into the town to purchase one super and a quarters worth of goor, or coarse sugar, what this was intended for I could not imagine, but it was soon made known to me when I asked my father

"This, ' said he, "is the sacrifice of the Tupounce, in which we all join after any adventure similar to what you saw last night, it is a 11te of the utmost solemnity, and must never be neglected "

The man returned with the sugar, and a place having been chosen, Bhudinath, the bearer of the khussee, was scated on a blanket spread for him, his face towards the west. All the best men and noted bhuttotes scated themselves on each side of him, looking in the same direction as he did. My father then made a small hole in the ground near the blanket, upon which was placed the sacred pickaxe and the pile of sugar, and a piece of silver as an offering. A little of the sugar was then put into the hole by my father. He raised his clasped hands to heaven, and in a supplicatory manner cried aloud,—

"Powerful and mighty goddess who hast for ages vouchsafed thy protection unto thy votaries, and who particularly to Joora Naik and Khudeek Bunwaree gavest one lac and sixty thousand rupees in their need, we beseech thee in like manner to aid us, and fulfil our desnes!"

This prayer was devoutly repeated by all around, and my father taking water in his hand sprinkled it upon the pickaxe and into the hole. He then took pieces of the sugar and presented them to each of the Thugs in succession, who ate it in silence, they then drank some water, and the pile of sugar was distributed among the rest of the assembled band, who likewise ate their portions in silent reverence, all except myself, for not having as yet strangled a man, I was not eligible to partake of it with the rest. However, my father had reserved a portion of his own for me, which he made me eat. After I had swallowed it he said,—

"You have eaten the goor, and are now a Thug in your heart Were you to desire to forsake us you could not, such is the power it has when consecrated as you have seen it over the hearts of men. Were any one to find a portion and eat it, whatever might be his rank or condition in life, he would assuredly become a Thug, he could not avoid it, the power it would exercise over him would be irresistible"

"This is wonderful indeed," said I "Have such things been known?'

"I could relate hundreds of instances had I time," he replied, "but ask Hoosein, or any one, they will all tell you the same"

In the ovening when all were assembled as usual my father took me to task about my faint heartedness, as he tormed it.

This will never do my son," said he "you, who ran in upon the tager so nobly ought not to shrul from such child's play as this you must be a man and behave better and remember you have

caten the goor

'For shame brother'" said Hoosem Do not speak so to the Sahib Zada remember you were no better yourself at first. Do you not recollect the business at --- and what difficulty I had to persuade Ganesha that you were in reality good stuff? Let the Sahib Zada but see one or two more of these affairs and he will be quite a different person, he will become a tiger at the work. I do not fear my son, said he, turning to me and slapping me on the worse men than you have begun better and onded in being chucken hearted follows, only fit to dig graves and be scents. Old Hoosein never yet was mistaken in any one, and you Inshalla! will surpass your father Only let him, continued he, again addressing my father let him see one or two more affairs, and then try lus hand himself you will then see whether I am wrong or not."

It is well, exclaimed my father Believe me my son, I meant not to upbraid you, but I was fearful the feeling you displayed might grow upon you. Be kind as you will to those around you, affection ate to your connections, pity the poor give alms to the needy; but remember that you are a Thug and have sworn relentless destruction to all those whom Alla may throw in your way"

"I am rebuked, said I, and your words have sunk into my heart. Never more shall you have to say of me that I flunched from my duty Whenever you think fit, I am ready to take the hand kerchief." And to turn the subject I said, "I beg to represent that Mahomed the bluttote promised to tell me some history of the man who died last night, and I call on him to fulfil his word

"Well spoken!" cried a dozen of the men "Mahomed is a sure hand at a story let us have it.

Mahomed after stuffing a large quantity of paun-leaf and tolucco anto his mouth, crunched it coveral times between his teeth, and after a comous discharge of red saliva, settled himself upon his heels, and addressing my father spoke as nearly as I can remember as follows:-

"I was born at Borce which is a small village in the Nagporr territory my father was a Thug as you all know and my ancestor were the same for generations before Tales of their feats have been handed down in our family from father to son, and they are worth relating but they have nothing to do with my story had been presperous however and had saved money energit to give a large sum at the court of hagpeer for the office and lands of the patelship (cluef magistracy) of our village; nevertheless they pur

sned their profession of Thuggee My grandfather Kasim, as many of you know, was as famous a leader of Thugs as any one has been since he died, and my father, who was then young, succeeded to his property and situation Long he held it, and none arose to dispute his claim

"But his prosperity was not fated to last Well do I remember the day when some soldiers, sent by order of the peshkar of the court, arrived at the village with an order to bring him to 'the Presence' My father vainly endeavoured to learn from them the reason of this sudden call for him, as he was regular in his payments to the Government, and finding reasoning would not avail, he strove to bribe the leader of the party into conniving at his absence But all would not do, he was obliged to accompany them, and he took me with him at my earnest entreaty I was then a young man, probably about the age of the Sahib Zada there We reached Nagpoor after some long marches, and on our arrival we were cast into a vile person, our legs loaded with irons, and we were denied the commonest comforts We had no paun or tobacco, no clean clothes, were not allowed to see any one, and were given the coarsest and most wretched food to eat In this manner we passed three long months My father in vain entreated to know what he was accused of, or who was his accuser, and equally in vain were his attempts to have his situation made known to his family and friends We wearied ourselves in our lonely prison with conjectures as to what the cause of the misfortune could be, but without success At last, one day that wretch Brij Lall, who died last night by my hand, came into our prison attended by soldiers My father gave himself up for lost, and thought his hour of death had arrived, but recovering, he appeared to recognise Brij Lall, and instantly assailed him with imprecations and abuse

"When he had finished, Brij Lall, eyeing him with a grim look,

said,-

"Pateljee! perhaps you will now condescend to give the Government some account of the effects of Jeysookhdas the merchant, who lived in your village, and about whose affairs you well know I was sent some years ago. You may also remember the reception and treatment you gave me, for which, by the blessing of God, I will now see whether I cannot effect a return."

"'Thou art a liar, and a base-born rascal of a mootsuddee!' cried my father, 'and not one word shalt thou ever know from my lips Send some one more fit to confer with Kasim Patel, and he will tell what he knows, but not one word to thee, thou dog and son of a dog i

"'We will see,' said the vile wretch, and making a sign to the soldiers with him, my poor father was seized, and a horse's nosebag filled with hot ashes being tool over his head, he was thumped violently on the back till he was forced to inhale the hot dust, which nearly killed him. This was repeated several times, on every refusal to tall to Bin Lall what he desired to know. At last nature outld bear no more, and he fainted. The wrotch then left the prison, particularly ordering that no water should be given. But in this his vile intentions were frustrated for fortunately some land remained from our morning a supply and after sprinkling my father's face, and forung a draught into his mouth, he recovered sufficiently to sit up and drink some more, which revived him.

CHAPTER V

WHEREIN THE OLD THUC ENDS HIS TALK.

I TROUGHT I should have died, my son, said my father at length and see what a black heart that villan must have to treat an old man after that fashion. My courses on him and lus! he will presper awhile but judgment for this and all his villanles will at last overtake him.

Tell me. said I, what quarrel there is between you and what cause he has to persecute you in this manner

Lusten, he replied, and you shall know Some yours ago when you were but a boy Jeysookhdaa, who was the principal sa houkar in the village died. On his death-bed he sent for me, and delivering over his family to my care, entreated me as a Bloomilman, and one of the faithful to protect them against this Bri Lall, whom he had in the public durber at Nagpoor beaten with a shoe for shandering him in the vilest manner with the intent of running his reputation In fact Brij Lall had accused him of making away with some of the revenue-for Jeysookh was the channel of payment not only of the revenue of our village, but of these around us, amounting in the year to nearly a lakh of rupeer. Fortunately for him, the character of Jersookh stood too high for the aspersions of a low wrotch like this to hart it and no notice was taken of what he had mid. But the insult he had received nover left the mind of Brit Lall. He brooded over it, and made every attempt to min my old friend; who, as he had powerful enemies at the court, was over afterwards kept in continual dread of being plundered under some falso accumition, or cast into prison At length however he died: and in our last interview he implored no to lose no time in sending off his wife and family to their country Marnar with their jowels and what money I could collect. I did so as soon as I possibly could, under an escort of our own people in case they should full in with other Thugs on the road

"'They had scarcely been gone a week, when this Brij Lall and another mootsuddee came with an order from his master Narayun Pundit, the peshkar, to seize Jeysookh's family and effects. The order was a verbal one, and this being a very unusual circumstance, I directly refused to give any intelligence about the family, or account of the effects of the deceased. Brij Lall began to threaten, and at last became grossly abusive to me, on which I beat him with my shoe, had him turned out of the village, and he was pelted with mud and stones by all the idle lads as he was conducted beyond the boundaries.

"'I never heard anything more of Brij Lall, but I knew he was my enemy at court, as I could get no justice for many complaints I made against the ill conduct and aggressions of a neighbour, who had not only encroached on my boundaries, but had seized grain which had been cut on several occasions. This annoyance at last reached such a height, that I determined to send a deputation to the court to petition for redress. It was however fruitless. My people were openly opposed by Brij Lall, who it seemed had risen into great favour and power, I was openly accused as a usurper of the patelship of our village, a person was set up by Brij Lall as the descendant of the real patel, and so much countenance and support was given him that my people returned to me in great alarm and utterly discomfited

""Since that time, my son, now about five years ago, I have been constantly alarmed by reports which have reached me through my friends at Nagpoor I have been wained to beware of assassination, to allow no strange men to come into the village, nor to go anywhere without a sufficient escort. This, however, has not, as you know, interfered with our profession, which I have not neglected to follow, but in other respects I have been careful. In spite of all, however, we are fairly in his hands, and may Alla deliver us out of them!'

"We remained some days without another visit from our tormentor, but at last he came again, and my poor father was again tortured in various ways, but without effect. he would tell nothing

"'You date not kill me, cowardly kafit as you are,' cried he to Brij Lall, 'and, Inshalla! were I once out of this vile pitson, you should see what a true Moosulman could do for himself And I bid you beware'

"Buj Lall laughed at my father sumpotent threats, and again left

"We had remained in confinement for nearly three months, when one day one of the soldiers of our guard, won over by my father's promises and really struck with the injustice of our case, agreed to convey a petition, which my father had drawn up, to a sahoukar, with whom he was acquainted, who then managed the money affairs of our village, and resided in the city of Nagpoor

"He was extremely astonished to hear of our situation and modalely set to work to procure our liberation. But this was no easy task: Bri Leil possessed the ear of the immister of the court, and every attempt our friend made was frustrated. At last he laid our case before the chief sahoukar of Nappoor a man of great in fluence, who went to the minister himself expressly on our behalf We were told that the next day we were to appear in the durbor and answer the accusations which had been made against us and at the hour appointed we were taken to the house where the peshkar resided, and where he heard the various suits and cases which were brought before him.

Narayun Pandit was then a young man, but he was looked up to with much respect by all who had any dealings with him. He was considered just, and one who patiently listened to both aides of a question before he gave his decision. But our latter onemy Brij Iall was his confidential mootsuddee, and conducted himself in so plausible a manner that his tyrannies were never ducovered Bry Lali made his accusation against my father. He said that, by the laws of the kingdom, accounts of the effects of sahou kars and other wealthy persons ought to be farmshed to the Government when they died without male children that it was well known that Jeysookhdas was wealthy that he had two or three daughters but no sons and that they had no right to have touched a rupes of the property until the accounts of the Govern ment had been settled. Again, that my father was not the rightful patel of Borco, and that the person who was descended from the original possessors claimed the office and the lands which were then in my father a possession. Bry Lall concluded his representation by saying to the pundit I will refrom from dwelling O incorna tion of Brahma! on the usage I have mot with at this man's hands Twice did I visit his village, and twice was I received with such indignity that my blood boils at the recollection. My intentions in going there were solely for the good of the Government and had I but then complained, the wrath of my lord would have descended on this man a head, and annihilated him and his family devoured my grief and it was not until provoked by his repeated refusals to come to the Presence and his contempt of the messages sent to him about the effects of Joysookhdas, that I became aware that the dignity of the Gorerament was set at nought, and I ordered his arrest and inprisonment.

Ys Alla! Alla! eried my father my lord, it is all a he. I call Alla to witness that I never disobeyed any order of the Government when sent to me in a proper form. Have I not eaten the salt of the Government before that pitiful wretch was born? and who is he that my lord should suffer him to abuse so old a servant of the state in his presence? If I have permission, I will represent to my lord that I am not in fault, but that this devil ought to be severely punished for the treatment he has subjected your slave to "

"'We will hear you to-morrow,' said the pundit, 'and in the meantime it will be proper for you to draw up a statement of what you have to say in your defence, in order that its relation may be more succinct and more readily comprehended'

"My father then begged not to be confined like a thief, and offered the two sahoukars as his securities to appear whenever he might be called on. This was admitted, in spite of Brij Lall's protestations that no securities would bind us, and we walked away in company with our friends, my father, as he passed him, twirling his mustachios and looking askance at him, with many a muttered Inshalla and Mashalla, all of which Brij Lall answered with looks of the most deadly spite and hatred

"In the course of the evening an account was drawn up in Persian of the whole of Brij Lall's conduct from first to last, and we took it to the durbar in every expectation of seeing him disgraced before our eyes, for his unwarrantable treatment of us. But we were doomed to 'eat disappointment'. The petition was read by Narayun Pundit, and he proceeded to pass judgment in the case, which was, that Brij Lall had much exceeded his authority in imprisoning my father, that he had acted wrongly in persecuting Jeysookh and his family, for that on an examination of the accounts there did not appear to be any claim against him

"On the other hand, that my father had behaved ill to Brij Lall, in having had him turned out of the village, disrespectfully to the State, in not readily giving the accounts demanded to an agent who was known to have the power to ask for them, and in resisting for so long a time his repeated orders

'My father was going to reply, when his friend the sahoukar stopped him 'Better,' said he, 'is it to come out of a battle with half your life than with no life at all Be quiet, consider that you have escaped, which is what very few do, from the net which was thrown round you by that low rascal, and be thankful'

"My father had only to pay a small fine for what he had done to Brij Lall He considered that he had obtained a victory, and so the matter ended

"I never shall forget the advice which the old sahoukar gave my father, when after some days' sojourn with him, and being entertained at his expense, we were about to set out for our village

"'Pateljee,' said he, 'I know that Bri Lall well, he will never give up his revenge you have seen that he behaves like a cow be fore his patron, but absent from him he is a tiger in heart and in manners and such is the influence he has obtained that no one dares to oppose him. You have indeed got well out of his clutches but had not your uffairs been taken up our seth, you would have remained in your miserable prison until his hate had been satisfied by your death, from the constant torment and ill usage he would have subjected you to

" Shooke Alla | said my father I am at least safe now

Not without great caution, said the saliouking his emissaries will beset you wherever you go, and it will require your ulmost vigilance and wurness to avoid them. By your soul O Patel, I beseech you not to disregard what I say or you will repent it.

" I will not, said my father your words are friendly and I drmk them in as grateful sharbet. But this Bri Lall must have long arms and powerful if he can reach Mahomedice Patel.

In a very tew days after we took our leave and returned home but, as had been predicted in a few months strange men began to be seen about the village, and my father strange to say daregarded all our prayers to stay at home, especially after dusk. Ho would not listen to us, called the men we had seen travellers, and stayed from home late at nights out of bravado. However my mother grew at last so anxious and so slarmed about these repeated visits of unknown people, that she begged of me never to leave my father's side by day and always to bring him home with me from the fields in the evening. This I did for a long time but one might, one cursed night—would that I had never seen the dawn of the day preceding it—having been delayed in a field of sugar-cane to arrange about the cutting of it the following day we were late in returning home.

We were accompanied part of the way by some men of a neighbouring village, but they separated from as about half a cosfrom ours and the remainder of the way (if we followed the struight read) was one which was not thought safe and by which no one went after nightfall if he could help it. I attempted to take another but the old man observed it, and said smarply

That is not the way that road will keep us out an hour longer. I had no russon to give to dusande hun from the road I wished to award, though an ill-defined feeling that there was danger in the one before us had led me to endeavour to take the other. But my fronds, who can avoid his fate? If it is the will of Alia that one is to die, of what use is human forenght? We went on, and soon roached the inclored fields, between the high milk bush hedges of which the path wound. It was scarcely light enough to see our way but we knew every foot of the road. All at once as we pro ceeded, I thought I saw in a hedge which crossed the road a glimmer as if of the match of a gun

"'Look' said I to my father, 'we are waylaid, there are people behind the hedge Look, there are three lighted matches'

"'You are a fool,' cried he, 'they are fireflies Are you afraid? has my son become a coward?'

"The words were hardly out of his mouth when there were three sharp cracks close to us My father fell on his face without uttering a sound, and I felt a coldness and numbness all down my back, with a sharp pain, and the same feeling in my leg I became sick, staggered a few paces, and then fell, but I was not insensible Three men rushed out from the hedge, and ran towards us with Seeing that neither of us moved, one of them drawn swords turned me over on my back and looked into my face I shut my eyes, for I knew if they were open I should not live an instant "'This is not the man,' said the fellow standing over me, 'we have missed them'

"Another came up

"'It is nearly as good,' said he, 'it is the young devil the son, the father, depend upon it, is the other, come and see' And they left me

"They went to where my poor father lay, but I could not see what they did I suppose they examined him, for one cried, 'Alhumd-ulıllah! we have been successful, our faces will be bright in our employer's sight for this And only think, to have succeeded so easily after this long watching! The old dog was as wary as a fox'

""You may thank me,' said another, who had not as yet spoken, 'if I had not dogged him to the sugar-cane field, and found out his nearest way homewards, we might have had a long continuance of our fruitless watching, of which I was heartly tiled Come,' continued he, 'we must not stay, the country will be too hot to hold us Madhoo will help us on to Nagpoor, and the sooner we get to him.

the better, the horses I know are all ready'

"I heard no more I was sick and faint, and lay almost insensible for a long time The pain of the wounds was horrible, and I writhed in torment, the night too was dieadfully cold, and I became so stiff I could not move I tried even to get as far as my poor father's body, which I could just see lying on its back, but motion was denied me I lay and moaned bitterly. I heard the voices of persons not far of, and shouted as loud as I could, but they did not hear me There were shots fired, as I afterwards heard is signals to us, but I could not answer them What could I do, lying as I did like a crushed reptile? My senses went and returned, as though I were dead, and again alive. Oh, my friends, how can I describe to you the misery of that night? At last I was roused out of a faint by some persons with a torch standing over me I quickly recognized them as some of the labourers of the village. They had searched every lane and at length found me I knew not what they said or did but they broke out into lamenta tions on seeing my father's body and taking me up in a blanket they carried me to the village, and set me down at the door of my father's house alsa! his no longer

My friends, all of you have som the grief of women when death has come into the house and struck down a father a brother a son; all of you know how the shrinks and moans of women pierco into the heart, and turn men a livers into water Till my father a body arrived there was no cry-no scream. My mother sat in a corner rocking herself to and fro, calling on my father a name in a low tone, and every now and then beating her breast; my mater attended to me, and moustened my mouth with water as I still law unable to speak, but fully aware of all that was going on around me. Some old woman of the village sat near my mother shivering in the cold wind which whistled through the house, and spenking among themselves in whispers. There was but a small lamp in a miche in the wall, which with its flickering light now revealed one group now another causing the shadows of the whole to leap about. over around, above me until my dusturbed brain fanciod them a legion of devils sent to torment me before my time.

"Sister said I, call our mother to me, I am dying I think, for at the moment I felt fainter than ever

"No, no! you must not die you must not leave us now said the affectionate girl. It is but a wound; the harber is coming and will take out the ball and a fomentation is being prepared by the hukoem. You will soon be well

As she spoke this a sudden gleam of torches lighted up the whole space outside; and immediately after four men, bearing my poor faither a body walked slowly towards the house I summoned energy enough to sit up, leaning against the wall and the body was brought, all bloody as it was, and laid down. I should not say laid down, for as the men who carried it were preparing to let it down gently one of the corners of the blanket slipped, and the corpse fell heavily to the ground, giving a horrid dull squelch, the sound of which thrilled through overy nerve.

For an instant there was not a word spoken; but when the bloody features were exposed to view the uprear was dreadful Headed by my mother all the old women rushed to the side of the body and began the most heartrending shriels; there who had carried it were also affected, and the cry reached to the outside where the crowd assembled took it up till the heavens were eracked with the noise of the lamentations. It was in vain that I ender oured to make myself heard But on a sudden the noise ceased, and silence was ordered by the kazee of the village, who entered He cast a look on the dead body, and then asked for me 'Who has done this?' said he, "whom do you suspect? Tell us, by your soul, tell us, ere it be too late to overtake them, whoever they may be'

"'Mahdoo, Patel of Etare,' said I, 'but the villains have horses, they are gone ere this, there is no use sending'

"'Who have horses? who have gone, did you say?' cited he with impatience 'Rally for a time, and strive all you can to let us know how this was,—how it happened'

"I had barely strength, but I gave a short relation of the whole

"'By Alla, it is the work of Mahdoo himself,' said one, 'and we will burn his village before the morning breaks'

"'It is the doing of Rheim Khan,' cried another

"Rheim Khan was my father's brother-in-law, and they had been at bitter enmity

"'Who takes the name of Rheim Khan?' cried my mother 'May his tongue be blistered and rot in his mouth! May his end be like this!' pointing to the corpse, and again she resumed her howls and lamentations

"'Did you hear the woman?' said one fellow close to me, 'she would not curse at that rate if Rheim Khan was free from suspicion'

· 'Silence' said I, as loud as I could 'I know who is the author of this, at least I have a right to have the strongest suspicions Mahdoo Patel had no hand in it, he is a coward, Rheim Khan, though he hated the old man, could never have done or planned this, no, it is neither. It is one whom we poor people can never reach from his height of station, one whom the pleasure of Alla alone can bring down to the condition of him who is there, I mean Brij Lall, the accursed, the merciless' I was exhausted with speaking, and sank down

"'Who spoke " said my mother laising her head, 'I surely heard the voice of my son!'

"'I am here, my mother,' said I, and she tuined to me

"'Thou here! thou alive! Coward! hast thou come to me to see thy father a bloody corpse in his own house? Where weit thou that thou diedst not with him? Did I not caution thee never to leave the headstrong old man, who would persist in dislegalding all advice, and in exposing himself at night?

"'I cannot answer thee now, my mother,' said I, 'but I was with him See here, I fell also, though I did not die then, I feel that I shall do so soon' I opened my vest and showed her the hole the ball had made, out of which a drop or two of black blood every now and then oozed, she looked at it, and threw herself at my feet

Thou art no coward! she sobbed out, thou art no coward! Thou hast bled in thy father's defence, and I can say nothing but that it is the will of Alla, and his fate. Who can avoid his destiny? But it is hard to lose both. Husband and son, husband and son and I an old woman.

"And she went from me, and resumed her place at the side of the body

One by one the neighbours left us. The name of Brij Lall had silenced every one and in a very short time there remained only the watchers by the corpse my sarter and myself. She was but a garl my friends, but she watched by me and fomented my shoulder and leg with warm water until the congulated blood dissolved, and I was easier How I wished for the light to be put out! but they would not hear of it. I have seen death in many, many forms since, but never have I seen anything that I could com pare with my remembrance of my father a appearance. His fee tures were pinched up, his lips drawn tightly across his mouth showing his upper and under teeth his over were wide open, for they could not be closed; and the flaring light now rising now sinking as it was agitated by the wind, caused an appearance as if of the features moving and gibbering with that ghastly expression on them. I could not take my eyes off them, and lay gaining at them till the day broke.

The barber who had been absent at a neighbouring village soon afterwards arrived, and examined my wounds. One ball had entered my shoulder and had passed into my neck. He groped in the wound for some time with a pair of pincors, and after putting me to horrible pain, succeeded in gotting hold of it and drawing it out. I was then easier the blood flowed copoualy; the wound in the log was only through the flesh, and having taken some opium I soon fell asleep, and awoke, though still in pain, yet casier than I had been

My father had by this time been buried, I was left with the con sciousness of having one enemy and one too who would not forego his revenge even to the son of his victim.

The old knice could recommend nothing could suggest no measures to be pursued to bring the murderers to conviction. So as he said, we sat down on the carpet of patience to smoke the pipe of regret, and to drown our affliction in the best way we could Matters continued to run smoothly for the period of a year. I was considered to have succeeded to my father's rights, when one day the man who had been set up by Brij Lall as the real patel, in opposition to my father arrived at the village with a body of armed men, and with orders for his installation. The villagers were too weak. to resist this tyranny, and I was forced to resign all my claims to the newcomer By this time my sister had gone to the house of her father-in-law, and I sent my mother after her, for I had no longer a home I left the village with an aching heart, to see if my father's friends, the sahoukars, could do anything for me at the court But they too had changed, as I might perhaps have expected, and would do nothing

E

"Brij Lall, they said, was too powerful to be interfered with, and they recommended me to give up all hopes of justice, as the attempt to fix the crime of murder upon him, with the insufficient evidence I possessed, would be attended with my certain destruction Nor would they assist me to regain my lost rights, so that I was friendless, and, as it were, forsaken in the world I had but one resource: I joined the first band of Thugs I could discover, though I had previously not practised the profession, and I have since lived a lonely and wretched life in the world. My mother is long since dead sister still lives, and has some children, she is happy, and has no remembrance of the past I pay her a visit now and then, and am received with affection and kindness She is the only one in this world except you, my friends, who cares for me She believes me to be a soldier in the service of Holkar, and she will never know to the contrary Praise be to Alla! however, my enemy has died by my own hand, and I am content, for I am revenged Some of you, my friends, will lay me in my grave when my time comes, and it will not be long. I have lived hitherto for the deed I did last night There is no excitement for me in the future, and it matters not how soon the old Thug is laid in the earth This is my story, such as it 1s, 1f I have arrested your attention and gratified the Salub Zada, my intentions have been fulfilled, and I am content"

The whole assembly was struck and affected by the old man's story, and all joined in consoling him for his misfortunes. But I was particularly interested in them, as they went more to convince me that the hand of Alla was upon all our doings than even my father's history. Both were striking instances, but the Thug's particularly so. It really seemed as though Brij Lall had been given into our hands, nay to the very hands of him he had so oppressed, to receive his punishment on earth previous to the eternal fires of Jehunum. Henceforward," said I to myself, "no one shall have it to say of Ameer Ali that he hung back when occasion required his personal exertions. I will emulate my father, and the country shall know and feel that I am a scourge on its wickedness. No one shall escape me, I will act up to the utmost of the oath I have taken, wage unrelenting was with the whole human race, and, Inshalla! they shall see whether Ameer Ali cannot lead his men on to actions which will by far surpass any of the present times, and equal those the traditions of which remain among us."

From that day I put myself under the turtion of the coorce, or teacher of the band, an old Thug who was worn out with age, but had been considered to be one of the most dexterous bhuttotes, or stranglers, who had lived within the memories of any of the men of our company He was a Hindoo a raipoot and though his frame was dry and shrivelled, yet from his height, breadth of shoulders and anews which were developed the more by the absence of flesh to cover them, it was easy to see that he had been a man of immenso strength and power and added to this, if his great dextenty in name the handkerchief was considered, the stories of his superior prowers might easily be gredited. I had hitherto not assemnted much with him, and beyond a courteous demeanour to each other we had been but little acquainted so I begged my father to take me to him, deliver me over to his core, and request of him to initiate me thoroughly in the practice of a bhuttote

He was delighted at this spontaneous offer on my part, readily acceded to my wishes, and at once put me under the care of Hoosein and Roop Singh, the old Thug I have mentioned, who belonged to

Hoosem a party

For a few days," said my father I will not see you you shall remain with them and when you return to me, let me welcome you as ready and willing to take a part in the next affair we may be engaged in.

The day after we began in carnest. Roop Singh repeated incantations over me. I ate no meat, indeed tasted nothing but milk for four days. Numerous sacrifices were made to the sacred pickaxe every omen was observed, and as I ant under the trees after our daily march, sourcely a bird alighted on them but there was some con clusion drawn from it and the appearances of different animals and birds as we commenced our march in the mornings were par ticularly observed and noted. I was naturally very inquisitive as to the meaning of all that was done to me and for me but the old goorgo would not enlighten me.

My son," said he "when I was your age these ceremonics were performed over me to make me fearless and stony hearted, active and cunning so as to ensuare all who came within my reach, and to avoid my enemies, to make me fortunate, and to cause me to win fame In all these I have never failed. Two others upon whom I have per formed them are rising fast to be jemadars, such is their address and conrage and you too will be the same therefore ask no questions. Content yourself with knowing that everything is going on properly and to my complete satisfaction, for I have not observed one unfavourable omen.

On the fifth morning the handkerchief was put into my hand; and after having been bathed, anointed with sweet smelling oils and marked on the forehead with vermilion, as a votary of Bhowanee, I was declared a bhuttote

"One thing I forgot," said the old man laughing, as he gave me the cloth, "and that was the principal perhaps. I have not shown you how to use it, and I have a peculiar knack of my own, which is easily communicated. You will soon learn it."

He took the cloth, tied a large knot at one end, with a piece of silver inserted in it, this he held in his left hand, the plain end being in his right, and about as much space between them as would nearly compass a man's neck, the closed hands had the palms uppermost

"Now," said he, "mark this, and when you throw the cloth from behind, and have got it tight, suddenly turn your knuckles into the neck, giving a sharp wrench to either side that may be most convenient If done in a masterly manner, instant death ensues"

I took the cloth, and held it as he directed, but it did not please

him

"Give it me back, that I may show you more exactly on your own neck," said he

"Indeed, no," cried I laughing, "you might think I was a traveller, and have me down in an instant, without intending it, but I perfectly understand the method "

"Then try it on me, Ameer Ali, I shall see by the position of your hands whether you know anything about it"
I obeyed him, the old man shook his head and laughed

"That will never do, you could not kill a child in that way," he said "When you feel my hands round your neck you will understand."

So I submitted with as good a grace as I could, though I did not at all like the idea. My blood ran cold through me as I felt his chill, clammy hands about my neck. But he did not hurt me, and I saw where my error had been I tried it on him as he had shown me several times, and was declared at last to be perfect

"Now you only want practice, Ameer Ali," said he

"Inshalla! Roop Singh," I replied, "we shall have plenty of it One beginning, and I fear not for the rest. Like a tiger, which, once having tasted human blood, will if possible take no other, and runs every risk to get it, so I feel it will be with me." And it was so. Sahib, I knew myself—I had spoken truly

CHAPTER VI

IN WHICH THE READER WILL BE INFORMED HOW AMEER ALI KILLED HIS FIRST MAN

Nothing of any moment occurred during the rest of our march to

Nagroor of I except the deaths of a few solitary travellers, who had fallen by the hands of a small portion of the band who had been sent to another road, which ran parallel to the one on which we marched and as I know no particulars of them worth mentioning I shall at once lead you, sahib, to our encampment at Nagpoor

Outside the city is a large tank, on the margin of which the majority of the band encamped. My father and a few others put up in the town, for the purpose of converting the booty already obtamed into money It was not a difficult task, for as the property which had belonged to Brij Lall was easily salouble, we soon found purchasers among the numerous goldsmiths and sahoukars of the cutv

In one of his dealings with a sahoukar my father casually stated that he was proceeding to Hyderabad with some men he had brought from his village, and for whom he was in hope of procuring employ ment under as he said, his brother who was in the service of the then reigning prince Sikundur Jah. The sahoukar at once proposed to accompany us, and to give my father and his men a hand some remuneration if he would protect him on the road as he had. he said, been for some time on the look-out for an opportunity to put himself under the except of a respectable man who might be travelling there with a number of followers.

At that time, sahib, in consequence of the unsettled state of the country and the many rumours there were of wars, any man of respeciability who was idle in his village, and could persuade a few companions to accompany him as their leader was sure of employ ment as a soldier, if he presented himself at any of the courts of Hindostan or the Dukhun. Sinden, Holkar the Peshwah, overy prince in fact had a large army which was tolerably paid and it was better to serve with them, than to pursue any other occupation. We had met several bands of such men on our road down to Nagpoor so that our company presented no extraordinary or auspicious appearance, especially under my father who looked like a soldier was always well armed and dressed, rode a fine horse, and on occasions of reading in, or even possing through, a city was always attended by a number of the Thuge as his escort and his appearance was certainly what he represented himself to be to the sahoukar

My father readily agreed to the sahoukar s terms, and bound him self down in a day or two afterwards to be at his disposal, and to afford him protection as far as Hyderabad. At a secret conference they had that day the sahoukar as my father told me, informed him that he was going to take down a good deal of treasure some valuable jewels and some merchandise by which he hoped to get a handsome profit at Hyderabad. Nay he even went so far as to show him what he was going to take with him; and you cannot imprine salub, the joy that was diffused in our camp at the certainty of so rich a booty

In order to give our band as much of the appearance of soldiers as possible, my father purchased for those who had none, matchlocks, swords, and shields, and distributed them, and, in truth, when all the men were drawn up to be examined, they were a fine-looking set of fellows, for as this expedition had been considered one of extreme adventure, none but the youngest and most able-bodied had been selected for it. They were all informed of the agreement which had been made with the sahoukar, cautioned to put on as inilitary and swaggering an air as possible, and, in short, to behave as soldiers would, during the part of the journey they would have to appear as his escort.

This was in the evening, and during the night the camp was a scene of jollity, the booty in view, nay, almost within their grasp, was sufficient to cheer them. A set of dancing guls was invited from the city, and in listening to their songs the best part of the night was passed

We expected the sahoukar anxiously all the day, and just at nightfall he came to our camp in a small travelling cart, with one or two servants and two or three small ponies, on which a tent and his baggage were laden, and ten bullocks with their two drivers

Altogether, there were eight men, including himself

We saw but little of him during our march to Oomraotee; my father and Hoosein used sometimes to sit with him in his tent during the evening, and I was also introduced to him. He was a large, unwieldy man, and I began to think whether he would not be a good subject for my first trial. I mentioned my thoughts to my father, and he was much pleased with me.

"I had intended to have appointed you to be his bluttote," said he, "he is too fat to make any resistance, and he will be the easier work for you, who have not as yet tried what you can do"

So from that time I looked upon him as my first victim

I daily went to my instructor to gain fresh insight into my profession, and practised the handling of the cloth in every way he pointed out to me. He one day proposed to inveigle a lonely traveller into our camp, in order that I might try my hand upon him first, but I objected to this, as I felt confident in my own powers, and was determined, as I had selected the sahoukar, that he should be the first man

I pass over our journey, as nothing worth mentioning occurred on the road We arrived at the town, and took up our quarters in the bazaar I was much struck with its apparent opulence and prosperity, but it was not to be wondered at, as it was the place where all the merchandise and manufactures of Hindostan were brought to be dutributed over the Dulhun, and where all the spaces, drugs, and other articles of trade arrived from the south, to be sent to different nexts of Hundortan

The town seemed to be full of schoolars houses and large shops and in the barnars were duplayed every article that I had over heard of, besides many others from the Europeans at Bombay which I had never seen before and I wandered about every day in company with my father admiring and wondering at all I saw

The school are business detained him some days at this place, at the end of which we again set forward, with an addition to his people of three men, who drove a few bullocks heavily laden with cloths, which we heard were of the most costly description, being those of Benares, which are justly celebrated for their richness and beauty. Nor did this addition at all disconcert our plans, for in consequence of the school are having accompanied as Hoosen's party still remained and, indeed, if it had not, there were plenty of my father s to have secured the whole writhout trouble

From Comractes to Mangloor is three stages, and "there, said my father I shall decide on the place for the ending of this matter. If I remember right, those are some low hills and ravines not far beyond it, which will give us excellent opportunities for concealing the bodies. And do you, Hoosen, impure who among your mentans the ground, for it will be necessary to send some one who does with the lugheres.

Inquiries were accordingly made when we reached our first stage a village named Baum, and it was discovered that three men were intimately sequanted with the whole of the road, and had been on the point of coming forward to recommend that one spot in particular should not be neglected. They were closely questioned by futber and Hoosam and they gave a very clear description of a place, which seemed to be so well ditted for the purpose that it was at once determined on, and the men promised extra reward if they would exert themselves

I now felt that my time had come that in a very few hours I might take my place with the rest, having established my right to be their equal.

Perhaps it was weakness, sahib, but from that time I avoided the night of the sahoukar as much as possible. I saw him once or time on the read but an involuntary shudder crept through me and, like a fool, I almost wished I were back again at our villa e. But it was too late to retract; I had a character to gain, and the exteem of him who best loved me my father to secure. To turn lack was impossible, and to orned the smallest cowardice was to degrade my self irretirerably. I had therefore no resource but to do my best and in truth, when the sahoukar was not before me. I felt no relactance to perform my part, but, on the contrary, the same desire I had before experienced to distinguish myself

We reached Mungloor It is a large town, full of Mahomedans, and celebrated for the shrine of Meer Hyāt Kalundur, a saint of great antiquity. His tomb is held in particular veneration, and it was judged highly expedient that we should offer up our prayers for the success of our enterprise. Accordingly, my father, myself, Hoosein, and some other Mahomedans went to the tomb, and having observed all the ceremonies required and directed by the attendant moollahs, we were sitting in conversation with two of them, when we discovered, by a casual sign made by my father to Hoosein, which was recognised by them, that they were Thugs! Most extraordinary, thought I, here are sacred ministers of our faith Thugs as well as ourselves. But after some conversation with them, I could see that my father esteemed them lightly

"These fellows can hardly be Thugs," said my father to Hoosein, as we descended the steps of the shrine into the outer court, where many of the men had put up for the day, "and we had better caution the people against getting acquainted with them I do not think they will notice us further as it is, but they might do so did they know whom we have with us"

"You are right," said Hoosein, "it might perhaps be better were the men told not to disclose whom we have with us"

They were accordingly cautioned, and it turned out that we had done right, as we heard afterwards that the moollahs were most inquisitive, and could not understand how it was that we had come so far and were going so much farther without an object, and I have no doubt had we not acted as we did, and disclosed our intentions to, or asked for assistance from them, that they would have either betrayed us to the village authorities, or insisted on such a share of the spoil, which we dare not have refused, as would have materially lessened ours

After prayers we returned to the place where we had put up, and found a man belonging to the sahoukar waiting for us. He said his master would stay that evening where he was, with a friend, instead of coming outside the village to our encampment, but that my father was to leave some men with him as a guard, and that he would set out early in the night, as he was determined to go on to Bassim, a town some distance off, where he had another friend, whom he wished to visit, that as it was so long a march we must start early, so as to allow time for a halt for refreshment at a village half way

My father did not like the idea of sending the men into the village, lest they should be recognised as Thugs by any of the Thug villagers, yet he could not but acquiesce, and some were sent as soon as night closed in, that there might be hardly a chance of their being known. In the meantime every proparation was made by the party of gravediggers who were to precede us, and at nightfall they also left the ground, fourteen in number with the two who know the spot in company with them. They were confident as to the precise place they should fix on, and described the hills as little more than low mounds, caused by some high land breaking into ravines that, if they remembered right, the road was very stony and crossed by several small streams, whose banks were hined by thick brush wood, and that in any one of these in which there might be no water the bhil, or grave, should be prepared. They were also deaired to place men in advance to give information, that we might all take our places, and fall on, when the signal was given,

It was now generally known to all that I was to have the sahou kar to myself, and many throngod about me to see how I looked forward to my first trial every one observed me, and I must own this gave me great confidence. As the time approached, my soul burned for the work like that of a young and brave soldier to see the first flash of his bright sword in anger. My father enjoyed my demeanour in silent satisfaction he spoke not, but there was exulta tion in his eye as he looked fondly upon me, and I felt that I should not disappoint him. The whole band seemed to be impressed particularly with the im portance of the present matter for they collected into groups, and though each man knew exectly what he had to do, and what was appointed for his comrade, yet they seemed to be discussing the whole, till one by one they separated, and each stretched humself out to gain the little rest he could before the time arrived which would call him into active, may deadly strife,-my father and Hoosen too all except myself. I was sitting outside our slight tent when Roop Singh came to me.

"Babo !" said he as he sat down, how feel you? is your heart firm and your blood cool?

"Both, said I "nothing can change my boart and feel my hand, is my blood hot?

'No. said the old man, taking it in his; "it is not, nor does it tremble this is as it should be. I have seen many prepare for their first trial, but never one so coolly and calmly as you do; but this is all in consequence of the blessed muntrus which have been read over you, and the ceremonies you went through

"Perhaps so, said I; but I think I should have been much the same without them.

Now may Bhowance forgive you, proud boy " he replied "you know not their efficacy Was there ever a pronder being than I was, -a rajpoot by birth, and one of the purest tribes? Had I not slain wild beasts, or helped to slay them from my childhood? but when a man was shown me, and the handkerchief alone put into my hands to destroy him with, indeed I trembled, nor was it for a long time that I could be brought to attempt it But," continued Roop Singh, "you have one more ceremony to go through, which on no account must be neglected, go, call your father, Hoosein, and Bhudrinath, that they may be present"

We were all soon assembled, and the gooroo led the way into an adjoining field He stopped, and turning to the direction in which we were to proceed, raised his hands in a supplicatory manner, and cried, "O Kalce! Maha Kalce! if the traveller now with us should die by the hand of this thy new votrig, vouchsafe us the thibroo!"

All of us stood silently, and wonderful to relate, even at that late hour an ass brayed on the right hand The gooroo was over-Joyed

"There!" cried he to the others, "was there ever so complete an acceptation of a votary? The omen almost followed the prayer"
"Shookr Alla!" exclaimed my father, "it is now complete, he will go forth and conquer There only remains for you to the knot"

"That I will do when we return," said the gooroo, and when we reached our encampment, he took my handkerchief, and untying the knot which had been previously made, he retied it, placing a piece of silver in it Presenting it to me, he said,—

"Receive this now sacred weapon, put your trust in it, in the holy name of Kalee I bid it do your will"

I received it in my light hand, and carefully tucked it into my waistband, that I might not lose it, and that it might be leady for action when required

We remained in conversation for some time, and then threw ourselves on our carpets to snatch a short rest, till one of our men from the village came and told us that the sahoukar was preparing to move, and had sent him on to wain us

The band were quickly roused and our beasts laden, and we drew up by the side of the road to await his arrival. He was not long in coming, and we all moved on together

The night was beautiful, the road excellent, and we pushed on in high spirits The booty we were to possess, the tact with which the whole matter had been managed from the first, would mark it as an enterprise of a superior description, one that any one of us would be proud to mention, and which would cause a considerable sensation, not only in the country, but among the numerous bands of Thugs of Hindostan, more especially those we were to rejoin at the conclusion of our season

We had proceeded about two coss, when there was a murmur

among the men who led, and one of the scouts was an instant after wards seen making his way to where we were. My father recog mused him as one of those he had sent on Bhilla manjeh? [Have you cleared the hole?] he eagerly in guired.

"Manyeh! said the man. "It is cleared, and it is all ready See you you low hills? A streamlet, as I told you, rons from them and it is a rare bhil that we have made, Jemadar Salub. You will say we have done well.

And how far may it bo?" demanded my father

"About half a coss," said the man. A short distance from hence, the road becomes stony and continues so till you are above the pass—take advantage of it " and he fell in among the others.

The men were silently varied to be at their posts and each man, or two men, as it was necessary placed limited close to the one to whom he had been assigned. By designed obstruction in front, the bullocks belonging to the sahoukar with their attendants, were brought immediately about the eart in which he role and the whole being gathered into one place, were the caser to be scented. The preparations again roused me and I grasped the handkerchief firmly thinking every moment that the signal was about to be made; but we still crept on at a alow pace, for the road was marrow and lined by themy bushes and the men in front proceeding as slowly as possible, we were kept anachly in our proper place and expected every moment to reach the spot.

As we approached the small hills, the jungle became pretty thed, and appeared doubly so by the monlight and we passed many places where I thought the deed might have been done with advantage. But I was wrong for the lughaces had selected an admirable one.

A man came from the front, whispered a few words to my father and again went on. This increased my annety. We crossed a small hollow ascended a bank, and below us I saw what I was sure was the place. The banks of the rivulet were high and steep, covered with thick underwood matted by iralling cropers. A few higher trees nearly met over its bed, in which could be just discerned a small thread of water looking like a silver snake as the moons rays fell on it through the dark foliage. A hundred thieves might he there, thought I and who could over know the fate of a travel ler who might so can'll be surprised in such a spot?

I was roused from my train of thought by my father as he called out "Hooshizered (cantom) This was the preparatory agend. He went to the sude of the cart and represented to the sabelinathat we had reached the stream and that the lank was so steep, and the bed so stony, that he must get out and walk over to the other side, if no faither This was quite sufficient, the man got out, and after seeing the cart safely down the steep bank was preparing to follow himself

The whole scene is now before me The bullocks and their drivers, with the Thugs, were all in a confused group in the bed of the little stream, the men shouting and uiging on their beasts, but it was easy to see that every man had a Thug close to him awaiting the signal They were only a few feet below us, and the stream was so narrow that it was with some difficulty all could stand in its bed, especially when the cart reached the bottom Above, stood my father, Hoosein, and myself, the sahoukar, one of his servants, and several Thugs

I was eagerly waiting the signal, I tightly grasped the fatal handkerchief, and my first victim was within a foot of me! I went behind him as being preferable to one side, and observed one of the other Thugs do the same to a servant The sahoukar moved a step or two towards the road-I instinctively followed him, I scarcely felt that I stured, so intensely was I observing him 'Kalee'" shouted my father it was the signal, and I obeyed it!

As quick as thought the cloth was round his neck, I seemed endued with superhuman strength I wrenched his neck roundhe struggled convulsively for an instant, and fell I did not quit my hold, I knelt down on him, and strained the cloth till my hand ached, but he moved not-he was dead! I quitted my hold, and started to my feet I was mad with excitement! My blood boiled, and I felt as though I could have strangled a hundred others, so easy, so simple had the reality been. One turn of my wrists had placed me on an equality with those who had followed the profession for years,—I had taken the first place in the enterprise, for I had killed the principal victim! I should receive the praise of the whole band, many of whom I was confident had looked on me as only a child

I was roused from my neverie by my father

"You have done well," he said in a low and kind voice, "you will receive the reward of this soon Now follow me, we will go to the grave Ere this the bodies have been collected, and I myself must see that they are properly disposed of There will be a noise about this business, and it will need great exertion for us to get out of the road we are now travelling"

I followed him We descended into the bed of the stream, and were led to the grave by one of the men, others bearing the body of the sahoukar followed We passed up the bed of the stream for a short distance, and near the mouth of a small tributary, the bed of which was dry, a number of the men were standing "The grave?" asked my father

'It is up there," said one. You will have to creep, and the thorns are very had.

It matters not, he replied and we entered the place

The banks of the rivulet were perhaps two or three yards high, and the bed was so narrow that but two persons could advance abreast. The creepers and trees were matted overhead, and the sides so thick that it was impossible that any one could have got down from above. The tangled character of the spot mercased as we proceeded, until it became necessary to free our clothes from the thorus which caught in at overy step. In a few moments we heard the sound of voices, and after overy step. In a few moments we heard the sound of voices, and after overying almost on all fours through a hole which had apparently been forced through the underwood we came upon the grave.

There was only one at occupied almost the entire breadth of the stream at was very deep, and the earth, or rather sand, had been thrown out on each end. The lughaces were aiting there sharpening stakes out from the jungle but they could scarcely be seen from the darkness of the place, which the thick wood above only partially allowed the moonbeams to penetrate. They were conversing in a low tone in the slang of the band, which I had not yet learned my father stoke to them, or rather to their leader.

learned my father spore to them, or rather to their leader

You have had your wits about you, he said, and we will think well of you when we make the distribution this is a grave that even a jackal could not discover. Again I say Peer Khan, you have done this properly and it is well I have seen it that I may speak of you as you deserve but you must be quick,—the night advances.

It is finished, khodawund," replied the man. We do but wait for another body which they say is coming and the filling up will be done unmediately

As he spoke, the body of the sahoukar was brought up by three men, who railed at it for its weight.

It is their wont, he said. "Do not speak to them only watch what they do for you must see all, that you may be fully acquain ted with your duties."

I was silent. The corpse was dragged to the brink and thrown in, as also that of the serant who had been killed close to the anheader. Incurous were made in their abdomens, and sharpened stakes driven through them.

"Yere it not for the precaution you see said my father 'the ground might swell, and the nachals would drag out the bedies; in this way however it is impossible"

When all was finished, quantities of stones which had been collected were thrown upon the bodies, afterwards thorns, and the whole was covered up with sand, which was carefully smoothed

"I think this will do, Jemadar Salub," said Peer Khan, "we may now leave the place. It is not likely that any one will come here to look for the sethjee or his people, and the sahib zada has seen how eleverly we have done our work."

"Enough," said I, "I shall know how to act as a lugha myself."

should I ever need it"

My father beckoned me to follow him I stayed to see some dry sand thrown over the place, and proceeded with the others. The hole in the underwood made by us was closed up with great care; and a branch of a bush being broken off, and trailed after him by the hindermost man, obliterated every footmark in the dry sand of the nulla

CHAPTER VII

A NEW ADVENTURE, WHICH PROVES AN UNUSUAL PRELUDE TO AN EVENING'S ENTERTAINMENT

THE rest of the band, with the cart and laden bullocks, had proceeded some way before we overtook them. We passed through a thin jungle for some distance, emerging from which, we found ourselves on a wild, bare plain, here and there studded with straggling brushwood We all collected together, and lighting fires, the hooka passed round, and each one related his achievement, and gloried in the prospect of a speedy division of the booty we had acquired To arrange our future proceedings was by no means an easy matter, as it was necessary to get past Bassim, where the sahoukar had friends, and his cart and bullocks might possibly be recognised in the town My father's advice was to travel till daylight, and then to withdraw to one side of the road as far from observation as possible; to remain there as long as we could, and then to push on beyond Bassim At this halt too there was to be a grand division of the spoil, at least as much of it as could be divided, and Hoosein's party was to separate from us and pursue their road in the best way they could, in the direction which had been pointed out to them Accordingly we again started, and after passing some villages halted about sunrise at some distance from the road, near a grove of trees, in which there was a well of water Before the men betook themselves to cooking their meal after the march, they were all assembled and the quantity of goor having been brought, the ceremony of the tupounce was performed as I have before described I was now entitled to a seat on the blanket with the other bhuttotes I was their equal! The ceremony ended, I untied the knot of my handkerchief, as directed by my father, and taking out the piece of silver, presented it with some rupees to my gooroo, touching his feet at the same time in reverence. This was the last of my ceremonies of initiation. I was a bhuttote, had fairly killed my man, and held myself to be the equal of any of my associates.

After this my father and Hoosen brought forth all the plunder of our late enterprise. It was magnificent. There was a good quantity of gold and silver in money but the principal valuables were the jewels which the sahoukar was taking to Hyderabad for sale, and the cloths and brocades on the bullocks—they were cft the richest description.

The distribution of these was a matter of great difficulty and it was impossible to subsify every one besides, the pearls and diamonds would have best a great deal of their rules by being divided among the men. So it was agreed to share the ready money cooking utersals, and other effects of the sahoukar also the least valuable oloths, into two ognal portions as nearly as possible, in proportion to the number of men of each bend that my father was to have charge of the pewels, which he was to sell at Hyderabad to the best advantage, as also of the most valuable doths and that the proceeds of these were not to be divided until we again reached our place of rendeavous.

The division of the ready money upwards of three thousand five hundred rupees, gave to each man a considerable sum, enough at any rate to support him for some time, the more especially as the share of the former booty was not nearly expended for every man lived as frugally as possible, and all seemed intent upon vying with each other as to who should have the largest share at the general division. Nay many even denied themselves the meanest luxures, and it was not uncommon to see a man eating his cakes without ghee, or any thing but pure water

Bhidinath, however one of the most skilfal of the band, was a complete exception to what I have said. He was a short, stout, active fellow a man who aspired to be a jemadar and with some reason. I have mentioned him before as the bearer of the sacret pickaxe. He was one of the most enterprising among us, and had conducted samil expeditions, in which be had sequitted himself much to the satisfaction of these who had entrusted him with them.

It was curious to see that man eat. He consumed every day that he could get it, two seers of floor made into cakes, a quarter of a seer of ghee (clarified butter) and a large pot of milk containing upwards of a seer. It seemed impossible that one man could demot ish the pile of cakes when he had baked them, and fairly sat down to cut them but one by one they disappeared, accompanied by such draughts of water as would alone have filled any ordinary per son. Towards the end of the pile, however it was casy to ree that his jaws could hardly perform their office and it was almost painful to behold the distension of his stomach. He would stretch himself first on one side, then on the other, get up and stroke down the mass collected, apparently from his throat downwards, and again essay to finish what remained, and after many attempts he would sometimes succeed

Often have I seen two or more village dogs sit opposite to him, during the consumption of the mountain of cakes, looking wistfully at it, in the hope that a portion of each as he ate it might be thrown to them, watching and envying every mouthful as it passed into the apparently insatiable maw, but in vain! Sometimes Bhudrinath would divide the last two or three cakes between them, when every means of eating more had been tried and had failed, but it was oftener that desire of eating predominated. He would appear on the point of gratifying the dogs' expectations,—nay, would even break a piece off and hold it in his hand as if offering it, the dog would move towards him, but the coveted morsel disappeared as the rest had done, and he would return to his expectant station, to resume a watch which too often ended in disappointment

We often jeered him on his enormous consumption of food, but he used to declare that nothing under the daily allowance I have mentioned could satisfy him, or enable him to perform his duty

Our encampment broke up towards evening Friends were seen embracing each other, and wishing mutual success, at length they all departed We watched them over the brow of an eminence not far off, and then started ourselves

Leaving the beaten road to Bassim, we struck off into one to the left, and as it promised to lead to some large town we followed it, as well to avoid discovery as to court new adventures. By the light of a bright moon we travelled most of the night, passing through a dreary country, in many parts covered with jungle, and never entering a village save to ask the road, or to get fire to light our hookas. Indeed we were often repulsed in this. There appeared to be a general dread of robbers, and the walls and gates were usually manned by armed men, on the intimation of our approach being given by the dogs as we passed, but no questions were asked us, as to who we were or where we were going, although perhaps car numbers might have excited suspicion

In this manner, and without knowing where the road we had taken would lead us, we travelled for some days, and as we had purposely avoided the principal roads, it was not to be expected that we should meet with anything in the way of adventure, or with any travellers whom we could entice into our society. At last we came upon a broader road than that on which we had been travelling, and as we had left every danger from our late deed far behind us, we determined to follow it, in the hope that it would lead us towards Hyderabad, or some large village in its direction, from whence we could get upon a well travelled road and carry on our vocation. As it was, we had gained a respectable booty oven for a whole season but scarcely two months had passed, and we could not afford to go on so far as Hyderabad in machyity

The road led us on for some hours, till large mango groves, with here and there the white top of a Hindoo temple peoping over them, gave us intimated that we were approaching a place of consequence. It turned out to be the town of Comerkhér a wealthy place surrounded with most invariant cultivation of wheat and other descriptions.

tions of grain.

"It will be our own fault, said my father if we find not some game here. Having encamped on the other side of the town, the sothaces must carefully pass through the barars, and this ovening may living us booty enough to recompense us for staying here.

The duty of a soths was one which I had also to Lorn. More were even more proud of excelling in it, than in that of a bhuttote for it required the greatest that and powers of dissimulation ability to support characters and diagnises, a smooth tongon and politic demeanour. Bhudranath was one who united all in an enineant degree he was a short, stort, active man as I have mentioned, but extremely handsome, and with a most winning manner. It was his constant beast that he never marked out a victim whom he did not strangle with his own hands.

We passed through the town, describing ourselves as merchants from Hindostan; and as the bales of cloth when stopped by the collector of tells were readily shown by my father and the duty demanded on them chearfully paid, our assertion was credited we were civilly treated by the authorities, and shown an excellent piece of ground for our encampment.

Now dress yourself in your best clothes, said Bhudranth and come with me into the town. Remember your father is a merchant, you are a jemadar commanding his escort, I am a bhula-admee (respectable person) belonging to you. We will take with us Peer Khan, who although a lugha is an excellent sotha, and a respectable fellow when he is dressed and armed and it is hard if we do not pick up somebody"

Our meal was son cooked and eaten and after carefully attirney ourselves we set of into the town to seek for adventures. It astomshed me to see the indifference with which the practiced hands proceeded considering the object they had in view; for to me there was a much excitement in this, as in what I had already learned and practised. I confess our appearance was remarkable. I was very noticeable from my dress and arms, which were of the reliest description consistent with the appearance I had assumed. My face then much fairer than it is now, sahib, with a mustachio already well formed, and a figure which, though perhaps somewhat slender, gave promise of future strength and power. Contrasted with my companions, I felt I was superior to them in appearance, and a little pardonable vanity gave me an air and swagger which were not unfitting the military profession I had set up

We entered the town, and betook ourselves to the chowree where the kotwal and some respectable persons were sitting, surrounded by a few armed men as is usual. As we passed by them we were invited to enter, and received with great politeness. I was placed in the seat of honour by Bhudrinath, who took his station at some distance. A desultory conversation began. My father's name was asked, where he was going, and what he had brought for trade, who we were, and in short the general object of our journey by, as they told us, an unfrequented road, at least from Hindostan. The tone in which this question was asked seemed to me so suspicious, that I thought for an instant we were suspected, and I was endeavouring to frame a reply, when Bhudrinath stopped me

"I represent," said he, addressing the man who had asked the question, "that we were set astray at that abode of unsainted people, Nagpoor. Either with a view to deceive us, or (God knows it may be so, I have heard of such things) perhaps of robbing us, persons from whom we asked information, told us the best and most frequented road was by this place, and truly the town you have the fortune to dwell in is a place of great beauty and fertility, and is evidently in the hands of a most wise governor, and one who protects his people How, Jemadar Sahib, have I not said truly?"

"Indeed," said I, "you have, and the kindness we have as yet met with shows that the servants of the governor are worthy of their master. Truly it is not to be wondered at if the town is prosperous and beautiful in such hands, and such is the mellifluous speech of the kotwal, that we are impressed with the greatest opinion of the discernment of the exalted person who has selected him"

"May your condescension never diminish," said the kotwal, "your slave is not worthy of these encominms, he is less than the least. If my lord could but see the dispenser of benefits under whose beams he lives, he would indeed say that the court of Hyderabad is worthy of being compared with any in Hindostan, as having formed such a pattern of excellence"

"Well," said I, "we shall only be too glad to lay our nuzzurs at the feet of this patron of yours, and no doubt we shall see in him a pattern of noblemen, a specimen of what we may expect to see at the capital of the Dukhun When may we hope to be admitted to the presence?"

"In the evening, after prayers," replied our acquaintance, "it is then that justice is dispensed to these poor unbelieving cultivators, and the durber is enlivened by the presence and heavenly music of a set of dancing women, whom my lord has brought with him from the city

We will come," said I "and I pray you to give your lord notice that we have accepted your invitation to visit him nay that we are dearous of paying our respects to him."

As I finished speaking an elderly man of decent appearance had entered the chowree; he was a Hindoo, and looked like a merchant. He demanded, in rather a peremptory tone, a place to rest in, doclaring that if he did not get it immediately he would go and complain to the ruler of the town.

The spurit of the old kotwal seemed to be roused by the man s behaviour and he declared in round terms that he would not give a foot of ground, or an empty shop, without he was crylly asked.

"Look you, gentlemen," said he to us "Lask you to decide between us. I swear by the Prophet I care no more than a smap of my fingers for him, I have seen twenty thousand better and if he goes to complain, why let him go—he will be driven from the presence with stripes. People like him come in hundreds every day and who can trouble themselves in looking after them?

"You and your master may be the portion of the devil, said the old morehant "ever since I have entered the territories of the Nimm I have been treated in this manner. But it is only what I have heard before. Not a night have I passed without an alarm of theores and God knows, if I had any protection, I would rather he outside your wretched walls than in the zenam of your and him salf. Your bunness are ruscals. I am offired grain at nearly double the price I paid yesierday. I am refused shelter at night. In God's name, what am I to do? Gentlemen, cried he to us, "what am I to do?"

Bhudrinath answered, as I was going to speak, and to my auton

ahment angrily -

"What would you have, O discontented man! I suppose some place has been offered to you, and you have thought it not good enough; or are you drink with opinin? or has hunger after your journer spoilt your temper? Go, betake yourself to the bazar be thankful that you can get any place and, if no one will shelter you, he in the street; bothink yourself that many a better man has done so before you."

The man stood aginst he looked first at us, then at the kotwal and his men, while expressions of delight at his discomfiture ran through the kotwals party "Well said!" "Proper fellows!" "He ought to be turned out of the village" de. At last, without saying a word, he threw down his turban and ran out, bellowing as loud as he could

We all burst into a hearty fit of laughter "That is a queer fellow," said I to the kotwal, "I doubt not you have often such to plague you But send for him back, we will make him ashamed of himself, and I will beg you give him a place to stay in "

"As you will," replied he, "but for your intercession I should not have troubled myself about him Many such have I to deal with One day a fellow comes swearing he is cheated by every one, another, that he can get nothing to eat, when perhaps both are too stingy to buy, another that he has no shelter, when he will not pay the trifle demanded by the bunnea for the use of his shop a third must have every delicacy to be found in a city, and he is furnous because he cannot get them, when, if they were all before him, he could not afford to buy one In short, sirs, there is no end to the fancies, foolishnesses, and I may say tyranny of travellers, and who think me, I suppose, to possess superhuman power, and to have jins (genii) at my command, to bring them whatever their foolish ideas may desire"

"You have indeed no easy situation, and to please every one is impossible," said I "But here comes the merchant," and he entered

"Take up your turban, good fellow," said the kotwal, "and do not be angry, you are no child to be quarrelling with decent people, have you never travelled before, that you should be angry and throw dust on our beards in this manner? In God's name take up your turban, and do some one of you go and see that the good man gets a place for himself"

The man looked irresolute for an instant, then took up the tuiban and walked sulkily out, accompanied by the person desired to attend Bhudrinath gave me a sign, and we took our leave We had scarcely got out, when he said, "That man is ours, now see how I will manage him I dare say he has but few persons with him, and he will be easily disposed of"

We kept our eye on him and his attendant, and watched him take possession of a shed of wretched appearance, with many symptoms of dissatisfaction We loitered purposely, till we saw that he was alone, and then went up to him

"Ram' Ram' Sethjee," said Bhudrinath, addressing him, "what a place is this they have put you into after all, not fit for hogs to he in! That rascally kotwal, for all his smooth tongue, is an arrant knave I warrant, and I have heard, continued he, lowering his voice, "that he has in his employ a number of thieves, whose business it is to cut away travellers' saddle-bags from under their heads at night, and when the poor man goes to complain in the morning he is beaten out of the village. Did we not hear so, Jemadar Sahib?"

"Yes, indeed," said I, "don't you remember the man who met us at the village some coss from this, and warned us of the thioves of Oomerkher and said he had been robbed of everything he possessed, and then driven out with scarcely a rig to cover him? It was then that I determined to encemp ontade, where we might have our own sentinels, and where, if we were robbed, it would be our own fault."

"God help me! I am a lost man! cned the merchant, "I know not what to do " and he beat his head with his elemented hand. In those bags is all I am worth in the world I fled from Surat to save myself from oppression, and it appears that the farther I fly the worse usage I meet. It was only two nights ago, -after watching till my eyes nearly started from my head from want of sleep and not being able to sit longer I lay down and my eyes closed -that an attempt was made to cut my bags from under me and as I woke the thieves snatched away two of my cooking utensils and the cloth I had about me What could I do? Had I run after them, some fellow would have been off with my bags so I sat still, and screamed for help. The villagers were soon assembled about me, and when I told them what had happened a villain who called himself the patel, abused me for defaming his vilinge and I was actually thrust without the gates, and left to pursue my way in the dark, in momentary dread that I should be pursued, and perhaps robbed and murdered. Oh my unbappy fate! cried he will it lead me to! Fool that I was to leave my own country to become the sport of unblessed brutes, such as I have met in this wild country !

"Well, said Bhudmath in a companionate tone you have been used very ill, and you ought to go and complain to the hakim here; report says he is a just man, although those under him may be thieves and meals."

'No, no, no!" cred the man go and complain! and be fleeced of my last rupee! The great man would require a nazzar and every dependent would ask for one did I dare to refuse my situation would be worse than it is now No, no! I have not been robbed as yet, and please God, if I could only get out of this town, I would attach myself to some party of respectable persons going the same read.

Bhudrinath turned to me and took me a few paces aside 'The but line taken," said he our net is new round him you me t draw it tightly How?"

"By inviting him to our encampment. I will propose it and you shall pretend to disagree at first and then, after some persuasion consent. Do you understand?"

"I do, and we turned back.

Bhudrmath again addressed him, while I turned away jee," said he, "you are a man in misfortune, and if we don't help you out of this place you will assuredly be robbed of everything you You must come and put up in our encampment, that is to say, if the Jemadar Sahib will permit it, but the truth is, we are very careful, and allow no one to approach it, as we are escorting a merchant from Benares to Hyderabad, who has a large amount of goods with him "

"For God's sake ! for the sake of your father and mother!" cried the poor wretch, "for the sake of your children, intercede for me 'do not suffer me to be robbed and murdered here 'Ai Jemadar Sahıb," he said to me, catching me by my dress, "you are my father and my mother, a word from you, and I am safe, and my poor merchandise will reach its destination God knows, if anything happens to me on the road, my house will be made desolate, my employers will seize my wife and children Jemadar, you can protect me from this, you can save my life from these fears, which make me most wretched, and are consuming my soul!"

"Thooh good man," cried I, spitting on the ground, "do not be so abject Inshalla! I am able by God's favour to afford protection to one who is a prince among merchants, and you are too poor to In His name follow us, and we will take care of you, we are going to Hyderabad ourselves, and you can remain among the servants, do you, Peer Khan, bring this man out to us"

Peer Khan remained, and we returned to our camp On the way we determined that he should die before evening, or when it should become dusk, and we would then go into the town and visit the evening durbar of the hakim

In a short time we beheld the merchant and Peer Khan, with another man, driving two ponies apparently heavily laden towards our camp

"Come, this is more than I hoped for," said my father, "there are two of them, and two ponies well laden must afford something worth taking, we cannot expect this to be as profitable work as the last, but much may come out of it"

The men approached, and the merchant was presented to my father

"To your kindness," he said to me, "I owe all I possess, and if these poor bags might but be allowed to remain along with the rest of the merchandise you are protecting, it would increase the favour and they would be safe "

"Surely," I replied, "you can unload your beasts, and there is the pile of goods, you can put your bags on the top of it"

It was curious to see the behaviour of the men of the band, they appeared to have an instinctive knowledge of the purpose for which the men had been brought into the encampment. They did not evence the smallest savageness of demeanour as perhaps might have been expected on the contrary every one was most card and at tenture to the strangers one offered to rub down the ponies, an other to make a place for cooking a third to bring grass from the town, or anything they might require for their meal. In a short time we observed the appearance of care and anxiety on the face of the merchant to give place to a cheerful expression, and long before evening both the men were among a knot of the Things, listening to their stonies, and themselves relating their adventures. Intitle did they think what preparations were making and that in a few short hours they would cease to be counted with the living

CHAPTER VIII.

WHEREIN THE READER WILL BE INFORMED HOW AMEED ALI PASSED THE EVENING.

MEASWHILE a consultation was held as usual at my father's tent, and the different parts were assigned to us. The office of bluttote fell to me, and the merchant was delivered to my hands I now experienced none of the heatation which had formerly troubled my mind I only longed for objects to exercise myself on, to perfect my hand in the peculiar knack it required. I had before me the example of those I most looked up to, and to equal or excel them was my sole ambition. I was determined to excel, and the excitoment of the whole system proved a powerful stimulus. In this matter too I had acted a prominent part as a sothal and I began to pride my self on my ingenuity in seconding as I had done, one so completely an adept as Bhudminth.

We agreed to put the men to death immediately after evening

prayer

We had in our camp a boy about twelve years old, the sen of one of the Thugs, who same very beautifully and his father used to seconspany him on the saringee. It was our custom of an ovening after prayers to send for the youth and be entertained by his songs; and he same so well, that he often collected a considerable sum from among us. On this occasion he was called and when he had begun, a message was sent to the merchant to come and partake of our entertainment. He came and his servant also; the latter was a fine stout man, whakeved and mustachised and from the datter by spoke I concluded him to be a rijpoot of Meyarr whose inhabit amis are a noble race and brave to a degree. I eyed him as he set down in his place, with a half formed determination to change the merchant for lim. Bhademath had been allotted to him; and as I reflected on my own powers and his, I felt assured that if he was thought equal to it, I was superior to him, though I might not be considered so Another thought, and my determination was made.

I proposed the exchange to Bhudimath

"As you please," said he in a whisper, "but yonder is a tough fellow, these Meywaree rappoots are active as panthers, and to tell you the truth I did not half like the idea of being allotted to him, but there is no help for it, and if I were to fail there are twenty others who would finish him But do you think yourself equal to hum ?"

"Yes, I do not fear him, I have, besides, a reputation to win, and do not care running a little risk"

"As you will," he replied, "but you must mention it to your father"

I did so The merchant was too much absorbed in the boy's song to attend to us, and the servant was in cestasies, as it was one of his own country

"Are you able to do it? do not try else," said my father, "the man is aimed, and has a dagger at his girdle, a sword I do not fear, but daggers are awkward things, and you might be wounded "And suppose I was," I replied, "do you think the fear of that deters me? No, no, I have taken this on myself, and I will, with your permission, go through with it"

"As you like, my son, I will not oppose you, you have a name to gain, and you do well to run some risk I will observe you narrowly, and be ready to succour you should you require it "

The usual phrase, "Pān lao" (bring pān), was to be the signal, and as we changed places, myself and Bhudrinath, I fancied the servant eyed us with some suspicion, I thought I saw him loosen the degree of the servant and the servant eyed. the dagger in his girdle, perhaps it was fancy, and yet he must have thought there was danger He stood up and looked round at us, and as I contemplated his brawny form, naked from the waist, his chest covered with hair, and his muscular aims, I thought for an instant I had overrated my strength, but to recede would have been cowardly The only plan was to attack him standing, I moved towards him, and cast a keen look on my father, by which I intended that he should give the signal as soon as I had taken my post, he understood me I had gained my place, the man had just turned round to look at me and to get out of my way, and I was just telling him not to move, as I was passing on, when the signal was given

Was it that I was a moment late, or that he had caught a glimpse of the fate of his master? or that in reality he suspected that all was not right, that he was in danger? I know not, but as I threw the cloth around his neck, he drew his dagger to have loosed my hold would have been followed by instant death, he would have plunged it into me and he struggled so much that, in spite of my great strength, he almost succeeded in getting his other hand between his neck and the cloth. All this happened in less time than I take to say it. My danger was imminent, but as fortune would have it a Thug attempted to sense the hand which held the dagger this di verted his attention from me for an instant although half chaked he made an immense effort, which nearly shook mo off and as he reached the unfortunate man, he plunged the weapon into his heartl

The man attered a loud grown and fell, and the blood spouted forth over us both but the action had given me a fresh hold, I was able to use my knuckles, and who could live under the strength I put forth? The rappoots dying struggles were tremendous, but I would not quit my hold my father rushed to me.

Where is the cord?" he eried he will not die in this man ner where is the cord? pass it about his neck, and let two of you pull."

No, no! I exclaimed, "he is nearly finished let me alone, the work is my own, no one shall interfere. Fortunately having thrown the man on his face, I was able to kneel on his back and he was soon past the ability to use his dagger At last there was one convulsion stronger than the provious ones, and he lay still-he was also dead-ny second victim

I arose, breathless and exhausted and as I looked on the protrate corpse before me, I felt indeed that there had been dangerthat I had escaped from a deadly struggle, and that my art had trumphed over strength. Almost bonds the body lay that of the man who had aided me, who had received a desperate wound. All had been so occupied with me, that they had overlooked the poor sufferer; he was lying with his face to the ground grouning stomach can nothing be done for him?

For God s mile said I, "turn him round, the wound is in his

Some of the men accordingly turned him but it was plain to acc that there was no hope of life-the blood poured in a stream both from the wound and from his mouth. He made several attempts t speak, but in vain; he died almost in tantly While I was engaged in the struggle, I several times fancied that the rapports digger had reached me, as I endeavoured to avoid it by scrowing my body as far away from him as possible; but the excitement was too great for me to feel the wound, if there was any Yet now on putting my hand to my ade I found, by the blood on my garment that I was wounded! the blood too was observed by my Lither "Protection of God! he is wounded! he cried. My son, my son, did I not warn thee? did I not I d thee loware of that rajpoot?

thou wast no match for him, my son, and now thou art wounded, ind what can be done?" and my father sat down, fairly overpowered with his emotions

I felt that the wounds were but scratches, and hastened to open my vest "There," said I, showing the wounds, "I said he would do me no haim, and what are these? a thorn from a hedge would have caused a deeper and more painful one"

"Shookur Khoda!" evelaimed my father, "you are not hurt after all" (and the old man's eyes fairly ran over with tears as he looked at the wounds), "but I had feared the worst after that hor-nid sight Ai, Mahomed! thou wast a faithful servant"

The bodies of the merchant and the rappoot were instantly stripped, and removed to the grave which had long before been prepared for them, it was made inside a small tent, where my father, myself, and some others slept, and where it was secure from obser-I never was more struck with the despatch and ingenuity of the lughaes than on this occasion. I had but delayed to have my slight wounds diessed, and to bathe and cleanse myself from the blood I was covered with, when I went to see the grave, thinking to find it still open I was perfectly astonished,—there was no sign of the earth having been disturbed, the place where the hole had been dug had been carefully beaten down, plastered over with mud, and, but that it was wet, no one could have told that it had been touched by the hand of man My father's sleeping-carpet and mine were then laid over the place

"Now," said I to Bhudrinath, "let us put on our best clothes and visit the hakim Will you come too, my father?"

"No, béta (no, my son), I have enough to do to keep all quiet here some one must remain, and you and Bhudrinath have deserved your amusement, so go and take it And here," cried he to some of the Thugs, "take your shields and swords, and accompany my son, and see that you look like soldiers, and not like Thugs, for the night"

Six or eight were soon ready, dressed in clean clothes and armed, and by this time, the moon having risen, and it being the hour appointed by the kotwal for the evening durbar, we set off to the town

Truly, dressed as we were in the handsomest clothes we could select, we looked not only soldiers but handsome fellows Each of us had given a knowing cock to his turban, and mine, of the richest gold tissue, passing several times under my chin, set off my face by giving me a particularly martial appearance. My arms were of the richest description a sword with a hilt inlaid with gold, its scabbard covered with crimson velvet, with a ferrule to it of silver, of an open pattern, which covered nearly half of it. In my girdle, which was a cashinero shawl, were a peah kuba, or knife, with an agote handle, inlaid also with gold, and a small jumbed, or Arib dag ger also highly ornamented with gold and silver I carned too a shield of thinocents hide, the manufacture of Sylhet, and painted and gilt in the beautiful manner of Hindostini, the besses being of silver richly chased and ornamented. My dress was of the finest muslim, which showed my shape through it to the greatest advantage and rich cloth-of gold trousers completed a dress at once obgant, and calculated not only to impress an observer with my correct tasts, but to convince him that I was a person, if not of rank, of respectability

Bhudrnath and Peer Khan's appearance was something less showy than mine; but they looked good and true men, and fair soconds to one of my pretonations.

So we set off to the town, and passing the gate went to the ketwal's chowree, where we hoped to meet with him, or with some one who would direct us to the durbar As it happened, the ketwal was there and, relinquishing his employment of caring for travellers, he accompanied us to introduce us.

Wo walked through some of the streets, picking our way through tethered cattle and all the abominations of a Mahratta town, and at last reached a respectable-looking gateway around which a number of soldiers were standing and lounging. Our friend the kotwal passed us through them and after traverang two open courts, we reached the place where the entertainment and assembly was going on. A fine-looking old man questioned us as to who we were, to which the kotwal replied for us, that we were respectable persons desirous of paying our respects to the Nuwab Salub; to which I added, that, having heard much of his greet name and hospitality we considered that it would be unpolite to pass through his town without paying our compliments to him, and becoming acquainted with so estimable a person.

"You are welcome, said the old man "there is nothing pleases the Nuwab Sahib so much as to see strangers, wherever they may come from; and, Inshalla! you will have no cause to regret having taken this trouble.

"On the contrary I replied, "we cannot think it trouble but an honour soldom allowed to such poor persons as we are ... But pray lend us to the presence.

We ascended a few steps into the hall, where sat the numb, surrounded by a number of persons. Before him were a group of dancing women, displaying their chairs, and entrancing their hearers with songs of Person and of Hindostan. Our conductor lade is wait for a moment; and going up to the numb, said a few words to him, intimating our arrival. "Khamoosh" (silence!) cities the numb, and it was reported by a dozen voices, "let the strangers be admitted."

We were ushered on, leaving our shoes at the edge of the pure white cloth which was spread over the part of the room which led to the numb's mushed. On seeing us he made a polite salutation and I stopped forward, and enveloping the lult of my sword in an embroidered senf I had thrown loosely about my shoulders, I presented it as a nu viii

'Kubool hoor," and the old gentleman placing his hands upon it, "it is accepted, sit down near us. Inshalla! we are much pleased with your appearance, and bid you heartily welcome to this our poor durb is

To be polite I resisted this civility, protesting that I was by far too humble an individual to allow myself so much honour, but he was not to be demed, and accordingly I seated myself in the most respectful attitude, with my heels under me, and placing my sword and shield before me, in the best manner to display their beauty, I turned to the muvab who seemed to be contemplating my appear-

"Mashalla" said he to me, "thou art a brave-looking young fellow Now tell me who thon art, and who these respectable persons are that accompany you ?"

"I beg to represent in your service," I replied, joining my hands, "that I am nothing but a poor soldier, a synd by birth. I have a few men with me, for whom and myself I am going to Hyderabad to seek service. I am come from Hindostan, my father, who is at our camp, is a merchant going to the city with merchandisc These persons," I continued, pointing to Bhudi math and Peer Khan, "are two of my associates, and being superior to the rest, I have ventured to bring them to present their nuzzuis to the presence"

"By all means, Meer Salub, we delight to see good and stout-looking fellows Any one such is a pearl in the eye of an old soldier like myself Let them be brought forward," said he to an attendant, and both advancing made the requisite salutations, and presented the hilts of their swords as I had done

The ceremonies of introduction being concluded, the musicians and dancing women were desired to recommence, and I had a moment's leisure to survey the apartment and the scene before

The apartment opened through three large wooden arches, into the courtyard which we had crossed, and between them were hung large purdahs or curtains of English scarlet cloth, which could be let down as occasion required. The 100m was lofty, and behind where we sat the walls were ornamented with stucco-work in rich. designs Above, on one side, was a small gallery thickly screened, from whence the immates of the renama could observe all that was passing below without being seen. Before us the dancing girls were moving with their psculiar floating motion, and singing while they expressed the amorous words of their song by their gestures. Another set were sitting down by their side, writing for their turn to be called, and both were splendidly dressed and covered with alower.

Nuwab Hoosem Yar Jung Buhadoor a fine-looking wary old soldier polite and courtly in his manner was a good specimen of the noblemen of the Dukhun though perhaps not so effermentely polished as those of Dehli, yet he was one whose appearance com manded respect and his bright keen eye, and the seam of a wound on his right cheek, showed that he had seen battle-fields and was familiar with war His dress was of plain Dacca muslin but a string of large pearls round his neck, which he used as a rosary and the beautiful award lying before him on the carpet, would prove to the most casual observer that he was a man of rank and consoquence.

He observed me looking round, and addressed me thus -

We are in a poor place here, my friend but what can be done? The duty of the Government must be performed, and we cannot carry our house about with us. However we have made the place as decent as it could be, considering we are in the jungle and by the favour of the prophet, we have brought bright eyes and sweet voices with us, so that we do not lack amusement. Say what thinkest thou of our selection? Youder is Zora, sitting down second to few in Hyderabad either for beauty of person or sweetness of voice the other new singing is one we picked up on the way. In ther but, Inshalla! in a short time she will be fit company for the other and we shall take her to the city with us, to astomsh our neomaintances.

The dancing girl Zora, hearing her name mentioned, turned round and looked towards me I was instantly damled by her beauty She was not so fair as some of her profession I had before seen; but if she was not so fair her features were small and regular; and her large antelope like eyes, when turned full on me seemed to pierce me through. It was not a quick glance, but one that was fixed slowly upon me, and was not withdrawn. I was then young and modest and I was fairly abashed. She observed it and turned round and smiled to one of her companions.

Come, and the numb, smiling you are not to steal the hearts of my tuwarfs. You are a dangerous-looking fellow; and that handsome face of yours will do much muchief if I mustake not. Tell me the news from Hundostan report speaks of war in that quarter and that the Mahrattas and Produces are arming

'Why," I replied, "there are such reports. We heard that there was service to be got either with Sinder or Holkar, and that they and the Termghees would soon be at war, but we preferred trying our fortune in the Dukhun-for we heard the pay offered by both was very small to soldiers armed as we are, as they place then principal dependence on the freeps under the Francese generals, by whom alone the Ungrez Feringlices are to be opposed "

"Av 'said the old numb "the times of fair lighting are passing away, and the invencious of Linopeans are fist supplanting the brivery of the men of Hind God I nows where it will end! Even at Hyderabad the Peringhees have got such a hold of the place, that God knows whether they will ever be driven out. And they train the miscrible kafas of Telingina to light in rinks and perform evolutions which are truly wonderful, but the power of Alla is great and they are in fixout with him!

"One comfort, however," and I, "is that the Francese and Ungrez are at bitter enmity, and if there is a fight, one or other, by the blessing of God, must be beiten. Then will be the time for true believers to rouse themselves, and free their country from the yoke of both "

"You tilk like a young, hot-blooded boy this cannot be We of Hyderabad are too much beholden to the Ungrez Fermghees for freeing us from the demands of the Mahrattas and the oppression of Hyder Alı and Tippoo, to quartel with them, and after all I question whether we could do much against them Tippoo fell, and he had the advice of the Francese in building his fort God protect me 1 it was only a mud will before the Ungrez"

"You saw it then?" I inquired

"Yes, indeed," said he kindling, "I saw the whole, and if you had also, you would have wondered to see the 'soger' battalions scrambling up the breach like cats, headed by their officers, in the face of a fire of guns and matchlocks which would have scattered the people we call sipalees like chaff Truly they are something like men, and if we of India had fought like them, would they have possessed one foot of ground? Inshilla! they would not, but it is no use regretting. And now Sikundur Jah has made a treaty with the Ungiez, and sits in his zenana like a cunuch, leaving them to take care of him and his country"

"Then you think," said I, "that I have no chance of service at the city?"

"By no means," said he, "you are, I think, pretty sure of it There are plenty of openings for a fine young fellow like you, and your appearance will take with some of those who command troops. Inshalla! you might have had it here, but my list is full, and you are not likely to separate from your men?"

"No said I, 'that I could not the poor fellows would starve in a strange land and having collected them, I must perform my promuse of taking them to the city"

Now you must see my pride, Zora, dance, said the nuvab. "Inshalla! your heart must be hard if she does not make it ache.

as she has done that of many a one.

The group who had hitherto been anging were desired to be seated, and Zora prepared to stand up. The bells for her ankles were brought, and she tied them on. The musicians to accompany her tuned their instruments, and after a short prelude she stood up If I had been struck with her appearance sitting how much more splendid was it now! She was not tall, but exquisitely formed, as far as could be judged from her peculiar dress, which was so loose from under her arms as completely to hide her form to her ankles but it was of the richest description.

It was made of a dark lileo-coloured gause, in bands alternately with gold tissue the bottom trimmed with gold tissue very broad, as far as her knees, upon which there was rich embroidery in gold thread and seed pearls. Around her she had thrown with extreme grace a scarf of the lightest muslin and silver of the same colour as her dress so thin was it, that as she moved, it seemed almost to float away from her in the air caused by her motion. The colour of the scarf round her head in contrast with her complexion, made it appear much fairer than it really was, and her large soft eyes still more brilliant and swimming

The musicians began their usual prelude, and with it one of Zora s companions, a pretty girl, the slow movements of the dance. After a few turns she resumed her place, and Zora herself like the full moon emerging from a cloud, sailed towards us with a slow and graceful motion. How shall I describe to you, sahib, her exquisite movements! Every turn displayed her form to greater advantage and I gazed till my soul was fairly entranced But how much more was I affected when she began to sing! Having performed the dance, both the slow and quick, she censed; and after a prelude by one of the musicians behind her she broke out into an impassioned chuxul It was one I was very fond of myself. I listened till I could have fallen at her feet, and worshipped her as a peri from heaven. My soul was so intoxicated with the blessed sounds I heard, that I was insensible to all around me

She at length ceased and the nawab, who had been observing me attentively asked me what I thought of the songstress and her

"Most wonderful is it," I replied "my liver has become water before her fascinations. It is fortunate for me that I am not to here within their influence, or I were lost for ever—I could forego fame and my profession to lie at her feet and dream away my existence" "You talk like a foolish boy," said the nuwab, and must not give way to such fancies, many a man has been ruined for ever by them Persons like her are greedy and insatiable of money, as we are told of the sea, which swallows up everything that is cast into it, without showing a sign on its surface beyond that of the transient " slqqrr

"Cannot they love ?" I asked, "are they so utterly mercenary?"

"Utterly Alas! young man, I have known and felt it, but let us change the entertainment, I have some rare bhyroopeas with me, who arrived from Hindostan the other day I have but heard them once, and my sides ached with laughter You, no doubt, are well acquainted with their style, yet it is somewhat new to me they shall be produced"

"May your condescension increase, nuwab," said I, "truly your favour is great on your poor servant, and of which he is utterly unworthy Nevertheless, he will not fail to make known the fair name and hospitality of Hoosein Yar Jung Buhadoor wherever his fate may lead him, which is the only return he can make for it "

"You will prosper, I hope," he replied, "young fellows of your appearance rarely fail to make friends But here come the bhyrocpeas, let us see what new amusement they have prepared for us, something to laugh at, I doubt not"

They were three in number, and twisting their faces into comical expressions, so as to cause the whole assembly to burst into a simultaneous fit of laughter, one of them stepped forward and said, that in the country whence he came there was once a nuwab, a very wise man, who governed his country as no one had done before, and was a lord victorious in war, and that, if the hoozoor pleased, his slaves were prepared to relate some of his adventures

"Go on," said the nuwab, "we are attending, see there is nothing indecent, for you are in the presence of the khanum"

"Asteferalla!" (God forbid!) cried all, making their salutation towards the screen, "may the favour of the khanum be upon us, and may Alla give her a long life and posterity to bless her shalla! we shall find favour in her sight, and take away our garments filled with gold "

They commenced one of the men, dressed ridiculously as a child, personated the nuwab The story begins with his youth, how he is petted in the zenana, and the two others changing their dresses to those of females, one is his mother, the other his nurse nuwab is pampered, spoiled, becomes unruly, is declared to be possessed by the Shitan, a moollah is called in, and charms and wonderful potions, prepared by the aid of magic, are administered The great child screams and rears, kicks his mother and nurse out of the assembly upsets all about him and the confusion and noise created by all this, especially among the tuwnis, made a scene of fun, at which we all laughed heartily

In an meredibly short time the men again made their appearance and the second act began. The child had grown up to be a youth, and to be flery and uncontrollable. Women, wine, horses, and arms are his enjoyments reckless of everything he plunges into dissipation, sets his parents at defiance, runs into debt, is surrounded by sharpers and parantes, who despoil him of all he possesses, and he has given himself up to harlots and dehanchery and thus ends the second part.

His father dies—he is now nuwab he is the head of a proud house, has men and soldiers at his command and his territory to manage. He forthwith kicks out his former companions, discards every one he had formerly had near him, good and had together and gives himself up to a new set of regues who had proyed upon his father—men with houry beards, only the greater adopts in villary He has a quarrel with a neighbouring noble, and the two prepare for v

The troops are described how they eat mountains and drink rivers, and the numb himself as going forth like a bridegroom to meet his bride, like the lightning from the thundercloud, or a river overrunning its bounds, terrible, irresutible, before whose glance men quall as before a hon! His horse and arms—the former large of carcass, small of limb feet large and broad, floot as the autclope, coungeous as the panther Of the arms, the sword which, wielded by his father had cut through a buffales skin and divided the theekest audling

He goes forth, and the fight commences the horse charge, and the nuwab and his enemy meet (each is mounted on the lack of a man) They fight sword after sword (made of wood) is pluntered. One of the horses is killed it is the nuwab s! He too is killed! he is at the mercy of his foo! No he is up again; the fight is removed it is long doubtful; fresh weapons are given by attendants at last he is retorons. Alla Akbar! the victory is won the enemy is routed.

Then follows the torture of the presences, the ruling of the genera. There is one show beautiful, small, delicate in form an eye like the gazelle a, fair as the beautiful of Room or the fabled ones of England. She falls at his feet he is captivated. She conquerand then his as performed. They live happily for some time; but the fame of the beauty of the daughter of a neighbour reaches him. His soul is on fire his former love is neglected. He proposes marringe; it is accepted the bride comes home and a deadly jealousy ensues between the rival wives. The quarrels of the zenana nie described, and by the shrieks of laughter from behind the screen, it was easy to believe how naturally all had been described and acted.

The numb has reached middle age, he is now a father of a family, a respectable man, a religious man, surrounded by moollahs, who flatter him, and have usurped the places of his former companions. He is as debruched as ever, but it is not known. He passes for a just and good man, and his durbar is described, and his judgments. What was Solomon compared with him? or Hatim Tai, or Lokinan the wise? And at each enumeration of his virtues the assembly loudly applicated, and directed their looks to the real number who sat as the spectator.

Again the numb is shown, old and decrepit, worn out by disease, surrounded by quacks, from whom he demands nostrums to make him young and vigorous. His zenana is fuller than ever of women, who flatter his vanity, tell him he is as young as ever he was, and yet are false to him, but he has a son who promises to excel his father, who is a Mejnoon in form, a Roostum in valour, before whom his father's enemies are scattered like chaff from the grain

before the wind

The old numb is growing more and more decrepit and querulous. His fancies and longings are described in a most laughable manner, and as the final event approaches, he sinks into his eternal sleep, sure of the seventy hours of paradise and the eternal youth, which is the portion of true believers

Having concluded, they stepped forward for the largesse promised "Well, Meer Sahib," said the number to me, "how like you this?

have the men done ill or well?"

"Ul-humd-ul-illa!" said I, "the works of Alla are wonderful, and assuredly these fellows are of his especial handiwork. I have seen many of their caste before, but never any like these"

"They shall be well rewarded," said the nuwab, "and yet. despite of our having laughed at the whole story, there is much of a moral in it, and much satire Would that many of the rising generation could receive a lesson from it, they might become wiser and better men"

"Ameen," I replied, "my lord's remarks are just I did not notice the saure when I heard it, but now I feel it, and it is just"

The night was far advanced, and requesting leave to depart, I rose to be gone I was passing the tuwaifs, when an old woman pulled me by the sleeve, and said hurriedly, "If you seek an opportunity, there is another who desires one Be secret, you shall hear more from me" My blood boiled, 'I slipped a piece of money into her hand, and departed

CHAPTER IX.

IN WHICH AMEES ALL PROVES HIMSELF AN EXCELLENT HAND AT MAKING A BARGAIN AND THAT HIS AMOUR HAS A CHANGE OF SUCCESS.

I sam my blood boiled could it be that one so lovely one who had kept company with the nobles and men of would of Hyderabod, had seen anght to admre in me, who was unused to courtly scenes, and was even yet a boy deficient in manner and address? Could it be that from my dress and appearance she thought me nich one who would squander my substance upon her? These thoughts were passing through my mind, and we had nearly reached our encampment without my having interchanged a word with my companions. The silence was broken by Bhudrmath.

"How is thus Meer Sahib?" said he what has tied your tongue? have you nothing to talk about after our night s entertainment, no remarks to make on the beautiful kunchine? By Alla! though it is a Mahomedan cath, I would almost be content to give up the heaven of Indra, and turn Moosulman, were I sure of being attended in the paradise of Mahomed by a set of hours; just such as she. And to think of her belonging to that old writch the numb and to be buried in this bole of a Mahratta village, when she might have half the nobles of Hydenbad at her feet were she there! By Alla! I say again, it were worth the while to try and entice her away from the old sensealist, and it would be something to talk about, not to mention her company on the read, and the rare addition she would make to our evening amusements."

"Why I replied corclessly the girl is, as you say of sur passing beauty and no doubt feels herself uncomfortable in this abode of swine yet to get her away would be no casy task, and what should we do with her when we got her?

I shall try and see if her coming with us is any such marvellous difficulty he rejoined "and you know if afterwards there is any pursuit, sho and the rest of her people are easily provided for

Now you speak like a cold blooded Thug I retorted angrily (for deny it as much as I would to myself, I could not but feel that the dancing girl had more than interested me) "and I would sooner quit you all, and get back to Hindostan the best way I could, than that a hair of her head should be injured

"I did but jest Meer Echib; you know I am not one who wars with women, except when they come before me in the fair and law fal exercise of my rocation. No, if we get the girl, it must be by fair means and strait laced as your father is on many points, he is too fond of a good song and good music to deny us lawing her in company; so do not mind what I said and do not go to sleep upon your anger to your poor friend, a indeed you have any

"I am not angry," said I, "though I certainly felt my blood rise when you alluded to her. We will consider about the rest in the morning, and if we can but persuade my father that the girl comes of her own accord, I do not anticipate any objection, but we must be sure that she will go first, and to this end I have a kind of clue which may guide me"

"How? did she say aught to you?" he cagerly inquired

"No," said I, "how could she in that crowd? But you know I understand Persian, thanks to the old moollah my teacher, and you do not, and from the words of the last plaintive song she sang, and her mode of expressing them, I have a shrewd gness that she is tried of confinement and of her mate. You know the old proverb, 'Kubootur bu kubootur, bāz bu bāz'—Pigeons mate with pigeons, and hawks with hawks"

"Well," said Bhudrinath, "according to that, she is more likely to look to you than to me, and you know I am a Biahmin, therefore I leave her and the matter to your management, I am ready to assist when I can be of use—Inshalla! as you people say, we shall make a corner-stone of the old fellow's beard and laugh him to scorn"

"Ameen!" said I, "we will try at all events, and you shall hear from me in the course of to-morrow more upon this subject." We then separated for the night, and I was glad Peer Khan and the rest of the men had been so far behind us, as not to have been able to overhear any part of our conversation. I confess that, as I lay down to sleep, I carnestly desired the success of our scheme, though as yet it could hardly be called one; and though I had in some degree struggled with it, I had not been proof against the fascination of the dancing-girl, nor indeed was it to be wondered at after the words of the old woman.

Soon after the morning prayer, the leaders of the band were assembled to see the opening of the bags of him who had died the evening before. My father presided in the assembly, and one by one they were brought from the pile of merchandise. We had indeed got a prize, and it was not to be wondered at that the care of them had cost the man they belonged to so much anxiety. In each of them, among a quantity of old clothes, rags, and old copper vessels, were concealed small boxes filled with precious stones, pearls, small diamonds, rubies, and emeralds, and in two of the boxes were sets of ornaments made up, and set with jewels, and two in particular, a bazu bund, or ornament for the arm, and a sir-pesh, or ornament for the turban, were particularly splendid

My father, who had a good deal of experience in these matters, pronounced the whole to be worth at least fifteen thousand rupees, and offered the band the alternative of distributing the whole in as equal portions as he could, or of waiting till our arrival at Hydera bad, where they could easily be sold for ready money. The latter after some deliberation, was determined on, as had been the case with the former booty

I proposed, as I knew that we might perhaps run short of money on the road, especially if we met with no more rich travellers, to offer one of the two ornaments for sale to the nuwsh and as I had made his acquaintance to take it to him mysell. The proposal was agreed to, and I was not without hope that by some lucky chance I might fall in with the old woman who had spoken to me the night before, and might be able to arrange a meeting with her which should guide us in our future plans so accordingly about noon I called Bhudrinath to accompany me, and we proceeded to the palace, as it was called by the villagers.

By the way we met with our trend the kotwal but I out him short with "Another time, Kotwaljeo, —for it seemed as though we were to have a long story—"another time, my friend we will pay you a visit but at present the matter we have in hand is urgent, and it being past noom we are afraid of being denied admit fance, and so you must excuse us."

"Of course, and he "I will not detain you, and I shall not fail to present myself at your camp this evening to receive your further commands"

That means, said Bhudranath as we moved on, "that he expects a present. These worthes have been my study for many years.

Ay" and I, "we must pay him well, and he will be the first to cry up our praises should anything happen but do you anticipate anything?"

"Not I," said he I wish we could always do our work as seenrely and get as well paid for it but here we are at the nu

wab a gate

An attendant of request took in our names to the numb, and after a short delay we were again unbered into his presence and received with the same cirility as we had been the night before After some desultory conversation, I opened the object of our visit.

"Khodawand, and I my father pleads an attack of fover and cold for not attending to present his nexter at your feet, and he trusts you will pardon his accump neglect. In his behalf have brought a rare piece of jewellery for your inspection, which he hopes may please you; and by its purchase you will not only materially assist him, but it will become the property of one worthy to pe is and wear it.

Thus saying I produced the ornament for the turbin, and laid it before lime. He was evidently much struck with its branty and in fine water of the piccious stones, and after turning it in every position he could to catch the exact light for it, laid it down with a kind of sigh

"It is indeed beautiful, and worthy of the turban of Bundugan All himself, but," said he, "I am too poor to buy it, its value must be very great"

"No doubt," said I, "my grandfather must have paid handsomely for it, but times have altered with us, and we have been glad to sell our family property for whatever it would fetch. In this instance, far be it from your slave's intention to put a piece upon an ornament without peer in its fashion, yet methinks it would so well become the forehead of my lord that he ought not to let shp such an opportunity of possessing it, to be enabled to show it one day at the court of his prince"

"Thou sayest truly, and if I may, I will but show it in the mahal, and see how the persons of my household like it. Inshalla! they will approve of it, and then we will see if we can come to terms about it "

"Certainly," said I, "the time has been when it would have been nothing for our house to have presented a tray of such to one of my lord's power and rank, but we are reduced, as I said, and are no longer fit possessors of what we dare not wear"

The nuwab took the jewel, and went into his zenana He was absent a long time, but we could see by his face on his return that at had been approved of

"They have looked at it in a thousand ways, and have discovered that there is good fortune to come with it, not that I need any, but you know what a parcel of old women are," said he now I will ask what may be the price You know we nobles of Hyderabad are not overburdened with money, and you must be moderate in your demand"

"Why," said I, "I am flattered by the opinion of those who have seen it, and can only say that my grandfather (may his memory live for ever!) paid so large a sum for the jewel that I am afraid to My lord must observe particularly its exquisite water He, I say, collected the stones one by one during a long period of his life, and they cost him alone six thousand rupees, the gold around them is somewhat more, but my father will esteem himself fortunate if five thousand rupees be given for it"

"It is too much," said the numab with a sigh, "where have I five thousand rupees to lay out in such a bauble as this? My friends, I have been gratified by the sight of it, but to purchase it is out of the question the money I have not Yet stay, allow me to have it valued by a jeweller, and we may perhaps come to terms "

"By all means," said I, "I have told my lord no he in stating the price of it. But let the jeweller see it he may fix a smaller sum and such is our urgent necessity for a little ready money that perhaps we may be induced to take something less."

The jeweller was accordingly sent for and arrived after a short time. He was shown the jewel and from the expression of admiration on his countenance, I could see we had not overvaled it. He took it to the light, and putting on his speciacles, examined it in every possible way. At last he returned, and taking the speciacles from his nose, asked the price we had fixed on it. I told him.

"At the time this was made up, said he, no doubt it was worth the aim you mention, for the stones are of mre water novertheless, we all know that men cannot afford to expend money as they used to do and all things considered, perhaps at present four thousand

rupees would not be too much, and indeed a fair price

It is too little we must be content to sell other articles to supply our necessities. So Nuwab Sahib, said I, with our profound thanks for your condescension, we ask leave for our departure;" and I took up the jewel and arose.

Stay said he "I offer you three hundred rupees more four thousand three hundred, surely that is sufficient

Make it five hundred," I replied, and it is yours." And after much haggling on both sides, the price was fixed at four thousand four hundred and fifty. Of this, two thousand fire hundred were paid by the nuwab a treasurer in money and for the rest, at my request, a bill was made out by a sahoukar of the village on Hydern bad. And after again offering our thanks to the nuwab, we took leave of hun for over

Not a bad mornings work, said I to my companion as we walked homewards, attended by some of the nuwab s soldier, corring the men who carried the brgs of money; the sight of the con will gladden my old fathers heart and it will be something to divide among the men who are really in want of money and will keep them comfortably till we reach the city oven though we shoul fall in with no more rich prizes.

"Indeed you may congratulate yourself on your address and good manners; for without them you could not have carried the matter off in the way you have done early he how if I though I small far older Thug had tried it I should have most likely failed for want of a plausible story. The old follow swallowed the account of your grandfather as if it had been as true as that we are now here. By Arishna, thou are a rare boy!

These matters sharpen one s intellect and though I could not deceive an unfortunate traveller as you can you see I am of some u c at a punch, Bhudrinath.

'All will come in time mid be; I do not despair of you after this, and if you accompany me in my work, you will soon excel me I think "

"We shall see," I returned, "but our errand is not complete. wo have not met the old woman"

"Ha! so that plan is still in your head," cried he, "I warrant it you dreamed of the kunchinee last night, and your young heart is all on fire"

"No," said I laughing, "not quite that, but I have some hope, and I shall return to the kotwal's chowree after a little time, and end I shall return to the Kotwal's chowree after a little time, and perhaps the old creature may be in the bazai and may see me "

"Shall I accompany you?" asked he
"No," said I, "I think it would mar the business I will go alone, the presence of another besides myself might prevent her, if I meet her, from being communicative"

"As you will," said he, "as you are determined to carry the matter to the utmost, you have a better chance of success than I have and header you are a proposal while I could only be an have, and besides you are a principal, while I could only be an agent"

Thus conversing, we arrived at the tents, and dismissing the soldiers and money-carriers with a handsome present, I had the bags moved into my father's tent, who was asleep, I ranged them before him, and awakening him, pointed to them

He rubbed his eyes, grumbling at being aroused from his slumber, but they were quickly fascinated by the sight of the bags, and I could not help laughing heartly at his astonishment, as he took them up one by one, guessing at their contents

"What, my son! Ameer Alı, where hast thou got all this? there must be five hundred rupees in each of them! One, two, three, four, five," said he, counting them, "two thousand five hundred impossible! My son, what hast thou been doing? my brain is in astonishment Where didst thou get it?"

"There is just what you say, father," said I, "each contains five hundred, or nearly It is the price of the jewel you gave me to sell, which it seems was worth more than we thought for I asked at a venture five thousand rupees, and I have brought you four thousand four hundred and fifty, which was as much as I could get, here are hoondees for two thousand, and the rest is in the bags"

"As much as you could get, boy!" cried my father, "why thou hast done wonders Mashalla! we are rich indeed, this is more than I ever expected," and, his eyes fairly running over with tears,

he embraced me warmly

"Now," said I, "as I have done good service, I have in return a favour to beg, which I hope my father will grant, and it is a matter I dared not settle without his sanction"

"Say on," said my father, "I can deny thee nothing"

"Why" continued I, "there is a turnif of surpassing boarty who sings like a bulbul, and who is anxious to accompany us to Hyderakad. I deed not allow it without specking to we Hyderabad. I dared not allow it without speaking to you.

The old man's visage clouded. "A tuwnif! said he "and dost thou not remember my son, all the cautions I have given thee against persons of her condition, and hast thou so soon forgotten them as to get into their company on the first occasion which presented itself?

"I represent, said I, that neither have I forgotton them, nor have I gone into her company. I saw her at the nuwels durbar last night, but did not even speak to her "

"Then how knowest thou that she desires to go from hence?"
"I have heard it, said I, "from one who is attached to her, an old woman, who, I doubt not will be here before the evening

My father shock his head. "I do not disbelieve thee, my son," said he but I mistrust thy young heart and hot temper It is a danger too great to be encountered for once with us, and she would get thee into her toils, and then father duty and profession will be alike forgotten, and I should lose thee, my son, which would kill me.

Do not think so I pray my father" said I there is not the deager you anticipate she would follow us, and we should see but little of her except we desired her presence to sing to us on the dreary evenings of our journey And grant me this request, I pray you; its the only one I have over asked, and perhaps I deserve some thing for what I have done hitherto.

Thou dost indeed, he replied "anything else would have been gladly granted without a demur on my part. However I have con idence in thee, my son, and therefore have it as thou wit, I will not

gaining thee in the matter

So far therefore there was no objection; yet my heart smote me as I thought on the concealment I had made of her being in the pay and service of the nawab and that her connectron with him night bring us all into trouble. However thought I, women have sharp wits and if she truly desires to get away from him, she will take her own measures.

As soon as I could, therefore I set off to the bazaar; and after laitering along the row of shops, and purchasing articles that were really required by us, I ascended the steps which led to the chowize, and was soon in conversation with the lotwal, who enter tained me with the gossip of the town, and did not fail to endeavour to impress me with a high sears of his power and influence. More than once I was on the point of confiding to him my plan, and offiring him a bribe to assist me; but I checked myself on the consideration that he might take my money and afterwards play me false. As it happened, however I was not long in suspense for I saw the old woman in the bazai beneath me, making the best of her way in the direction of the gate of the town by which I had entered, so I took my leave of the worthy kotwal, begging him to come to the camp in the evening for a reward for his civility and exertions

I had, however, lost sight of the old woman before I got fairly down into the street, and following the direction she had taken, overtook her just beyond the gate

"Mother," said I, "am I he whom you seek?"

"At mere jān! (ah, my soul!) have I at last found thee, my prince? Surely I have not ceased in my endeavours since last night to meet thee, I saw thee enter the palace, but my old limbs would not carry me quick enough to overtake thee." And she threw her hands over my head, and cracked every joint of her fingers by pressing them against her temples

"Are we secure against observation here?" she continued, "for

I have much to say to thee, and that quickly "

"Not here," I replied, "I will go on to our tents yonder, and you can follow me, I will wait for you near them "

The old woman hobbled up to me as I stood under a mango-tree secure from observation Quite out of breath, she sat down When she had recovered herself, she untied a corner of the cloth about her person and presented me with a small ring

"This," said she, "is from her you know of, and for the love of Alla, my soul! do you exert yourself for her she is dying in this place, and is subject to all the torments the caprice of that unblest nuwab can think of She is one day in favour and loaded with kindnesses, another, in a fit of jealousy or rage, he deprives her of every comfort, shuts her up in a lonely room, and will not even allow me to go to her You, my son, are young and brave, you will not suffer her to continue in this state, she who is the pearl of Hyderabad, who has found favour in the sight of princes and nobles For the sake of Alla, exert yourself, and she is free, and will accompany you to the end of the world. She has seen you, and your beauty has entered into her soul and is consuming her liver, and between this and her former miseries, she is to-day in a state of madness, so that even I cannot pacify her"

"I am ready, mother," said I "Tis true I have never been blessed with hearing a word from her, save in her songs, but I can understand them, and there was one she sang which has been ringing in my ears ever since I heard it. Say, had it any reference to me and herself?"

"You have guessed well," she replied, "I told her to sing it, in the chance of its being understood, and, blessed be Alla, it was not in vain; but the time is passing fast, my son, and what can be done?"

Nay " and I, that I wish to hour from yourself for I know how to proceed neither do I know this town, nor the house where she lives, so what can Indivise? I am helpless in this mitter.

yet willing to the utmost "

Lasten then "said the old woman; "I will describe the place and you must come after me and see it from the outside that you may know it in the night. The place she is now in, and where she will most likely sleep to-night, is a small tiled house, at the corner of the wall of the senana toward the street. There are two win down, some distance from the ground, yot not so high but that she might got out, if any one helped her on the outside. There is no other way of her escaping for it would be impossible for her to get through the senana, and afterwards through the open courts, which are full of soldiers. Say will you dare the adventure or be a coward, a namurd, who would not risk a drop of blood for a woman and one so fair as she is ?

"I am no coward, I believe," said I, though I have no deeds of arms to boast of I accept the risk, and I pray Alla to defend us!

Are there soldiers near the place?

No" said she, not one the only danger is at the village-gate which is always guarded. How will you pass this?"

"If that is all," said I, "trust to me; and Inshalla! we will all laugh at the nuwab s beard in the morning But tell me, how do you intend to contrive to accompany us?"

"Ah, I have arranged that already I am allowed free egress at any hour of the night, upon the various protonces or necessitive of my mistress and I can get out at midmight and meet you any where you may determine."

"This is good, said I; now come and show me the place "

She guided no through the gate we laid just passed, and turning down a narrow alley desired me to mark the various windlings as we went along which I did. We at last reached a street between two high walls, one of which was the number a guanta and passing on we arrived at length under a small tiled house, which answered the description she had given of it.

"This is the place she said "and that is the window from whence she must descend. It is not very high, as you see and there will not be much difficulty in her getting out.

"I see none" I replied, "it she has only a stout heart. Tell her to the her sheets together and drop them over we will be below and take care she reaches the ground easily

"I will, said sho; "and now away! we may be seen and if so Alla be our help !"

'She sees us! cried I "for there is a hand stretched forth from the window

"It is she!" said the old woman, "and oh! what joy it must be to her to know that there are persons anxious and willing to serve her! Now, my poor bud, thou shalt no longer have a cage, though it be a gilded one But away, my soul, away! do not loiter here, a smile from her were dearly purchased now, and to-night you will have thousands, ay with her blessings too"
"I go," said I, "but fail not, nurse, for your life see that all is right, you must meet us at the corner we last passed"

The old woman nodded her assent, and I withdrew as quickly as possible from the spot, though I would have given worlds for one glance, for one approving smile, from the object of my love soon as I reached the tents, I summoned Bhudrinath, told him of my success, and unfolded to him the plan as it stood at present was rejoiced, and saw nothing objectionable in it

"I have one thing, however," said he, "to represent, which you may do or not, as you please"

"What is it? Say on "

"Why," he replied, "although it will be, as you say, an easy enough matter to get out of the town, I by no means think it so easy to get in "

"By Alla! you say truly," said I "What advice can you give to aid my plan?"

"You see," rejoined he, "that the gates are guarded I tried myself to get in last night, before midnight, as I had an affair of my own to look after, and the fair one expected me, but the sons of dogs at the gates (may their sisters be defiled!) swore I was a thief, and after interchanging abuse for a long time they finally shut the wicket in my face, and I was forced to return in the worst of all possible humours So my advice is, that we go in before nightfall, and take up our quarters in the shop of a bhutteara with whom I have scraped an acquaintance, the fellow will not suspect anything if we leave his place in the night, as I hinted my bad fortune of last night to him to-day, and he was the one to propose my coming to his place in the evening, to go wherever I pleased afterwards what say you? Shall we go to the fellow, or trust to our wits to get in the best way we can?"

"Your plan is a good one," said I, "and I thank you for your bad luck last night, but for it, we might have gone and knocked our heads against the gate to no purpose, to be sure we might climb over the wall, and I wonder you did not think of it"

"I did," he replied, "and was undecided about attempting it, but some fellow might have seen me, and, taking me for a thief, have thought no more of sending a ball through me than if I were a dog, so I came away"

"Thou hast a wonderful deal of discretion," said I; "now my hot blood would have led me into some scrape, whereas thou hast enten thy ill humonr "

"And am now at thy service, rejoined he. "So we sleep minds to night, which I am glad of and we will get out through the farther gate it will be some way round but that is better than facing the fellows at this gate, who I suspect, know me, or will recogniso my voice for I was too angry to discrise it."

We will, said I and now I must in and cat, for I have fasted since the morning and an enterprise is ill done on an empty

atomach

After evening prayer Bhudrinath and myself went into the town and it was well we did so, for the men at the gate knew him per feetly and good naturedly joked him shout his bad success the night before.

"Thou art beforehand with us to-night, my friend," said one follow; and thou art wise, for hadst thou come later we should have shut the door in thy face as before."

You might have been more civil," said Bhudrinath, laughing "I suppose, though you would not let me in, you will let me out in case I should bring any one with me?

Why that is not against orders exactly but you would have to pay toll so if you have not brought money with you, you had better stay where you are.

I may find some probably and Bhudrinath to the speaker. denough at any rate to fill your hookaha for some days, if there is occumon.

"Agreed, said all the fellows; a bargain by Alla! a fow rupees, and you may take any one you please the numbs liarem too to boot, though there is not much in it by all accounts.

"Who is your wughyrs, your officer? said I; and one of the men stepped out. "I am he, may it please your nobility and I can wink at an honest fellow a doings as well as another "

Provided you are paid for it," said L

"Of course," said he, laughing we are lucky when chance throws gentlemen like you in our way"

Here then," and I, "are five rupees, to entertain yourselves with; and see that you don t get drank, or the blame will fall on us.

May your condescension increase! cried the whole; "we are your worship s devoted servants. "Now how do you mean to get out? asked Bhudrinath as wo passed on. "Not this way," said I "if I can help it, for there will be a discarbance about the matter and if we go out here it will give a class to our discovery We will try the other gate first."

I would by a wager they are all drunk in an hour" said he

"and we may then open the gate for ourselves, but here is the bhutteara's shop, and those kabobs smell very savoury, I sometimes wish I was not a Brahmin, that I might eat them as you do "

"Ah," said I, "it is well for you to say that, but perhaps they may have proved too tempting at some time or other"
"By Krishna! I swear you wrong me," cried he, "Brahmin I am, and will be You know my creed tells me that I have been successively transformed through every grade of suffering humanity, and now that I have reached the top, I am not such a fool as to descend to the bottom and undergo the whole pain again for the sake of a few kabobs"

"You are right," said I, "nevertheless I will try them, I could not eat when I wished at my tent, but their smell has raised my appetite wonderfully" And in a short time my fingers were pretty deep in a smoking dish of kicheree and kabobs, as hot as pepper could make them

"Friend Bhutteara," said I when I had done, "surely the shitan himself must visit your shop now and then, for no other could eat those scraps of meat, except he had a mouth of brass"

"I beg pardon," said the fellow, "but I was away on business, and I suspect my daughter must, as you say, have put too much pepper in them, but I can make my lord a cup of sherbet, a poor imitation of what true believers will drink in Paradise, and it will cool his month "

"And a hookah, if you please," said I, "then I shall feel more comfortable"

CHAPTER X.

"Sleep you or wake you, lady bright, Sing Megan oh, sing Megan ee! Now is the fittest time for flight, And thy lover waits to set thee free "-Old Song

I HEARD the bhutteara bustling about in the interior of his house for a while, and was gratified to see that he so evidently exerted himself to please me In a short time more the sherbet was prepared, and its grateful coolness, with the rose-water which had been mingled with it, allayed the irritation of my mouth, and enabled me to enjoy a hookah, which, if served in a less costly apparatus than that the nuwab had offered me, was as good in flavour, its pleasing fumes composed me, and quieted the feverish excitement I had hitherto been in

"You appear comfortable," said Bhudrinath

"I am so," I replied, "and I doubt not you envy me, in spite of your Brahminical belief"

"Perhaps I do, said he yet having never tasted the luxures of meat and other things you set such value upon, I cannot estimate them sufficiently and I care not about them nay more, the very idea of ment, the sight of it in its raw state, the blood, the garbage accompanying it, are loathsome to me and I very much question. were I to become a Mahomedan, whether I could ever bring myself to eat it. Pah! the idea is horrible."

I could not help laughing heartily at his disgust, and he was not angry "But, said I, how are we to wake at the proper time? an hour too soon or too late, and our enterprise is ruined.

"I was thinking of the same thing he replied and turning to the bhuttears, he asked him how late he remained up; "For" he continued, my friend and I have a small matter on our hands about midnight. Can we trust you to awaken us if we aloop?"

Certainly, said the man "I never shut up my shop till after midnight, for sometimes travellers drop in, and poor hungry souls. the first place they seek is the bhuttears a shop and were there not somethme hot for them wee be to me!

"Here is a trifle over and above the price of the kabolis. and L.

throwing him a few rapoes, "to keep you awake."

He picked up the money with many salams and good wishes, and my hookah being smoked out, and feeling drowsy I laid myself down and slept, but not long As is often the case, excitement overpowered sleep, and I woke in alarm lest I had overslept the time I had not however done so. Looking round me I saw the bhuttears busily employed in cooking cakes, while his little daughter was turning some kabobs on the fire; he observed me and said, "You are seen awake, sahib, it wants a good hour yet of your time; you had better go to alcop again you see I have work in hand which will keep me up beyond that time, for some travellers have arrived, and it is as much as I can do to satisfy their hungry stomachs.

'I cannot sleep again, said I "I am refreshed, and another hookah or two will keep me awake till it is time to go."

"I understand you, said ho; you young men are hot blooded and are always sooking adventures. But it is only as it ought to be; I would not give a cource for a young fellow who had not the spirit you appear to possess. "May you prosper said I but let me have another hookah, for truly the first has left a grateful flavour in my mouth."

He disappeared into the interior of his house for a short time and returned with it.

"Now said he, if the first pleased you, you cannot but I; gratified with this it is prepared from a choice receipt and it is only persons of rank and taste like yourself to whom I ever give it; is would be lost on the multitude.

It was, as he said, delicious, and my pipe had been refilled several times to my great satisfaction, when he told me the time I desired was come

"Yonder star," said he, "rises over the houses a short time before midnight, so rouse your companion, you will be expected"

I did so, Bhudrinath was soon awake, and ready to accompany me We took leave of our host, and directed our way through the now deserted streets to the place of assignation

"We are wonderfully like two thieves," said he to me, "what if the village watch should catch us? we should look very foolish"

"I see no danger of it," said I, but haidly were the words out of my mouth, when we saw the patrol coming down the street before us There was an open gate close to us, and stepping inside we hid ourselves behind the large doors We had however been observed, and as the men passed, one said he was sure he had seen two men lurking there

"Nonsense," said another fellow, "you are always seeing men in the dark Come along that is just midnight, and I am sleepy, we will go a little farther and then beat the duphra, if there are any thieves about, they will run away"

A loud yawn was a pretty good proof of the truth of his assertion, and they passed on Just as we emerged from our hiding-place, the duphra and horns were sounded, and answered from the other sides of the town, and then all was again still as death, save when a village dog howled his wild cry to the moon
"There is now no danger," said I, "come on, we are near the place "

A few paces farther brought us to the corner where the old woman said she would await our coming, and there to our great joy we found her

"My blessings on ye that ye are come," said she, "I thought the night would never wear away, and I have been waiting here for some hours

"Is all prepared?" said I, "is she ready?"
"Ay, that she is, I warrant the hours have gone as slowly with her as with me, and listen," said the old woman, "she has hit upon a rare device, which will mislead suspicion," and she laughed heartily

"For the love of Alla be quiet!" said I, "were we heard or seen we are undone"

"For that matter there is not much to apprehend, for this house on one side is deserted, and inside the wall, on the other, is nothing but the nuwab's garden, where no one stays at night"

"Tell me then what her plan is, can we assist it?"
"Oh no," said the woman, "it is her own invention, and a rare

one it is I had just come to her when she sent me out to get a bladder full of blood. I could not make out what she wanted it for but I went and bought it, though I had to get a kid killed on the pretence that the meat was suddenly required. Well, no sooner had I returned, than she poured some of it on her bed, rumpled and dambed the sheets, tore off pieces of her dress and scattered then about the room, also some of the beautiful hair from her head, which she also threw about, and in short made the place look as if she had been wounded, and there had been a scuffle to get her out. Ah, it was a rare device | and the best of it is, that a numb who lives at a distance, and who has been trying to get this one to give her up (and there has been much quarrolling between them on the subject) will be suspected, and it will never be thought that she has run off of her own necord.

"Tis wonderful," said I "and, proverbial as is woman a wit, yet, by Alla ! this is an instance which ought to be written in a book; but we are delaying here to no purpose."

Come, then, said the old woman "it is but a few stens farther "

We stationed ourselves under the window in which there was a strong light burning and the old woman giving a sharp but low cough, a figure was seen at the casement; it opened; it was she! Is he here? said a low sweet voice, which thrilled through

"Yes, lady the humblest of your slaves is here and prays you to be quick, for the sake of Alla there is no time to lose.

"I will be with you instantly replied she.

"Do so," said I but be quick, or we are lost

She withdrew from the window and a few instants after re-appeared and let down a box and bundle. I unfastened them, and she drew up the shoet.

Now said she, "I come; but what is to be done with the sheet ? I must fasten it inside ero I descend."

'Leave that to me, said I "only come down."

A few instants more were occupied in fastening the cloth, and she then stepped out on the ledge. My heart beat audibly lest she should fall and hurt herself and we should be observed but I and Bhudrmath placed ourselves underneath, to catch her if she fell It was however unnecessary for she was on the ground in an in stant, and I had pressed her to my heart!

The rest must not be left undone said I; and ascending by the sheet, I entered the window The room was a small one and by the hasty glance I threw around it, it appeared indeed as though there had been a scene of violence and bloodshed. Clothes were strewn about the floor and bed were stained with blood, and paceof torn apparel, lying here and there, gave to the whole the appearance of what was intended I did not stay a moment, but unfastening the sheet, threw it down, and getting outside the window dropped to the ground The shock hurt me considerably, but it was not the time for complaint We held a hurried consultation as to which gate we should go out by, Bhudi math again preferring the one by which we entered This, however, was overruled by all of us, and, guided by the old woman, we took our way to the other We met not a soul in the lonely streets, and, by the blessing of Alla, on reaching the gate we found the wicket open, and the man who should have guarded it fast asleep, with his shield under his head and his sword by his side Stealthily and slowly we passed by him, lest our footfall should awake him, and gaining the outside, we hurried along under the shadow of the walls until we gained the plain on which was our encampment

When fairly within our guards, who were stationed round the spot, the fair being, who had hitherto clung to me, suddenly sank down To fetch water for her was the work of a moment, and after forcing some into her mouth she recovered

"I was overcome with joy," said she, throwing herself at my feet, "and indeed, if you knew the anxious suspense I have been in ever since last afternoon, you would believe me At one time I was overgoved at the prospect of deliverance from my hateful servitude, and again, as the night wore on, and I tried to count the hours, I sometimes thought that the time had passed, and that my preparations had been but a mockery And now to find myself free and with you, ah! my lord, it is too much joy-my heart is like to burst"

I raised her up and caressed her, and seating her under a tice, put my arm around her, and we sat in the lovely moonlight in silence, she could not speak, and I would not break the current of her thoughts, whatever they might be

How long we sat there I cannot tell, we were interrupted by the "This is no time for dalliance," said she, "my lady requires rest, and methinks, sir, were you to get us on before morning breaks, we should elude pursuit, and you could follow us "You say truly," said I, "and it shall be cared for "

Fortunately the cart of the sahoukar had not been sold, and . though it was still laden with his effects, there was plenty of room in it for the two females

I went to Bhudrinath, whom I found fast asleep after his night's work, when he was fully awakened, he seemed to comprehend that his services were again required

"What, more work!" said he "Well, Meer Sahib, I am ready, what is it?"

"It is too bad for me to rouse you so soon," said I, "and to require you to go on with this matter for Alls, who sees my heart. alone knows how grateful it is to you for your assistance this night."

"Do not say so, my young friend," cried he langhing "I would do anything for a little fun and excitement.

Why I rejoined, you must know the old woman has advised instant flight from hence so you and some of the men must be ready to be off before daylight and as I have prepared the old sahoukare cart for her you will be easily able to get eight or ten coss from hence to morrow and the same the next day when you must halt till we come up Remember you are a Moosulman for the time, and she must be protected and screened as though she were the wife of one.

"I understand, said he, "and will do my trust faithfully

I believe you. I replied and now for the road, which to take I am undecided. I have heard that two branch off from this to Hyderabad "

Stay said Bhudrmath I think Peer Khan knows both. I will go and bring him you know he is one of my set.

He went and returned with the man. "I have explained all to him, said he, and now hear what he has to say I beg to represent," said Peer Khan, "that I know both roads, but not perfectly still I should think what the Moor Sahib counsels the best, for the other is a said lonely one, and few travellers go by it as to the chance of being pursued, we must trust to our good tukdeer (destiny) which has brought us thus far without an acci dent, and, Inshalla! will carry us on."

"Well, Peer Khan, said I, you must be the guide you are theonly person who knows anything about the road, and I can only say that if you are steady and faithful I will make you a handsome present when I overtake you at Nirmul."

May your condescension increase Meer Sahib, said he: "but putting the gift out of the question, you know very well that there is not a man among us who would not give his blood to-morrow or any time he might be called upon, for you. But come Bhud rimith, I had better get the men together and be ready"

I returned to the tent, where I found Zora and the old woman atting covered up in their sheets, and warming themselves over a fire they had lighted. In a few words I told them of the necessity of flight, and added, ' Alas ! I do not accompany you now; we have had a consultation on the subject, and have determined that for the sake of mutual safety we must for the present separate Alla, who sees my heart, knows that it will burn with anxiety and care while I am absent from you; for know lady that from the time I first beheld you in the durbar my soul hath been consumed by your branty and as then I was plunged into despuir at the thought that you never could be mine, so now is the excess of grief that I must part with you"

She was silent for some time, but at last throwing back her veil, and again displaying her beautiful face to me, she put her hand into mine "I trust you," said she, "I have no fear now, except for you, I will go without a murmur, for I see how necessary it is for us to separate, yet assure me, my beloved, that you will not be long away, and I am content"

"I repeat," said I, "only two days at the furthest We shall follow you to-morrow evening, or the next morning, and once that we are in motion, I will push on till I overtake you, where we will wait for my father and the lest"

"By what road do we travel?" asked the old woman

"By Nirmul," said I, "it is out of the way, and we have therefore chosen it, it is not probable that the nuwab's people, if he sends any out, will take that direction"

"You are right," she replied, "they will not But I would give much to see him to-morrow, when the flight of this pretty bird is known "

"What shall we care," said I, "except to laugh at his old beard? I will go into the town as soon as the alarm has spread, and you shall have all the news when we meet again"

"Now bid me start," said Bhudrinath, who then entered the tent, "and I am off For the present I am Jumal Khan, by which name inquire for me on the road "

"May God protect you all! You have a precious charge, my friend," said I, "and would that I could even now take your place"

The women were soon ready, and I saw them comfortably settled

m their vehicle

"Now I am off," cried Bhudrinath "Drive on the cart, and do some of you fellows keep about it, as though it were a decent man's zenana"

"Alla Hafiz!" said I, "and may the Prophet guide you safely!" They went on, I stood watching them, until a turn in the road hid them from my sight, and I betook myself to my tent, where,

throwing myself down, sleep soon came over me

I was awakened by my father, who came into the tent where I was lying, he seemed angry with me for having been out all night, as he said, on some unprofitable if not unworthy business, "but," said he, "it is time for the morning prayer, and after that I will hear what you have been about" I accompanied him to the skirts of our camp, where, spreading our carpets, we watched for the blush of dawn to go through the usual forms, when they were over, he seated himself and desired to hear what I had done; "I fear me no good," said he, "but tell me"

So I recounted the events of the night, and was propared for a severe lecture, and a great deal of advice and reproof. I was for once agreeably disappointed instead of being angry he langhed heartily at the whole affair and applicated our arrangements in having sent Zora out of the way.

The sun was barely risen, when there arose a noise from the town, and it was plain enough to us that the discovery had taken place. The whole place was in a ferment people hurried out of the gates and collected into groups, and by the pointing to our camp, and their gesticulations, we were obviously the suspected persons and as we had anticipated, about twenty horse and came froot soldiers ussued from the gate nearest to us, and came directly towards us. They surrounded our little camp and one or two who appeared the leaders of the party rode up, and in an authoritative manner demanded to see our loader.

I had previously arranged with my father that he was to continue to support his character as a merchant, and to put me forward as the jennadar of the party and as he knew that I had appeared in the character at the nuwabs durbar and supported it well, he had readily acceded to my request.

You soo the leader said I, m my poor person; and what may be the demands of the Nuwab Sahib so carly? Is there any thing his poor servant can do to prove how much he is impressed with the kind treatment he has received?

"You must be content to be our prisoner" said the man knughtily "until your camp is searched; a strange event has happened, and you are suspected.

"Of what? said I appearing thunderstruck of what can I be suspected? But the camp is before you, sirs by all means search it. Perhaps," said I hitterly "your town has been robbed, and it is not wonderful that persons of respectability should be suspected in this unmannerally country

Peace?" cried the man, we must do our duty; and I for one for the sake of appearances, should be glad to find you had not requited the numb's hospitality with treachery

"I am dumb," said I, notwithstanding that I am in after astonishment at your words but by all means search the place and afterwards perhaps you will in kindness unravel this mystery to me"

He rode with me to my tent, and dismounting entered it with me followed by two or three of his men. There was nothing in it but the carpet and mattress on which I had slept a few cooking utensits, and some bales of plander piled up at the farther end. "She is not here said Azim Khan the leader of the nawahs party "let us go to the other tent."

I accompanied them, and making a salam to my father, told him that the nuwab's people wished to search his tent, as they had done mine, and added, "Do not oppose them, lest the nuwab should in truth see reason to suspect us"

"Certainly not," said my father, "here is the tent, and I am the nuwab's slave, it is not likely that an old man like me should have women concealed here"

So his tent was searched as mine had been, and afterwards the temporary screens of the men, but nothing was found, and the party were evidently disappointed

"We are on the wrong track, and I told you so," said Azim Khan to the leader, "depend upon it, as I told the nuwab, it is that rascal Sheffee Khan's work we all know him to be in the employ of the hakim of Nursee, who wanted to get the girl, and we had better be after him than wasting our time here"

"A girl!" cried I, "truly this is most wonderful, for the sake of Alla satisfy my curiosity, what is all this about? By your head," said I to the leader, "but that it seems a serious matter, I feel much tempted to laugh at the idea of my poor camp being searched for a girl,—some slave, I presume, who has run away or been carried off by her lover, say, sahib, what has happened?"

"Why, it is no laughing matter to us, whatever it may be to you," said the leader, "send your men out of hearing, and you shall have the whole story"

"Away with you!" cried I to our men, who had crowded round;

"this is no tale for your ears"

"The affair is this," said the man "until last night, there was in the zenana of the nuwab a dancing-girl of surpassing beauty and accomplishments, but early this morning her apartment was found empty, marks of violence everywhere about it, blood on the sheets of her bed, and some of her hair and portions of her clothes strewn about the room. There was no alarm in the night, the gates of the town were closed and guarded as usual, and it seems some work of the shitan that this should have taken place, and that we should have had dirt thrown on our beards without knowing by whom There is the nuwab raving and swearing like a madman, his zenana is all in confusion, and, what is worst of all, he threatens to discharge every one of us, without we either bring back the girl or get him intelligence of her within three days"

"Protection of Alla!" cried both I and my father, "this is most extraordinary And have you no suspicion who has insulted you in this manner?"

"Why," said the man, "you were first suspected, as being strangers and a large party, and we were desired to search your camp, but here we find nothing but bales of goods and indeed you are not likely persons to have carried her off, for I question whether you ever saw her

"I dare say said I, "she was one of the women who were in the durbar the other night, when I paid a visit to the numb."

"Very likely he returned "were those you saw good-look ing?

"They were both so, said I "one was tall and fair the other was shorter and not so fair but yery handsome.

That was the girl, and the man "I have seen her myself once or twice, when I could get inside of a night. But I am wasting my time here, and must return you may depend upon my fully exonerating you from any suspection in the matter.

fully exonerating you from any suspicion in the matter.
Your favourable opinion," and I "will no doubt have its due weight and I pray you to carry our condelence to the numb and say that if we have permission we will wait on him to express

I will deliver your message," and he; "but I think you will not be admitted, as really he is in great greef, more on account of the usuit, perhaps, than the loss of the gril. I take my leave?

He saluted us and rode off and not long after a servant of the number terms, with a civil message and some fruit, to say that he master regretted he could not see us, and was sorry that he had been under the necessity of scarching our camp. We dismissed him with a present, and reiterated our condolences, which he promised to deliver "And now said I to my father "this is no place for us longer we must be off What say you to a march in the attempora?"

"It is good, said ho; we will go Tell the men to be pre-

CHAPTER XL

Sir Ralpk.—What! hath he been caught?

10g.—Ay sir as castly as a gudgeon; for when I offered the balt he never thought about it, but swallowed it incontinently—Old Play

We were on our way towards Nirmul in the afternoon, and as we had heard no more of the numb and his distress, we were referred from our anxiety; but I was in great dread the whole time we remained at the town after the numb s people had left us, lest some chance should open to them a clue to detect us. The bhatteam might possibly reveal what he knew of our proceedings; for all though he knew not our object, still our remaining with him for patients of a time (as he must lare formed a notion that we were after some woman) coupled with the disappearance of Zora, might have led him to suppose and very naturally so, that we had carried her

"This is my brother of whom I have spoken to you said Bhadrinath, presenting me to him he has now as you see, over taken me, and we shall journey on together All his men are en camped outside the town, but as he is more comfortable with me, you see him here.

We exchanged salutations, and, by way of drawing him to the subject, I asked Bhudrinath when we should start.

I cannot delay said I "that detention at Nurseo was most inconvenient, and but for that we should have been far on the road by this time.

The man stared at me, and at last said to Bhudmanth, 'Surely you must be joking when you say this gentleman is your brother why you are much older and your features do not resemble in the least.

We are not real brothers," he replied, but cousins: you know that cousins usually call themselves brothers."

But how comes it," said he "that he is the jemadar of your men, and not you, who are the elder ?

"Why it is a long story and would not interest you," said Blud runath, "suffice it to say that he is the son of the clder branch, who married long after my father having lost his first wife; so, by the consent of the fimily and my own, he was declared leader though he must confess I om his adviser.

I protended to be ashamed of my dignity and allowed, though I was nominally superior yet that I could not get on at all without ту соция.

"Well, said the man, you have curious customs in your country but in overy one they differ. Here your relative attactions would be reversed and so I suppose I must treat with you, Jemadar Sahib; I dare say your cousin has told you all about me?"

He has, said I, at least as much as you have teld him but we are both present, and what you say to one equally concerns the other; so I pray you speak on without reservation.

I will not then recur to the past, said the man; suffice it to say that I have every reason to wait to get out of this place as far as Hydershad; there I shall be secure from mine enemies. I therefore propose to accompany you, if you will guarantee me protection and concealment on the read."

We are ready to do that," said I but you will allow we shall ran some risk; for besides protection and concealment on the road, we must defend you if necessary and all this requires some recom-nense.

"True, and I am in no condition to drive a bargain, therefore

"You are liberal, I see "I rejoined, and you shall find us to be so also Perhaps one hundred and fifty rupees will not be thought by you exorbitant ?"

"It is not, half I will pay you now, and the other half when we arrive"

"Agreed," said I, "it is satisfactory, and now say how you intend to travel If I have permission, I would advise a mode which would be certain to escape detection "

"What is it?" cried he engerly

"That you should here or buy a cart, and travel in it, at any rate for a few marches, my brother has his zenana with him, and you could not be discovered, no one would date to search a cart which held females"

' By Alla, it is a rare plan " said the man, "I wonder it never entered into my head Yet cart I have none, and how to get one without giving a clue to my flight-"

- "Do not distress yourself about it," said Bhudrinath, "furnish us with the money-about one hundred rupees will be enough-and I will go and purchase one, and account to you for whatever may be over ?
- "And my camels, and horses, and servants," said the man, "what can be done with them?"

"How many of them are there?" I asked

"There are two camels and two horses, and I have three or four servants, whom I wish to accompany me"

"Then send them all to our camp at night," said I, "they will not be seen, and if necessary they can be sent on a march "

"You are ready witted people," cried he, "and what has cost me days and nights of anxiety, you have settled satisfactorily in a few Now I clearly see there is no time to be lost, and I go to bring the money, and give directions to my people"

So he left us

"Well done," cried Bhudrinath to me, "you fairly took the words out of my mouth, and I think the fish has taken the bait"

"I think so too," said I, "the fellow may be a very sharp revenue collector, but he is no match for you and me, and you see he is a greater man than we thought for, as he speaks of his horses, camels, and servants No doubt we shall have a good round sum from him"

I hurried to my father, leaving Bhudrinath to manage everything his own way if I should not return in time to meet the man we expected

He was surprised to see me, and exclaimed, "I did not think you would have left your adored so soon, to what am I indebted for this early visit?"

"Nay," said I, "father, do not mention her, it sounds like banter, and I have other work in hand just now than attending even to

"Av indeed! and now tell me, my son, what thou hast in view" "Why" said L Bhudrinath and I have secured a man in the town, who promuses to be almost as good a prize as either we have had before and when you see two horses, some camels, and servants come into your camp this evening do you allow them to remain, and start them off as early as may be to-morrow morning towards Hyderabad.

"I will do as you wish," said my father but tell me, Ameer Ah, what is this you are about ? Are you sure there is no risk, no danger?"

As far as I can see there is not but hear what has been done already and then judge whether the matter ought to be persevered in or not. If you do not like it, we will drop it at once told him all.

"You are both of you doing your work well, and I approve of it greatly " said the old man; I will on my part receive the camels, etc., and will send on a party of gravediggers this very night.

We will set off to-morrow night or early the next morning Bhudrmath was absent when I reached the house in the town. and I had to wait a long time for his return, which was not till near evening; however I had the society I best loved, and the hours fled quickly I was nevertheless overjoyed to see him return with a cart and two fine bullocks. He had purchased the whole from a set of dancing girls, and the cart was fitted with curtains, in the manner of those used to carry women.

When it was brought up to the house he dismissed the driver with a small present.

There, said Bhudranath, "is nmety five rupees worth and the concorn is cheap enough our only care is now for the person who is to ride in it.

Where is he? said I; "are you sure of him?"

"As sure, said Bhudrinath, "as I over was of any one; he is now gone to take leave of the hakim of the place and will pretend he has done all his business. He has sent his camels and people to the camp, with strict orders to obey whoever there may be there in authority and I myself directed them to go to your father and recorve instructions from him. The man himself will be here at nughtfall.

Inshallal cried I "traly may we may we are fortunate mo-thing has gone wrong

Just as we had completed all our preparations our friend came and by this time it had become quite dark, so that he joined us unobserved and as we had sent word to him that the care had been purchased, he brought with him what we supposed to be his valuables, one of his servants carried the bundle, which appeared carefully tied up in waved cloths, his hookah, and his bedding

"Are you sure you have omitted nothing?" he asked
"Certain," said I, "everything is ready I have been to the gate, and have told the guard that we have a long march before us, and will pass out a little after midnight with two carts and our people "

"Well," said he, "then here is your money," and he counted out seventy-five rupees to me

"Now we have nothing to desire," said I, "but to be informed of your name, which hitherto you have not told us"

"Call me Kumal Khan for the present," he replied, "you shall know my real name at Hyderabad "

"As you will," said I, "doubtless you have good reasons for not discovering yourself to us Meanwhile, as you say, Kumal Khan will do as well as any other name, therefore, Khan Sahib, I think the sooner we take some rest, the more we shall be refreshed for our journey to-morrow"

"I can he down anywhere," said he, "I dare say I shall sleep moreover, which my care and anxiety have prevented my doing for some nights past"

He spread his carpet and covered himself up Bhudrinath followed his example, and in a short time they were both asleep, as their deep breathing testified

Strange destiny, I thought, there hes the man who has but a few hours to live, side by side in peaceful slumber with one who will be actively employed in his destruction A few hours, and then situations will be changed, oh, how changed! one to lie senseless in the earth, and the other to live and breath, and to tax his wits to gain fresh victims "Ya, Alla!" I exclaimed involuntarily, "thy purposes are inscrutable!" We were roused at the time appointed by the men, and our preparations for departure quickly completed. I saw Zora safely deposited in her cart, as also her old attendant, next Kumal Khan in his, and putting myself at the head of the party, we were soon beyond the gates of the town and at the encampment Here I sent on Zora's cart, and desired one of the men to come back and give us due notice should he meet the tillaees, or scouts, on the road then sought out my father, and inquired whether he had allotted bhuttotes and shumsheas (persons to hold the hands) to the servants and grooms

"I have settled everything," he replied, "and given every man his instructions, there will be no difficulty if all is ready before us But are you sure that Kumal Khan, as you call him, is not armed?"

"He has a sword," said I but what of that? Bhudrinath and I will easily manage him, and he will not be on his guard.

"Then keep well behind," said my father "if there is any scuffle he will not hear it, and I will send a man back to you when we meet the first of the scouts. You can then do as you please either bring him on, or deal with him there, as you like.

"Very good, said I "we will be guided by circumstances.

I saw with secret exultation how beautifully overything had been arranged, as our men and our acquaintance a sorvants passed me To every one of them was attached one of the most expert bluttotes, with two others to assist if necessary yet they disposed themselves so carelessly that suspicion was out of the question. Each one as he passed threw a look of intelligence towards me, as much as to say Here is work we delight in; and I felt truly excited as the whole band was before me, their arms glancing brightly in the moonbeams.

Thus, thought L is the joy my father told me of and what could raise such feelings within me in the common plodding pursuits of life? When these fellows are but my own, then shall the name of Ameer Ah be drended and feared; men shall wonder at it many a tmid woman a heart shall beat as she listens to stories of me, and allows her fancy to purture to her him of whom she hears such deeds of daring hravery "Yes, eried I aloud for I could not control myself the time will come, sy and soon the present is poor work to what I have thought of and will put into execution!

The voice of Bhudrmath recalled my ideas. In the name of Narayun and all the gods," said he; what are you talking about?

Come, we want for you.

I urged my horse down the bank, and was with him in an unstant. Kumal Khan put his head out of the curtains, and asked if we had assembled our men.

Yes, said I; "they are all before us, except my cousin, my self and a few of our attendants, who will stay round von."

"That is right, said he "I shall sleep if this vilo jolting will lot me. Oh that I were on my horse, instead of being cooped up in this cart!"

"Patience said Bhudrinath; I dare say you will soon be out of it again."

That I shall, my friend "said he "when I dare show myrelf" and so saying he shut the curtains.

Bludrianth and I rode on some time in silence; at last we reached a rung ground, which apparently led down to the bed of a river for I thought I saw the water glittening in the moon s rays. The jungle was thicker than before and I involuntarily turned to Bludrianth.

"Surely this is the spot," cried I, "we must wait for the cart," for we had preceded it a long way

"We had better do so," he replied, "it will soon be up"

We had just heard the rumbling sound of the wheels, when the man I had sent on with it came up to us

"What news?" I asked, "is all prepared?"

"By this time it is," said the man, "when I met the first scout I returned to tell you, they have fixed on a beautiful spot, and I doubt not that the band are waiting for you, having done their share of the night's adventue"

"Well," said I, "we don't want you here, so go on again"

he begged hard to remain, and I allowed him

As Kumal Khan passed us, Bhudrinath gave the driver the signal, he nodded his head in compliance, and telling the men who were to hold our horses to be near and in readiness, we got behind the cart and followed it down the descent About half-way down, the bank of the road sloped into it, and rose into a small eminence I marked the place, and saw that the driver had done the same, the cart gradually diverged from the track, one wheel went up the bank, it leaned fearfully over, and at last came down with a terrible crash

We were off our horses in an instant, and ran up, Kumal Khan

was groaning beneath it

We lifted it up and got him out, but he was either so frightened or hurt he could not speak At last he recovered, and the first words he uttered were a volley of abuse at the driver

"Look!" cried he, "a smooth road, not a stone or a pebble, and yet that son of a base mother must needs drive up yonder bank, and has nearly killed me"

"He shall be well punished for his carelessness," said I, "but are you hurt, Khan?"

"My right arm is very painful," said he, holding it, "and I wish to Alla I had a horse to ride, instead of going farther in that concern"

"It cannot now be helped," said Bhudrinath, "and it is well none of your bones were broken We will keep nearer you in future, and see that the fellow drives more carefully"

The cart had been by this time set fairly in the road again, and Kumal Khan's mattress and pillow arranged As he turned away from us, and laid hold of one of the posts of the curtains, and had his foot on the wheel to get in, I threw the handkerchief round his neck "What—what is this?" was all that escaped him, the rest was an indistinct gurgling in his throat for an instant. The wrench I gave to his neck must have extinguished life, for he relaxed his hold of the post, and fell to the ground without sense or motion

"Neatly and cleverly done, cried Bhudrinath I could not have managed it better myself; you see he does not stir-he is dead enough. Now Meer Sahib, believe that a man can be killed before he touches the ground,"

"I must see you do it, said I: this fellow held on by the cart for some moments. But come, I added to the men, "lift the body into the cart, we have no time to lose." They bundled it m, and we set off as rapidly as the bullooks could trot.

"What if he should revive with this tolting? said I to Bhudrineth

"Never fear he replied; "if he does, he will only have to be killed over again but depend upon it he is dead enough no man ever survived the wrench you gave him-his neck is broken. The old gooroo has taught you well. I see plainly

"I own I feel more confidence every time I do it," said I 'and I should not care if even now I had one or two more fellows to try my hand upon.

Nay " said Bhudrmath laughing rest you content with what we have done. See, we are at the bhil, and yonder is the whole band collected."

Worode up to the spot, and the first inquiry was from my father:

Have you brought him?"

Yes." said I "the earth that held him is in the cart.

"Did he do it? he eagerly asked of Bhudrinath, and pointed to Ay did he, he replied, "and most properly too He had him all to himself I did not interfere.

"Al humd ul illa! cried my father; he is a worthy son. Come, continued he to all the men do not loster here but make the best of your way to the river-side we will follow and I dare say overtake you.

Seeing there was no more to be done I pushed on to the river the Godavery and finding that all had been ferried over I urged on my horse to overtake Zora s cart for I knew not what she would think of my absence, nor how I could well account to her for it antisfactorily but I trusted to chance to frame some excuse passed the men, who were straggling along in parties of ten or twolve but still I did not see the cart though I had desired those who were in charge of it not to drive fast. I became anxious and urged my horse into a gallep.

Well it was that I did so, for when I had proceeded some distance I heard a confused clamour before me Could she have been at tacked by theres? was my instant thought It was probable; for the road was marrow and the jungle thick on both sides, and seeing the few men with the cart, thieves might have surprised them drew my sword, to be prepared, as the noise and screams seemed to increase, and in a few moments more arrived at the spot. There indeed was a scene of violence! the moon was still shining brightly, and I could see all before me

The cart was surrounded by the five or six men I had sent on with it, and who were defending their charge bravely, two of the lobbers, as I supposed, were stretched on the ground, the rest were aiming cuts at my men, which they parried, but just as I got up, one of my men fell, and the rest looked exhausted. I suspect neither party observed my arrival, so intent were they on their own proceedings, and I could see that my cry of "Bismilla!" accompanied by a cut which struck down one of the robbers, was as startling to them as unexpected, while my faithful men, who now saw me plainly, set up a shout, and attacked their opposers with renewed spirit

The scuffle lasted only a few moments longer throwing myself from my horse, I drew my pistol from my girdle, and discharged it at a thief who was coming up to me with his sword uplifted, the ball passed through his body, and he fell. On this the rest of the band turned and fled. We pursued them for a short distance, and secured a youth who was one of them, the rest got clear off

CHAPTER XII

SHOWING HOW JUSTICE IS OFTEN SUMMARILY DISPENSED

When we returned to the cart, my first business was to soothe my poor Zora, whose screams, added to those of the old attendant, and the oaths, execrations, and shouts of the contending parties, had and the caths, execrations, and shouts of the contending parties, had made a din which defies description. I found her terribly alarmed of course, but the rascals had not been suffered to approach her, and when she was assured by me that I should not again quit her side, she was calm, and gave me a history of the attack, which was, that as they were going along, the thieves began to pelt them with stones from the bushes on the sides of the road, and at last, perhaps not thinking them armed, rushed from their concealment, and the fight began

The wounded thief was unable to walk, so he was put into the cart with the dead body, the boy's arms were tied behind his back, and a cord passed round his neck I tied to my own saddle Leaving twenty men to guard the wounded, we then quickly proceeded We arrived at a large village before the sun rose, but the villagers were up, and the herds of cattle were pouring out of the gates on their way to the pastures We desired the men to take up the encampment under some tamarınd trees, and my father myself, and Bhudrinath went to the gates, and desired to see the patel or whoever might be the chief authority

After waiting a long time we were told that the amil expected us, and were ushered into his house, where he sat in a verandah, apparently used by him generally to transact business in. He was a Hindoo, a khayet by caste, and as those persons usually are, was polite and courteous in his manners. My father was spokesman on this occasion, and after introducing himself as a merchant, and us as leaders of the men who escorted him,—the old Omerkhér story—he told him of the attack which had been made on us, of which however he seemed for a time to be perfectly incredulous.

Impossible! said he there has not been a highway robbery or an attempt at one, for years, ever since some notorious theres were caught and beheaded here: you must be under some mu-take.

"You have not mentioned our wounded men, and that several of the thieves have been killed by us," said I to my father "Perhaps this worthy gentleman will believe us when he sees them, or finds the bodies of the ruscals and again, you forget that two of them are in our custody"

Indeed! cried the amil, that alters the case but the truth of the matter is, that so many travellers beg for exerts from village to village, and set forth their having been threatened between here and Nirmil, that I am become difficult to satisfy or to be persuaded that any danger has existed.

We require no excert, said my father; we are strong enough to thic care of ourselves, having as you have heard beaten off these thicres all we want is a few men to bring up our wounded and justice done on the rascals we have caught.

"It would be well for us," said Mohun Lell, "it all travellers were to defend themselves like you we should have but few thiever in the country, for they would find theirs a lesing trade But I thus you and you had one of them unburt. Where is he? We may perhaps get something out of lum."

I sent for the lad, and he was questioned for some time about the gang and where it was probable they had gone; but he would not answer a word, and the man who was interpreting for us give up questioning him in despair

He will not say a word in this manner " said Bhudrinath "give him the lash. I dare say that will make him speak.

"True, and Mohun Lall "I was going to send for a korls" and he called to one of his men to bring one

The thief shuddered as he saw it, and was again asked if he would confess; but he remained silent

"Throw him down," cried Mohun Lall, "and cut the skin from his back"

In an instant he was thrown with his face to the ground, and the lash, wielded by a stout fellow, brought blood at almost every stroke, but in vain he would not speak a word—not even a cry for mercy

"This is of no use either," said one of the men who held him; "get a bag full of ashes I'll warrant he speaks fast enough when that is put over his face"

A leather big, such as is used to give grain to horses, was filled with burning-hot ashes, and brought. It was tied over his mouth, and at the same time he received some hard thumps on his back to force him to breathe. This apparently had the desired effect, for after a short time, during which the torture must have been great, he muttered something and the bag was withdrawn.

he muttered something and the bag was withdrawn
"You think to make me confess," said the rascal as soon as he could speak, "but it is in vain. I know well where my people are gone, and I curse the authors of their discomfiture," and he poured a torrent of abuse on me. "Yes," continued he, pointing to me, "it was you who struck down my father, and as he is dead I want no more than to die also, you may hang me as soon as you please."

"Ha," said Mohan Lall, "I had forgotten him, let him be brought"

I had left the fellow badly wounded, but did not think there was any danger of his life. When he arrived, however, carried on a bed, it was evident he was dying, he scarcely breathed, and the rattle was in his throat. We did not, therefore, trouble ourselves further about him, but endeavoured to make the son confess, the whip and hot ashes were both resorted to again without effect, and all our endeavours only produced fresh executions and abuse

"There is no bearing this any longer," cried Mohun Lall, "the fellow must be hung. I know these rascals, and were we to keep him for a year we should never get a word of intelligence out of him, so there is no use in delay"

"As you will," said my father, "perhaps he will confess when the rope is round his neck"

"We shall see," replied Mohun Lall, "but I do not think it Send for the mangs"

These wretches, everywhere the vilest of mankind, were soon present, and the thief was made over to them

"You see," said Mohun Lall to him, "you have no chance to escape, will you now confess and take service with me? I will protect you"

The fellow hesitated, looked at his father, and appeared irresolute, but a second glance at his expiring parent again rallied him

Not for all the wealth you could give me cried he, drawing himself up, and looking at us proudly "Had he been alive, and in your power I might have taken your service but you could not protect me now and I would rather due by the hands of your people than by those of my associates, from whom I could not escape"

Away with him! cried Mohun Lall to the mange "see that you do your work properly

And our mamool (customary present) Maharaj you must not forget that.

"No no, oried he "but away with ye I am polluted by your presence. Go to the kotwal after you have done, and he will have received orders to give you a sheep and as much liquor as will make you all drunk."

The fellows made many most profound salams, and went off with their wretched companion.

Where will they hang him?" said I; "I should like to see him again, and try if I can t persuade him to hive to become a decent follow

"Somewhere beyond the gate said Mohan Lall. 'I do not know the place myself, but my people will show you. You will do little good, however I am afraud; and after all, why should you trouble yourself about him?"

It is no trouble, I replied I have simply a currenty upon the subject, and will see the last of him.

I will accompany you, said Bhudranath and we took our leave and followed the executioners.

About an arrow s flight from the gate were two scraggy gnarled and almost leafless meet trees, beneath which stood the group we sought, and round them all the urchus and allo men of the village. We hastened up to them and found that erreything was prepared; a rope with a noose in it hung over a branch, and one of the mangy was souly sharpening a knife upon an old stone dol which lay beneath the tree,—for what purpose I could not make out however my business was not with them, but with the wretch who was so near his death. He had seen us approach, and I thought was urging the mangy to despatch him before we came up; but they did not do so, as they imagined we brought some other orders to them. I addressed my self to the robber Will you not live? said I; 'so young as you nre, have you no love of hie? I now again promise you protection if you will confess, as you have been asked to do before"

"Let the cords be somewhat loosened which bind my arms " sald the robber and I will speak to you; at present I am in too much pain to talk.

Loosen them, said I to the mangs and one of you hold the rope in care he attempts to escape

The robber smiled faintly at what I said, and continued

"You have taken an interest in me, and although I owe my present condition to you, yet sooner or later I should have come to the same end, or fallen by some shot or cut of a sword, therefore I forgive you my death But again I repeat I have no wish to live, nor, miserable as I am, can you suppose I would purchase my life by an act of treachery to my companions Had my father lived and remained in Mohun Lall's power, I would have promised anything, but he is dead My uncle too fell by the hands of one of your men in the attack on your cart, and whom have I left in this world to care for that I should live? One day has seen the end of my family, and it was our fate Yet bear to Mohun Lall my hate, and the curses of a dying man It is he who has killed me, and for this he will have to pay a fearful retribution And now," said he turning to the mangs, "do your horrible office, I have no more to

I was going to speak again, but Bhudrinath stopped me
"What is the use?" said he, "the fellow is obstinate, and, depend upon it, if he were spared, it would only be to lead good men into danger, if not into destruction. let him die, he deserves it"

The mangs looked to me for orders, and I told them to proceed: it was clearly of no use to delay. The robber was again tightly pinioned and thrown on the ground, and the mang who held the knife he had been sharpening, dexterously cut both sinews of his legs close above the heel, he was then raised up, the noose put round his neck, and in another instant he was pulled up to the branch and struggling in his death agony

"Pah!" said Bhudrinath, turning away, "it makes me sick What a contrast this is to our work, where he who is to die scarcely knows that the handkerchief is about his neck before he is a dead man ''

"You say truly," said I, "we have the advantage, but these mangs are miserable outcast wretches. What else could you expect from them? Now let us go to the camp, my father will be there, and we will see what this Kumal Khan had with him"

When we arrived, we found that all his baggage had been examined There were two boxes, the contents of which we looked to see with some impatience One was nearly filled with papers relating to his business as a revenue-collector, and these were burned as fast as they could be looked over by me In the bottom, how-ever, was a bag filled with gold, which Bhudrinath held up in

"This is something better than musty paper," said he, putting it on one side, "now for the other box"

It was broken open, and proved a rich prize indeed After the clothes with which the top was covered had been removed, a number of bars of silver met our expecting eyes.

The box was not, however emptied, and under another layer of clothes were ten bars of gold of the same size as the silver ones.

Here is the cream of the matter" creed Bhudrinath, as he took up the first "Alla knows how much there is but it is clear the man was worth killing and finely indeed must be have plundered the unfortunate cultivators."

The bars of gold and silver were made over to my father to be placed among the other plunder we had got and all that now remanned to be seen were the clothes he had worn and his waist bag There was not, however much in it.

"Stay said Bhudrinath, here is another bundle, which was in the humeannh."

I took it from him, and unrolled fold after fold of clean paper.

Why there is nothing here" said I "I suppose he kept this to write on.

"Go on to the end, novertheless, said my father; let us see all."
After removing three more folds I came to another small packet, which was tied up with thread. Here is something at last, said I breaking it open. Bills of exchange, in the name of the blessed Prophet I and, I doubt not, of value too Have we any one who can make them out?"

I cannot read the writing said Bhudrinath but I can make out the figures of they are not written in Persian."

"Ah, no, said I they are Nugree or Guzerattee so try vour skill." said Bhudrinath, after examining one, "is for two then and rupees see these are the figures.

"I dare say you are right, said I, handing the rest to him what are these for?

"Hero is a second for four hundred.

Not much, said my father but go on"

"The third is for—let me scengain 'said Bludringth 'ah, I am right, it is for two thousand two hundred and the last is for two hundred and forty

'That is, let me see, said I four thousand eight hundred and forty Well, we have got a good prize"

"Yes!" cried my father we should be well off if they wen worth anything to us; but they are no better than the waste paper we have burned."

"How?" and I; "we should get the money if we presented them,

"How?" and 1; "we should get the money it we presented them, surely?"

You do not reflect, said my father "that if we did so it woul!

lead to our detection in this matter : so destroy them."

"Indeed," said I, "I will not, but will keep them for stolen money, and I dare say were we to affect to be this Kumal Khan's agents, we might get the amount"

"As you will," said my father, "but remember you take no steps about them without consulting me"

So I kept them, and had afterwards reason to be glad that I had done so.

CHAPTER XIII

HOW KUMAL KHAN'S HEAD WAS CUT OFF, AND STUCK UP NEAR THE GATE OF THE TOWN

As we were to leave the village the next morning, I thought I might as well go and take leave of Mohun Lall, and accordingly went to his house in the evening

"So you could make nothing of that rascal who was hung up," said he when we were seated, "these thieves are hardened vagabonds, and though I have hung several in this way, I have never been able to get anything out of them"

"I could not," said I, "the fellow was, as he called it, faithful, and died worthy of a better cause"

"It is no use speaking of him," said Mohun Lall, "the fellow is dead, and I would that all his brethren were hanging as high as he is, but I have heard a strange piece of news since you left me, Meer Sahib, which I do not care telling you, and you may perhaps be able to give me some assistance"

"Command me," said I, "anything that I can do will be but a poor return for your attention"

"The matter is this," said he "a person by name Synd Maliomed Ali, who is very respectably connected at Hyderabad, came from the city with letters to the governor of Nirmul, two or three years ago, directing him to be employed as a collector of any small district which might become vacant. He lived some time with him, and when an opportunity offered, was appointed by him his naib, or deputy, in a district not far from Nirmul Latterly, the governor has made a good deal of difficulty in getting him to remit the revenue collections, and one or two complaints which reached him privately made him suspicious This feeling was increased by hearing that he had sent off his baggage in a clandestine manner,—whither, no one knew, and this morning both he and his people have suddenly disappeared "

"It is most extraordinary," said I, "but as I never heard of this person before, I do not see exactly how I am to be of any use to you or your friend "

It is only a chance that you may be so, and Mohun I all 'and my request is, that you keep a look-out for him during your journey and should you meet him, that you will arrest him instantly and send him to me under an escort of your people, to whom I promise a handsome reward for their delay and trouble. One thing I must tell you, that on many occasions he has assumed the memo of Kumal Khan,—the name I believe of a relative of his who adopted him and perhaps he may have taken this name in travelling.

I will not forget it, said I, "and you may depend upon my doing my utmost to secure him, should I fall in with him; and could you give me a paper relating his delinquencies under your own seal, to serve me as a kind of authority for arresting him?"

"Certainly" said Mohun Lall your thought is a good one I will forthwith write one myself. So saying he drew up the docu ment, and handed it to me

I am an indifferent scholar" said I 'but I daro say I can make it out and taking the paper I read what he had written, which was in substance what he had told me

And now I pray you to give me my dismissal for I have busi ness among my people, and the day is nigh closed

"I will not detain you, said Mohun Lell and if there is any thing you or your people want which my poor village can afford you have only to send for it. I shall write too to my friend to tell him of the arrangement I have made, and the confidence I have in you.

'I thank you for your kindness," said I, 'and should I want anything more I will not scruple to send for it. Salam, Sahib!"

Salam! he returned "I wish you a safe journey and a successful one.

"Thanks again to you, good Amil for your last words," and I to myself as I went away; "Inshalla! it will be as successful as it has hitherto been. Well, indeed Mahomed Ali has met his desert and it is better perhaps for him that he hes cold and dead as he is than that he should hare lived to be haunted by an evil conscience and to fall into the hands of those he has cheated and decedived who would have tortured him to death if they had not immured him in a miserable person to pine out the remainder of his days.

"Verily a good deal has been done and my old father will larght heartill when he hears how I have behaved, and how I have laffled suspences by the communicant I have brought with me of which there papers are good proof. I have got his true name too, and it is hard if with this clue I do not get hold of the money for the bills of exchange which my segacious parent would have destroyed. Shalash! Ameer All, do then go on in this way and whose dog is he who shall compete to with the either in cunning or in daring!"

As I thought he would, my father laughed heartily at the business I had undertaken

"It would be a good joke," he said, "to send for Kumal Khan'a head, and put it at the gate of the village, they would then be at rest about him, and Mohun Lall's friend would be obliged to disgorge a little of the coin I have no doubt he has helped himself to out of the revenue"

"By Alla," said I, "it is an excellent thought, and I will send a couple of lughaces to bring it"

"No, no," said my father, "I did but jest, it is now nearly evening, and it would not do to risk them on that lonely road at nightfall, besides, they could not well be back before we start"
"As you will," said I, but at the same time I made an inward determination to mention it to one or two of them

When I reached my tent, I sent for three lughaces, enterprising "Now," said I, "my lads, I have got an adventure for you, and here are five rupees aprece if you will do it"

"Your commands are on our heads and eyes," said they, "you have only to order us, and we will perform your wishes"

"Well then," said I, "what I want is the head of Kumal Khan:

do you know the place you put him in p and is the grave deep p"
"We know the spot exactly," said one of them, a Hindoo, by name Motee-ram, "what lugha ever forgot a spot where he had buried any one ! the grave is not deep, and he is at the top of all But what are we to do with the head ? and why is it wanted?"

I detailed to them what Mohun Lall had said, and repeated what a good loke it would be to get the head, and place it in some conspicuous place

"Then," said Motee-ram, "if I may offer advice, I recommend its being put under the tree whereon the thief was hung this morning; the worthy amil will think Kumal Khan has fallen by the hands of some of his gang"
"A capital idea," said I, "and therefore, if you find no one about when you return, place it there, for I have no wish to look at it "

"It shall be done to your satisfaction," said all three, "and we will start immediately "

So they left me Yet I was in dread all the time they were absent lest anything should befall them, and I often wished I had not sent them on such an errand, but it was too late, and I could not recall Anxiously and sleeplessly did the hours pass till near midnight; and poor Zora could not imagine what was the matter with I excused myself to her, however, on the plea of having a headache and feeling unwell, and suffered her and the old woman to put quicklime on my temples, and use other remedies which she said were infallible in such cases, and at last pretending I was going to sleep, she lay down and was soon really so

It was about midnight that I was relieved from my suspense, and gladly did I hear the voice of Motoe-ram at my tent door calling to me I arose and went out. 'Is all safe ? I cagerly asked.

All is safe said he and we have brought the head and put it where you told us. It was well we went, for we found a troop of jackals busily scratching at the grave and they would have got to the bodies before morning for they had made a large hele when we arrived. However we scared them away and put a quantity of dry thorns just under the earth on the top they will not try it again, and if they do it does not matter as no one will ever find that spot -it was too well chosen.

"You have done your work well and bravely and I "and you shall have your money to-morrow morning" They left me and the excitement past, I lay down and slept soundly

The next morning we rose before day; the omens were consulted, and proved favourable, and all prepared for prosecuting our march. We were soon ready and finding that Zora was comfortable in her cart, and that she needed nothing I could not resist the temptation of going as far as the tree where the thief had been hung to see whether in reality the head of Kumal Khan had been brought. Accordingly I separated from the party and ran as fast as I could to the spot, which was not far distant. I know not why but an involuntary shudder crept over me as I reached the tree and looked about for the object of my search.

The wind which had been still all night, suddenly rose with the breaking day and its first eigh through the withered branches of the neem almost seemed to have a voice in it-a deprecation of the deed we had done the night before, and of which so foul an evidence as that before was present for at that instant my eyes fell on the head which had been placed on a projecting knot of the trunk to protect at from the jackals. I recoiled from it with loathing for the eyes were protruding from the sockets and the mouth open and the ex pression of the features was hideous in the extreme. I gazed at it for a moment. This must not be " said I; those eyes will be tray us " so taking the cold head down, I forced them into their socket and shut the cyclids, which I was able to do, as the stiffness of death was past. I then placed the head on a large stone close to the tree on which some rude idel was sculptured, and quitting the place ran as fast as I could to a small puddle I had passed as I came in which I cleansed my hands from the blood which had adhered to them.

"Alla be praised, they are pure again! mid I inwardly as I washed them eagerly with some carth and water "Brave as I know myself to be and caring for nothing alive I would not have gene with Motee-ram and his people have dug up that body and decollated at,-no not for the wealth of Delha Pah! the idea is horrible!

detained by the rekshas or ovil spirits of the place assisted by the king with powerful armies they defied Ram, and he was in utter despair at the loss of his beautiful wife, nor could he find any trace of whither she had been carried. You know that Hunooman, our monkey-god, was a wise and astonishing being; in the monkeys of the present day his form only is perpetuated the intelligence is gone and cunning alone is left to them. But it is also a sad fact that, like them, mankind has also degenerated, and we are no more like the beings of those days than the present monkeys are like Huncoman. Well, as I was saying Ram in his perplexity was visited by Hunooman, who pitying his state proposed to go in search of the lost fair one, and accordingly departed. Long did he wander and at last discovered her in Lanks, in a state of as great distress as he had left her lord in. Quickly he returned with the intelligence, and an army was assembled for the conquest of the island. But a difficulty arose when it reached the end of the land before them cortainly lay Lanka, but a wide and rough son ran between them, the rearing waves of which appalled the stoutest hearts-nor did oven the glorious Ram himself escape the general fear Boats were not to be procured, and if they had, what would have been their use to transport an army which consuted of millions of god like beings each of whom was ten cubits in height! Ram gave himself up to despair; but Huncoman at one bound clearing the channel quickly returned with assurances that a bridge could soon be constructed and that he and his companions would labour night and day till it was completed.

"Quick as thought, legions of monkeys departed to the Himalayas. Hugo mountains and rocks were torn from their foundations and transported by relays of these indefatigable beings to the shores of the ocean. One by one they were dropped into it from above and the splashing of these lugo masses is described as terrific, the water ascending to the heavens and extinguishing the stars! At last the bridge was completed the vart armies marched over it the country was conquered, and the beauteous Seeta restored to the arms.

of her devoted lord.

"Now these rocks are part of those brought from the Himalaysiand have remained piled upon each other just as they were set down by the monkeys; for this country being half way it was here that the relay was established, and, when the bridge was completed, these remained, not being required. To prove the truth of what I have said (and may Blugwan grant that no one doubt it!) I must tell you that remains of the bridge are risible to this day. Many prigrims with whom I have conversed, who had been to Ramisserum declared that they had gone in boats along the side of the bridge and traced it by the points of rocks appearing above the water almost in a direct line from one land to the other, with here and there a smal island where the waves have not been able to make an impression, that further, heaps of rocks similar to these are met with in various parts between here and Ramisseram, which no doubt were not required, and you will remark that in no other part of the country north of this do any similar ones appear. There cannot, therefore, be a stronger proof of the truth of our ancient religion than these hardened witnesses, which will last to the end of the world, to the confusion of all unbelievers and sceptics."

"Mashalla!" said I, "it is a wonderful story, and true enough, for I have heard of the bridge myself. We Moslims have it, that Baba Adam, who was placed by Alla in the paradise of Serendeeb, which is Lanka, got tired one day of his confinement to so small an island, and seeing the mainland at a distance, made the bridge by throwing mountains into the sea, each at seven coss distance, to get there. When it was completed, he easily stepped from one to the other, and so gained the land, but this action displeased Alla, who soon afterwards ejected him from the paradise, and man has been a wanderer ever since"

"Yes," said Bhudrinath; "but is not my story the most probable, especially when you see all these rocks piled up in so extraordinary a manner, as if in loads? Why, if a man wanted to carry a heap of stones, he would pile them up in the same way, and see, these are in separate heaps, just as they were laid down, some large, some small, according, no doubt, to the strength of the parties who bore

them "

"Alla ke Qoodrut," exclaimed I,—"it is the power of God Mashalla! they were great monkeys! It is well we have none of them nowadays, or they would pelt us out of the land"

CHAPTER XIV.

HOW AMEER ALI ARRIVED AT HYDERABAD

We passed the village of Ulwal, its white pagoda peeping from among groves of tamarind and mango trees, and its large tank now glistening in the rays of the sun, and pursuing our way, we saw on passing a ridge of rocks, the camp of the army at the far-famed Hoosain Sagor, or, as it is more often called, Secunderabad Thotents of the English force glittered in the bright sun, and behind them lay a vast sheet of blue water

We had heard much of this lake from many persons on our journey, and as we passed it a strong breeze had arisen, and the surface was curled into thousands of waves, whose white crests, as they broke, sparkled like damonds, and threw their spray into our faces as they dashed against the stonowork of the embankment. We stood a long time guaing upon the beautiful prespect, so new to us all, and wondering whether the sea, of which we had heard so much, could be anything like what was before us. I have since then salib, twose seen the sea. I need not attempt to describe it for you have sailed over it but when I saw it first, methought I could have fallen down and worshipped it, it appeared so illimitable, its edge touching as it were the heavens, and spread out into an expanse which the numest stretch of my imagination could not compass,—offit type, I thought, of the God of all people, whom every one thinks on while the hearse over of the waves as they rolled on, mountain after mountain and broke in angry fury against the shore seemed to be a voice of Omnipotence which could not fall to awaken emericans of awe and dread in the most callous and unobservant!

We passed the embankment of the tank. As yet we had seen nothing of the city but there was a ridge not far off, and as we accorded it I could no longer control my impatience I spurred my horse, and before I reached the top shut my eyes, that whatever was before me might burst upon my view at once.

My horse slackened his pace when he reached the top, and allowing him to go on a few stops I opened my eyes, and glorious indeed.

was the prospect before me.

Beneath lay Hyderahad, the object of many a conjecture of many an ardent deare to reach it—the first city of the Dukhun, justly colebrated throughout the countries I had passed. I had imagined it, like every other I had seen, to be in the midst of a plain, and that all that would be visible of it would be here and there a minaret rising out of large groves of trees—but Hyderahad presented a different aspect.

I stood on the crest of a gentle slope, which to my right hand was broken at some distance by rocky hills, and to the left appeared gradually to descend into a plain, which stretched away almost un interruptedly to the horizon. Before me on the gentle rise of the valley, and beyond where I supposed a river to be by the city its white terraced houses gleaming brightly in the nunlight from analist what seemed to me at the distance almost a forest of trees. The Char Minar and Meeca Minight cross proudly from the major brightly also by which they were surrounded and here and there a white dome with its bright gill spire marked the tomb of some favorante or holy saint while smaller mosques, I might say in handreds, were known by their slender white minarets.

Boyond the city rose another connected chain of rocky hills which ran along until they met those on the right hand and shut in the valley on that side The city seemed to be of immen e extent; but valuable, and I know not their worth nor have we as yet opened the beles we will do so to-morrow morning and assort them we will them go into the city to the shops of the sahoukars, and inquire for articles aimilar to them, find out their prices, and by this means be enabled to value our own. Were we to offer them in ignorance of their market prices, we might be suspected; and though we may not get what they are intrinsically worth, we shall no doubt be able to sell the whole for a handsome sum.

I agreed with him perfectly and the next morning we set to work to open the bales.

Their contents were indeed costly—brocades, cloth of gold, fine muslin scarves, also woren with gold and silver patterns, plain muslims, and a few shawls, besides fine cloths of different kinds for wearing apparel, and sarees with silk and tissue borders, the latter from the looms of Nagpoor These, and the jewels in our possession, when laid out and assorted, made a display on which we feasted our eyes for some time, wondering at their magnificence: after I had made an inventory of the whole, my father and myself, attired in handsome clothes and mounted on the best of our horses, attended by a few of the men, took our way into the city.

Crossing over an old but massive bridge, below which ran the rice now a shallow atream, we entered by the gate at the head of it, and inquiring our way went direct to the chowke or market-place, where we trusted we should find goods exposed for sale similar to our own. The streets were narrow and darly and the interior of the city certainly did not answer the expectations we had formed from its outside and distant appearance; still there were evident tokens of its wealth in the numbers of elephants, on the backs of which, in canopied undaria, sat noblemen or gentlemen, attended by their armed retainers. Crowds of well-dressed persons paraded the streets, and as the festival of the Mohorum had just commenced, eries of "Hassan! Hoosein! Dools! Deen! Deen!" and a thousand others familiar to us resounded on every side

Wo made our way as well as we could through the throng and our attendants were often obliged to clear us a passage which exposed them to the jeers and always of the multitude as they were recognised as strangers from their dress and language. Once or twice I observed a liand laid on a sword by some respectable person who had been jostled or pushed by our men an I heard a deep threat muttered; but we managed to get along and at length came to a broader street, where the crowd was less dense; and here that mobile building the Char Minnr burst at once upon our view

"How grand! I exclaimed, stopping my horse and looking up to the huge minarets, which seemed to pierce the clouds; to see this alone is worth a journey from Dehli.

The minarets formed the four corners of the building, and from them sprang immense arches which supported a roof, upon the top of which a small mosque was built. It did not look capable of supporting the immense weight of the whole, and yet it had stood for centuries, and the fabric was unimpaired for centuries, and the fabric was unimpaired

"It is the hour of prayer," said my father, interrupting my gaze,
"and hark! the muezzin calls from the Mecca mosque, thither we will now proceed, and afterwards transact our business"

I followed him, and passing by the Char Minar, we turned up a street to our right, and stopped our horses at the gate of the mosque

A feeling of awe mingled with admiration came over me as we entered the court-yard and advanced along a raised causeway to the foot of a flight of steps which led up to the interior. On either side of us were the graves of princes and nobles, many of them of elegant forms and richly carved, but the building itself engrossed my entire admiration. Five lofty and wide arches opened to view the interior of the edifice, where an equal number appeared in depth, and where the arches met, the eye was perplexed by the innumerable points and ornaments, which, running into each other, completed a roof of exquisite design and workmanship. To add to its beauty, the whole was of stone, carefully smoothed, whereas the Char Minar and the other buildings I had as yet seen were of stucco

But I had little time to observe more, the sonorous and melancholy call of the muezzin had ended, and the few attendants for the afternoon prayer had spread their carpets and commenced their devotions. We joined them, and kneeling on our outspread waistbands, went through the usual forms, while the low murmur of the prayers of all ascended to the fretted roof and added to the solemnity of the scene.

To the majority of those present there was, perhaps, nothing new or uncommon, but I, who had escaped the dangers of our journey and those attendant on our profession, felt that it went to my heart, and, murderer as I was, though not as yet callous, I was softened, and my tears flowed fast as I repeated the words of prayer, and the impressive language of the blessed Koran in which they were couched

The ceremony concluded, we rose, and though I was well disposed to linger in the sacred edifice and observe more of its beauties, my father hurried me away, and we returned to the Char Minar

my father hurried me away, and we returned to the Char Minar "Here," said my father, "those useful rogues the dullals are to be met with They will try to cheat us, no doubt, as it is their trade, but as we are not purchasers, we may avail ourselves of their aid to find out the houses of the merchants who deal in our articles, and it may be that the fellow we fix on will be intelligent and assist us to dispose of our property"

We stopped on reaching the building the lower part of which was sadly disfigured by numbers of wretched luits and stills, where vendors of vegetables and sweetments sat, and sorred out their goods to the passers-by My father calling to a decont-looking young Hindoo, of intelligent countenance, asked him where he could meet with a dullat, as he was a stranger in the city and wished to see some clothes and other goods, which he did not know where to find.

I am one at your service, nobles is he replied "and I know well the nobest warehouses, and can lead you to any you wish; and, added he, there is not a sahoukar or dealer in the city who will not readily give your poor servant, Mohun Das, a character for solvesty and trustworthness."

"You had botter not say much of your good qualities till they have been proved, said my father "your tribe has not the best remaintion on these points."

Ah, said the man, my lord is well aware of what (alas that I should say it) the majority of our tribe are a sad set nevertheless, has slave will not be found to be like them, for having beginn by being honest, he has not found it worth his while to be otherwise.

"That is as much as to say you would be dishonest if it suited your interests," said I "but come, the day wears fast and we are anxious to be out of this crowd before dark

The fellow gave me a knowing look, accompanied by a shrup of his shoulders, which could not be mutaken what I had said had moved to him that we were on our guard.

"What description of goods may you be in search of? said he; 'any may be precured, from the shawls of Cashmere and brocades of Benares to the meanest article

"Bennres fabrics are what we require" said I; "a few handsome roomals and deputies, and a turban or two, to adorn ourselves for the minuter a durber"

You shall see them," and the dallal, girding his shawl about his want. "Now follow me and keep a good eye on me lety you foso me in the crowd." And so saying he descended the steps of the building and led us along some of the principal streets, till he dired into an obscure alley and stopped at the door of a home which certainly promised nothing from its exterior

"A very unsatisfactory search we should have had" and my father; had we endeavoured to find out a merchant ourselves. It is well we took this fellow with us

"These merchants, I have heard, usually choose these secladed places on account of their security replied my father. "It would not do in a lawless place like this to expose goods for sale as ther do in other cities But they are well known, and easily found out by strangers if they apply to the dullals as we have done"

We were ushered into the interior of the house, and were received by a large fat man, the very counterpart of the sahoukar I had killed I started involuntarily at the resemblance, but soon recovering myself, and assured by his civility, I seated myself, as did also my father, and we quickly entered on the object of our visit

One by one bales were opened and their contents spread before The sahoukar's stock seemed to be interminable and of great value We selected several articles, and inquiring the prices of those which we inspected, of which I made memoranda, we desired them to be kept for us, saying that we would call the next day with money to pay for them The sahoukar pressed us to take them with us, and the dullal offered his security for us, but for obvious reasons we declined, and took our leave of the merchant

The dullal accompanied us as far as the Char Minar, where my father, slipping a piece of money into his hands for his trouble, told him we now knew our way home, and bid him come early in the morning to the karwan and inquire for the house of Rugonath das

Sahoukar, where he would get tidings of us "So-far I am satisfied," said my father, "our goods, as you will have observed, are equal in quality to those we saw, and by the prices affixed to them we have a good earnest of a large sum of money, if we can only dispose of them, a matter I apprehend of no difficulty if properly managed"

The next morning came the dullal

"Canst thou be secret?" asked my father at once, and throwing him a couple of rupees The fellow started and trembled

"If such is my lord's will," said he, his teeth almost chattering with fear, "I can, but I am a poor man, a very inoffensive man am my lord's slave, and rub my nose on his feet," cried he at last, fairly throwing himself on the ground, and rubbing his forehead against the ground, as he saw my father's brow contracting, and his face assuming an expression of anger at the evident suspicion which the man had of us

"Why," cried my father, as the fellow lay on the floor whimpering, "what is this? what chicken-hearted son of a vile woman art thou? In the name of Alla get up! Because a man who, Inshalla! is somebody, asks thee whether thou canst be secret, must thou of necessity think thou art going to have thy throat cut?"

"Do not talk of it," cried the wretch, shutting his eyes and shuddering "I am a poor man and a miserable Hindoo, what would my lord get by cutting my throat?"

"Nay," said my father, "this is beyond bearing, the fellow has not the soul of a flea Kick him out into the street, and beat him on the month with a slipper there are plenty of dallals to be found beside hun.

Pardon, noble sir I" cried the follow —the mention of his trade leading him to suppose that he was required in the way of his call ing -" pardon my foolishness. My lord a threatening aspect turned my liver into water but now that he smiles again, I am assured that no harm is meant.

Harm! surely not to such a wretch as thou " said my father " but since thou art inclined to listen to reason, ait down, and hear what we have to say to thee.

"I can be secret," cried the dulin! "let my lord speak."

It will fare badly with thee if thou art not, said my father again looking grimly at him but listen. I am a merchant I have never been at this city before; but hearing at Dolli that an investment of valuable goods, such as we saw yesterday was likely to sell well here, I have brought one down with me I know not the selling prices here, and therefore engaged thee to show me some goods, that I might be able to regulate the sale of my own. Now can't thou manage it for me?

Surely surely "said the fellow in delight, nothing is more easy

My lord will not of course forget my perquisites on the sale ? "Thou shalt have five rapees in every hundred a worth disposed of " said my father will this content theo?" It is a princely offer and worthy of my lord a generosity" said

Might I be permitted to see the goods?

It is necessary that you should see them and here they are rejoined my father and he opened the door of the room where they were and one by one displayed the contents of the bales. This is indeed a rich stock, said the dullal; you may be able to sell most of the cloths, but I question whether the whole without you intend to remain here some time

That depends upon circumstances over which I have no control." said my father if I cannot sell them all here I shall take what remains to Poonah

Well said the man, if I am permitted, I will make memoran la of all that there is here and in the course of to-me rrow will let you know what can be done I cannot do so carlier for I shall have to vi it all the dealers

"Do what you think lest said my father and here are tearn pees for your expenses. Now begone and let me see you again at this time to-morrow

The fellow made many anlams and took his leave

"Did you ever see so pitiful a wretch? said my father "by two couries I would have strangled him on the spor to put an end to so disgraceful a coward."

"Let him pass," said I, "he is but a Hindoo, and not worth thinking of But you are not going to let him off with all the money you have promised him ?"

"Of course not," replied my father, "you understand I suppose what is to be done?"

"Perfectly," said I, "leave him to me"

She had been speaking I went to Zora, my own gentle Zora much of visiting her kindred, and though I had put her off as well as I could since we arrived, I saw with concern that I had no longer any pretext for detaining her I could have fled with her-I think Such was the intensity of my love for her, that, had I had the courage to speak of flight and she had agreed to accompany me, I verily believe I should have forsaken father, associates, and profession, and committed myselt to the world

And if I had, said the Thug, musing, should I have been worse off than I am now? should I ever have worn these disgraceful fetters? have ever doomed myself to perpetual imprisonment and a state of existence which I would to heaven were ended, and should be ended, but that I have (and I curse myself for it!) a mean, base, ay, cowardly lingering for life! Salub, I tell you it would have been well for me had I then fled,—fled from guilt and crime, into which I daily plunged deeper With my soldierlike figure, my address, my skill in the use of arms, I might have gained honomable service, I might have led aimies, or have met a soldier's death on some battle field! But it was not so written, it was not my fate, and I am what I am,—a curse to myself, and to all with whom I have ever been connected

Zora she thought not of my anxiety, all she hoped for, cared for now, was to see her mother and her sister She assailed me with importunities that I would send her, and assured me that she would not be long absent, but go to them she must,—they would so rejoice to see her again, and would welcome me as her deliverer seeing them she would return to me, and we should never again be parted

"Alas!" I said, "my Zora, you know not what you ask think that those charms are of no value to your mother and sister? You have owned to me that you are far more beautiful and attractive than any of those you are connected with In your absence they will have sunk into obscurity, and they will hail your return as the earnest of more wealth and more distinction"

"Nay, these are cruel words, my beloved," she replied, "you well know that I have never deceived you, and that, as true as that I breathe, my soul is yours for ever So let me go, I pray you, and in a few hours I shall be again with you, and pressed to your honoured breast"

Be it so end I sadly for though I hardly dared think it, I felt as if this was our parting for ever Go then and if you return not, I will come to you by the evening"

A covered senana cart was easily hired and the driver seeming perfectly to understand where she wished to go, she stopped joyfully into it, attended by her old servant, and with two of my men to attend her she left me.

They soon returned, but they knew nothing save that there was great joy in the house when her relatives saw her. Towards oren ing I could no longer control my impatience and taking one of them with me, I mounted my horse and rode to her house.

It was stuated nearly opposite a fountain, which is in the centro of the street bolow the Char Minar and I had passed it the day before. I was easily admitted and oh! what joy was evinced when I entered the room where Zora, her sister and mother were seated! "He is come!" cried my poor gri, and sho rushed into my arms. She strained me to her breast for an instant, and then holding me from her "Look, mother! she cried "look on him; is he not as I said? is he not as beautiful and brave?"

The old lady approached me and passing her hands over my face cracked her knuckles and every joint of her fingers by pressing the backs of her hands against her temples, while the teams ran down her checks this she did as often as there was a joint to crack; and then she caught me in her arms and lungged me, erring at the same time like a child.

The sister received me, I thought, rather coldly Had I been less handsome perhaps, she would have been more cordial she did not seem to like Zora s having so handsome a lover

"May the blessing of the Prophet and the twelve Imams be on you and your posterity!" cred the old lady when she had recovered breath to speak. "May the gracious Alla keep you in His protec tion, and may the lady Muram and the holy Moula ah bless you! You have made a desolate house fall again, and have changed our weeping to joy. What can I say more? Who could have thought it was our Zorn when a cart stopped at the door? Zenathee was just eaying that it was that rile wretch Sukcena come to pretend condolence while in reality she rejoiced at our insfortune, which left her without a rival; and I was saying—no matter what I was saying—when we heard a faint cry as if of actions/ment and a buttle and we did not know what to think when in rushed our lost Zora, our pearl, our damond; and then I thought my old heart would break with joy for my liver seemed to be melled; and I have done nothing since Meer Sahib but sit opposite to her and stroke her face with my hands, and gay; into her eyes, to assure myself that I am not mistaken. Inshalla! to morrow I will send five rupees to every shine in the city, and distribute sweet-meats to fifty beggars in the name of the Imam Zamin, besides, I will have a tazen made, and will no longer wear these mourning garments Ah! Meer Sahib, if you knew how I have sat day after day, and wept till I am reduced to a mere shadow of what I was ' and all my friends tried to console me, but in vain, I would not be comforted. And her tears flowed afresh at the recollection

What the old lady was before her grief commenced, I cannot pretend to say, but in her present plight she appeared the fattest woman I had ever looked upon She could now talk, she rolled from side to side when she stirred, and lifted her feet as an elephant would do among a dense crowd of people It was painful to see her in her tight trowsers, at every movement she made, especially when she sat down, they appeared about to split, and let out a mass of flesh which was in rebellion against its confinement. She ought to have worn a petticoat, but no, the old lady had her vanity, and still prided herself on the beauty of her limbs, which I heard afterwards had really been strikingly symmetrical in her youth

We sat conversing and relating our adventures, until the evening

fell, and I spread my carpet for prayer

"Ah, he is a good synd," said the old woman, "I like to see the young fond of their devotions, but it is ever thus with the noble race from Hindostan"

I was preparing to take my departure, when they one and all cried out against it "What! leave our house before you have broken bread and drunk water with us?" It was not to be thought of,—I must stay dinner was prepared, they were just on the point of sending for me when I came, and above all it was the ninth day of the Mohorum, and I must stay, were it but to see the procession of the Nal Sahib That sacred relic, one of the shoes of the horse the blessed Prophet rode when he fled to Medina, would be carried in grand procession, and I should never have a chance of seeing the like again These reasons, and many imploring looks from Zora, made me speedily determine, so sending away my horse and the man, with a message to my father to say I should not return, I gave myself up to a night of enjoyment, such as I little expected when I parted with Zora in the moining

The dinner was excellent, and the old lady's cooking unexceptionable There were all sorts of curries, with but a mouthful in each little cup, but still sufficient of each to leave an exquisite flavour in the mouth, only to be replaced by another surpassing it—pilaus of various kinds, and sweetmeats—and, to crown all, some delicious wine of the infidels called the Francees, which the old lady pronounced not to be wine, but sherbet, and allowed to the Huzoor himself, the great Sikundur Jah. It cortainly was very delicious, and elevated the spirits. At the end, after taking a whiff or two, she carefully wiped the mouth-piece, and presented me with her own hookah, the fragrance of which was beyond that of ambergris or musk. I was in paridise! I was intensely happy!

You have heard me sing said Zora to me, "when I was in captivity and after the fatigues of travel in our little tent, where there was no scope for my voice now my heart is glad and bound ing and you shall hear me again-may the Prophet pardon me for singing during the Mohorum |- and you shall say which you like best; my sister shall accompany me till I am tirod, and I will then accompany her "

A saringhee was brought Zenat tuned it, and taking the bow played a short prolude. It was one to the most entrancing sounds I had over heard. Zora surpassed all her former attempts, it was ravishing to listen to her; and her sister who was a perfect mistress of the instrument (a strange thing for a woman) gave it its full force of melody and expression. You know Salib, how nearly it accords to the human voice and now as accompaniment and song rose and fell together it appeared as though two of the richest, fullest voices were pouring forth strains such as angels might have come down from the skies to hear

But at last the noise of drums and shouting outside became so great, that both gave up in despur

A plague on them all said she and I in such voice that I could have sung to you all night! And have I sung well ?"

Ay have you said I but methinks the first song you ever sung to me at the palace in Comerkher will dwell longer on my memory than any I have heard since.

"Ya Alla!" exclaimed Zenat, who had moved to the window " was there ever a sight so magnificent! Come and see tis man ing fast, and will be soon out of sight."

CHAPLER XV

SETTING FORTH HOW AMERICALI SPINDS THE NITTH FIGHT OF THE MOHORCY, AND HOT HE LOSES HIS MI HISS

Zevar's exclamation draw us to the window said, "look out or you will look the sight they are even now pa ing the Char Minar"

We dillook out, and the sight was in leed marmificent. Acr w ! of some hundreds of p opl were escreting a pumpil that h ly symbol of our faith mo t of them were arm I and the reaked weapons gleamed brightly in the light of numberless torches which were elevated on lofty bamboos, others bore aftab-geers, made of silver and gold tinsel, with deep fringes of the same, which glittered and sparkled as they were waved to and fro by the movements of those who carried them. But the object the most striking of all was the Char Minar itself, as the procession passed under it, the light of the torches illuminated it from top to bottom, and my gaze was riveted, as though it had suddenly and startlingly spring into existence.

The procession passed on, and all once more relapsed into gloom the Char Minar was no longer visible to the eye, dazzled as it had been by the lights, but as it became more accustomed to the darkness, the building gradually revealed itself, dim and shadowy, its huge white surface looking like a spectre, or I could fancy like one of the mysterious inhabitants of the air whom, we are told, Suleeman-ibn-Daood and other sages had under their command, and were thus enabled to describe Again, as we gazed, another procession would pass rapidly, and a sudden flash as of lightning would cause the same effect, interior and exterior of the edifice were as bright, far brighter they seemed, than at noonday

I was enaptured Zenat had left us to ourselves, and we sat, my arm around my beloved, while she nestled close to me, and we murmured to each other those vows of love which hearts like ours could alone frame and give utterance to Long did we sit thus Sahib, I know not how long—the hours fied like moments

"Look!" cried Zora, "look at that mighty gathering in the street below us, they are now lighting the torches, and the procession of the Nal Sahib will presently come forth"

I had not observed it, though I had heard the hum of voices, the gloom of the street had hitherto prevented my distinguishing anything, but as torch after torch was lighted and raised aloft on immense poles, the sea of human heads revealed itself. There were thousands. The street was so packed from side to side, that to move was impossible, the mass was closely wedged together, and we waited impatiently for the time when it should be put in motion, to make the tom of the city.

One by one the processions we had seen pass before us ranged themselves in front, and as they joined together, who can describe the splendom of the effect of the thousands of torches, the thousands of aftab geers, of flags and pennons of all descriptions, the hundreds of elephants, garly caparisoned, bearing on their backs their noble owners, clad in the richest apparel, attended by their armed retainers and sperimen, some stationing, others moving to and fro, amidst the vast mass of human beings!

One elephant in particular I remarked,—a noble animal, bearing a large silver umbars, in which sat four boys, doubtless the sons of some nobleman from the number of attendants which surrounded them. The animal was evidently much excited, whether by the noise, the lights, and the crowd or whether he was "mist" I cannot say but the malout seemed to have great difficulty in keeping him quiet, and often dag his anloos into the brutes head with great force, which made him lift his trunk into the air and bellow with pain. I saw the mahout was enraged, and, from the gestures of some of the persons near could guess that they were advising him to be gentle but the animal become more restive, and I feared there would be some accident, as the mahout only punished him the more severely. At last, by some unlucky chance, the blazing part of a torch fell from the pole upon which it was ruised on the elephant s back. he screamed out with the sudden pain, and ruising his trunk, rashed into the crowd.

Ya Alla, what a sight it was! Hundreds as they vainly on deavoured to get out of the way only wedged themselves closer to gether shricks and scream rent the air; but the most fearful sight was when the maddened beast, mable to make his way through the press, sensed on an unfortunate wretch by the wast with his trink, and whirling him high in the air dashed him against the ground and then kneeling down creahed him to a minimity with his trisk. Involuntarily I turned away my head the sight was selecting and it was just under me.

When I looked again, the brute apparently satisfied, was stand ing quietly and immediately afterwards was driven away; the body of the unfortunate man was carried off and deposited in a neighbour ing shop and all again became quiet.

All at once the multitude broke out into deafining shouts of Hassan! Hoosein! Deen! Deen! the hourse roar of which was mingled with the beating of immense nagaras. The sound was deafening yet most impressive; the multitude became agitated every face was at once turned towards the portal from which the sacred relie was about to issue and it came f rth in another in tant amidst the sudden blaze of a thousand blue lights. I turned my eye to the Char Minar If it had looked brilliant by the torch light how much more so did it now! The pale sulphur us glare can ed its white surface to glitter like silver high in the air the white minarcts gleamed with intenso brightness; and, as it stool out against the deep blue of the sky it seemed to be a sad lea create a of the genil-so grand, so uncarthly-while the numberless torches overpowered by the superior brightness of the fin works, gave a dim and lurid light through their smoke which as there was not a breath of wind, hung over them.

All at once a numberless flight of rockets from the top of the Char Minar sprang hissing into the sky, and at an immense height, far above the tops of the minarcts, burst almost simultaneously, and descended in a shower of brilliant blue balls. There was a breathless silence for a moment, as every eye was upturned to watch their descent, for the effect was overpowering. But again the shouts arose, the multitude swayed to and fro like the waves of a troubled sea, every one turned towards the Char Minar, and in a few instants the living mass was in motion.

It moved slowly at first, but the pressure from behind was so great that those in front were obliged to run, gradually, however, the mighty tide flowed along at a more measured pace, and it seemed endless. Host after host poured through the narrow street, men of all countries, most of them bearing naked weapons which flashed in the torch-light, were ranged in ranks, shouting the cries of the faith, others in the garbs of fakeers chanted wild hymns of the death of the blessed martyrs, others again in fantastic dresses formed themselves into groups, and, as they ran rather than walked along, performed strange and uncouth antics, some were painted from head to foot with different colours, others had hung bells to their ankles, shoulders, and elbows, which jangled as they walked or danced, here and there would be seen a man painted like a tiger, a rope passed round his waist, which was held by three or four others, while the tiger made desperate leaps and charges into the crowd, which were received with shouts of merriment

Some again were dressed in sheepskins, to imitate bears, others were monkeys, with enormous tails, and they grinned and mowed at the crowd which surrounded them. Now, some nobleman would scatter from his elephant showers of pice or couries among the crowd below him, and it was fearful, though amusing, to watch the eager scramble and the desperate exertions of those undermost to extricate themselves,—not unattended by severe bruises and hurts. Bodies of Arabs, singing their wild war-songs, firing their matchlocks in the air, and flourishing their naked swords and jumbeas, joined the throng, and immediately preceded the holy relic, which at last came up

It was carried on a cushion of cloth of gold, covered by a small canopy of silver tissue, the canopy and its deep silver fringes glittering in the blaze of innumerable torches. Moollas dressed in long robes walked slowly before, singing the Moonakib and the Murceas Men waved enormous chourees of the feathers of peacocks' tails, incense burned on the platform of the canopy and sent up its fiagrant gloud of smoke, and handfuls of the sweet ubeer were showered upon the cushion by all who could by any means or exertions get near enough to reach it

Gradually and slowly the whole passed by Who can describe its magnificence? Such a scene must be seen to be folt! I ray fell, such is, for who could see a mighty multitude like that, collected for a holy purpose with one heart, one soul, without emotion? Hours we sat there gaining on the spectacle we scarcely spoke so absorbed where we by the interest of the scene below us. At length however the whole had passed, and the street was left to loneliness and dark ness the few forms which flitted along here and there looked more like the restless spuries of a burial ground than human benges,—and the silence was only now and then broken by a solitary fakeer his bells tinkling as he humand along to join the great procession, the roar of which was heard far and family in the distance.

Just as we were about to retire a number of men formed them solves into a circle around a pit in which were a few lighted embers; but some bundles of grass were thrown on thom—the light blazid up—and drawing their swords they danced round and round the fire, waving their weapons, while all shouted aloud in hearse voices the names of the blessed martyrs. The blazing fire in the centre lighted up their wild forms and gestures as they danced, tossing their arms wildly into the air. Now they stood still, and swayed to and fro, while the fire died away and they were scarcely perceptible Again more face was thrown on, the red blaze spring up far above their heads, and their wild round was reneved with fresh spirit.

The night was now far spent, and the chill breeze which arese warned us to retire. Indeed Zenat and her mother had done so long before, and we were left to ourselves.

Sainb! that was the last night I passed with my beloved, and the whole of our intercourse remains on my memory like the impression of a pleasing dream, on which I delight often to dwell, to conjure up the scenes and conversations of years past and gone—years of wild adventure of trial, of sorrow and of crime

I can picture to myself my Zom as I parted from her on the following morning I can again hear her protestations of unalterable love her entreates that I would soon return to her and above all I remember her surpassing loveliness, and the look of angain h I might call it with which she followed me as I left her after one long passionate embrace. These impressions I say still larger on a mind which has been rendered callous by crime by an habitual system of deception, and by my rudo intercourse with the world—my deadlicet enemy and they are infreshing an I soothing become I have no wrong toward her to charge myself with. I rescued her; eled self me and I loved her too moranded non hit but a longer interce or to have stringthened that affect in, which would have I, t I till death. But why should I talk that? I have all I account to follow and mardiere linger on the discription of such reason.

thoughts? Sahib, I have done with them, I will tell you of steiner things-of the further adventures of my life

I returned to my father, he was not angry at my absence, and I found Mohun Das, the dullal, closeted with him, and also another sahoukar-looking person Mohun Das had been eminently successful The sahoukar I saw was the assistant in a wealthy house, which had need of all our goods, and he was come to see them before the bargain was finally closed They were displayed to him, both goods and jewels, he approved of all, said he would return shortly with an offer for them, and having made a list of the whole he departed

"Now," said Mohun Das, "about the price, what do you ask?"
"You know better than I do," said my father, "therefore do you speak, and remember, the more they sell for the more you get"

"I have not forgotten your munificence," said the dullal, "and I say at once the cloths are worth sixteen, and the jewels ten thousand rupees, but you must ask thuty thousand, -you will get twenty-five I dare say"

"It is too little," said my father, "they cost me nearly that sum, and how am I to pay my guards if I get no profit? I shall ask thu ty-five for the whole"

"Well," said the dullal, "if you do, so much the better for me, but mark what I say, you will get no more than my valuation, however, if you will trust me and leave it to my judgment, I will get a fair price"

"I will, but recollect, twenty-five thousand is the least"

"Certainly," said the dullal, "I go to do your bidding"
"Go," said my father, "Alla Hafiz! be sure you return quickly" It was noon before he returned, but it was with a joyful face when he did come

After many profound salams, he exclaimed to my father have indeed been fortunate, your good destiny has gained you a good bargain I have got thirty thousand six hundred rupees for the whole We had a long fight about it and wasted much breath, but, blessed be Narayun' your slave has been successful See, here is the sahoukar's acknowledgment"

My father took it and pretended to read, I was near laughing outright at his gravity as he took the paper and pored over the ciabbed Hindee characters, of which he did not understand one,- not indeed any other, for he could neither read nor write

"Yes," said he gravely, "it is satisfactory, how am I to be paid?" "The sahoukar will arrange that with you in any way you please," said the dullal, "leady money or bills are equally at your service, but as all transactions are generally at six months' credit, the interest for that time at the usual rate will be deducted "

And if I take bills, I suppose the interest will be allowed till I reach Benares, or whatever place I may take them upon ?

" Certainly "

Good, continued my father 'do you attend here with the shoular and we will estite all about it, and he can take away the merchandse whenever he pleases.

So the dullal departed.

It was now about the time when the taxens were to be brought to the edge of the river to be thrown into the water and as the kniwan was not far from the spot, I proposed to my father to send for our horses and ride thither to see the sight.

horses and ride tither to see the sight.

He agreed, the lorses were quickly brought, and we rode to the bridge over which the road pusses into the city. Taking our stand upon it, we belied beneath us the various and motley groups in the bed of the river. There were thousands assembled the banks of the river and the bed were full—so full it seemed as if you might have walked upon the heads of the multitude. The aftab-geers and the tinsel of the various taxens glittered in the afternoon sun—the end less variety of colours of the dresses had a cheerful and gay effect,—and, though it was nothing to the grand appearance of the procession at night, still it was worth looking at. The taxes were brought one by one, by the various tribes or neighbourhoods to which they belonged, and thrown into the pools in the bed of the river for deep water there was none but there was sufficient for the purpose and as each glittering fabric was can in, it was assailed by hundreds of little ragged urelins, who quickly tore the whole to precess for the sake of the ornaments and there was many a warm contest and sermible over these tenning.

One by one the various groups returned towards their homes, looking weitred and exhausted for the excitement which had ken them up for so many days and nights was gone. In many a shady corner might be seen lying fast asleep, an exhausted writch—his finery still langung about him, his last course perhaps expended in a copious dose of bhung which having done part of its work in exciting him almost to madness during the preceding night, had life him with a racking brinin, and had finally sent him into obbrion

of his fatigue and hunger

The Mohorum was caded. We stayed on the bridge till the time for evening prayer when, repairing to an a lacent mosque we offered up our devotions with the others of the faithful who were there assembled. This done I told my father I should again visit Lora, and most likely remain at her house all might the bil me I sure to return early in the morning on account of our business; and having pre mixed the I departed.

I rode slowly through the new silent and almost descried streets.

The few persons whom I met were hurrying along to their homes, and had no common feeling or interest with each other as before, I passed along the now well-known track, and was soon at the house which held all that was most dear to me on earth I sent up my name and dismounted, I expected the usual summons, and that I should see that countenance I longed to behold welcoming me from the window I waited longer than I could assign a cause for in my own mind, at last my attendant returned, and as he quitted the threshold the door was rudely shut after him, while at the same time the casements of the windows were both shut What was I to think of this? Alas! my forebodings were but too just. My attendant broke in upon my thoughts by addressing me

"Her mother, whom I have seen," said he, "bid me give you her salam, and tell you that her daughter is particularly engaged and cannot receive you I ventured to remonstrate, but the old woman became angry, and told me that she had behaved civilly to you, and that you could not expect more, and further, she said, Tell him from me, that he had better act the part of a wise man, and forget Zora, for never again shall he see her, it will be in vain that he searches for her, for she will be beyond his reach, and I would rather that she died than become the associate and partner of an adventurer like him, who, for all I know, might inveigle her from home, and, when he was tired of her, leave her in some jungle to starve Go and tell him this, and say that if he is a wise man he will forget her"

"And was this all?" exclaimed I in a fury, "was this all the hag said? I will see whether I cannot effect an entrance," and I rushed at the door with all my might. In vain I pushed and battered it with the hilt of my sword, it was too securely fastened within to give way. I called out Zora's name—I raved—I threatened as loud as I could to destroy myself at the door, and that my blood would · be upon the head of that cruel old woman It was all in vain, not a bolt stirred, not a shutter moved, and I sat down in very despair A few persons had collected, observing my wild demeanour, and as I looked up from my knees, where my face had been hidden, one of them said, "Poor youth! it is a pity his love has been unkind, and will not admit him",

"Pooh!" said another, "he is drunk with bhung, Alla knows whether we are safe so near him! He has arms in his hands, we ought to get out of his way vour drunken persons are ticklish people to deal with, let alone their being a scandal to the faith "

I was ashamed, shame for once conquered anger I walked towards my horse, and mounting him rode slowly from the place How desolate everything appeared! The night before, I had reached the summit of happiness. I cast one look to the window where I had sat in sweet converse with her whom I was destined no more to be hold I thought on her words, and the glittering scene was again before me. Now all was dark and silent and accorded well with my feelings. I rode home in this mood, and throwing myself down on my carpet, gave myself up to the bitterness of my feelings and unavailing regret. A thousand schemes I revolved in my mind for It diamissed them as cheating me with vain hopes, only to be suc eccided by others equally vague and unsatisfactory. I rose in the morning feverals and unrefreshed, having determined on nothing. There was only one hope, that of the old woman, the mirro if I could but speak with her I thought I should be able to effect some thing and as soon as I could summon one of the men who had attended Zora. I sent him for information.

CHAPTER XVI.

DHUDDENATH RECOURTS HIS ADVENTURES. THE DULLAL FIXES TO HIS COST THAT A RANGARY IS OFTEN EAST TO MAKE AND EAST TO BREAK.

I HAD not seen Bhudranath now for some days, and fearing he might think me neglectful I went to the semi in which he and the men had put up.

Ah! cried he when he saw me approach, so we are at last permitted to see the light of your countenance! What, in the name of Bhowance, have you been about? I have sought you in vain for the last three days.

"Tell me" said L what you have being doing and you shall Lnow my adventures afterwards."

"Well then, sail he in the first place I have made a series of projahs and sacrifices at the different temples around this most Mohorum; and Li tly I have assisted to kill seven pers no killed seren p rane! I orclaimed in wonder " How in the name of the Prophet, did you manage that?"

Nothing more easy my gay young jemadar he replied; "do you not know that this is the known whire travellers daily arrive in numbers and from which others are as frequently digitting? Nothing is easier than to begule them to accompany us a short distance preten ling that we are going the same read why a Thug might live here for ever and get a decent living. The people (my blessings on them!) are meet un u picious; and thanks to Hunooman and his long as, there is no want of rooks are level to relate them. the city which give capital opportunities for destroying them.

"Alaib!" I exclaimed, "this is very wonderful, and who were they?"

"Not in the least extraordinary," said Bhudrinath coolly, "if you think on it,—but to answer your question The flist was a bunnea who was going to Beeder, we took him to Golconda, and buried him among the tombs, and we got seventy rupees and some pieces of gold from him The second were two men and their wives. who said they were going to Koorungul where that is Bhugwan knows! but it is somewhere in a southerly direction We killed them about three coss from the city, among some rocks, and left them there"

"That was wrong," said I, "you should have buried them"

"Not at all wrong, my friend, who will take the trouble of inquiling after them? Besides, we had not time, for the day had fully dawned, and we feared interruption from travellers, we got above two hundred rupees, and two ponies, which I have sold for thirty rupees"

"Well," said I, "these make five, and the other two—"
"They he there," said Bhudrinath, pointing to where a horse was picketed, "they were poor devils, and not worth the trouble of taking out, we only got forty-two rupees from both"
"Dangerous work," said I, "you might have been seen"

"Oh i no fear of an old hand like me, every one was off to the city to gape at the show, and we were left alone I was deliberating whether we should not accompany them on the road we came in by, and by which they were going, but Surfuraz Khan cut short my doubts and uncertainties by strangling one fellow on the spot, and I followed his example with the other, the bodies were concealed till night, and then buried"

"But is there no fear of the grave bursting?" I asked

"Fear! oh no, they he deep enough, and you He laughed know our old tricks"

"Well," said I, "it is most satisfactory, and I have missed all this, have been a fool, and have lost my mistress into the bargain" Bhudi math laughed immoderately, but seeing the gravity of my face, he said,—

"Never mind, Meer Salub, care not for my merriment, but truly thy face wore so lack-a-daisical an expression, that for my life I could not have refrained Cheer up, man, there is plenty of work in store for you, women will be faithless, and young and hot-biained fellows will grieve for them, but take a friend's advice, make your profession your mistress, and she at least will never disappoint you"

"Your advice is good," said I, "nevertheless the mistress I have lost is, as you know, worthy of regret, and I shall miss her for many a day But tell me, what have you now in hand,-anything in which I may have a share?

Why no, he replied, nothing but if you are so inclined wo will take a ramble this evening through the bazars, we may perhaps pick up somebody

"Of course I will be with you, for in truth my hand will got out of practice if I neglect work. But have you seen my father?

I have not, said Bhudrinath I hear he is very much engaged about the property and do not like to disturb him.

You are right, he is," said I but he will finish all to-day and get the money I suppose after that we shall not stay long here, and for my part I care not how soon we set off I am anxious for new scenes and advantures and we are not likely to do much hore. Is not Surfurns Khan here?

"No he is gone with a party of seven travellers towards Puttuncherroo, and has taken ten or fifteen of the best of the men with him he will not be back probably before night, if then.

"Who were the travellers?"

"Bunneas, I heard," said Bhudrinath carelessly "I did not see them myself and Surfuras Khan was in too great a hurry to give me any information.

"Out upon me!" I exclaimed, vexed at my idleness here have I been amusing myself while all this has been going on For the sake of the Prophet, let us do something soon, that I may settle scores with my conscience, for I have hardly assurance enough to look you in the face after my behaviour"

Well, said he, come this ovening if we can't decoy any one we will kill somebody for amusement and practice.

"I agree" said; for by Alia! I must do something I am as melancholy as a camel, and my blood, which boiled enough yester day seems now scarcely to run through me -it is not to be horne "

I found when I reached home that the dullal had arrived and with him the sahoukar's clerk, and some porters to carry the goods, as well as fellows with matchlocks and lighted matches and others with swords and shields to escort them. I stored at them

"One would think you were going to battle S three said I with all those flerce fellows I am half afraid of them.

The follows laughed; and the clerk replied, They are necessary and we always have them. If our goods were stolen, nav carried off before our eyes, should we get any redress? no, indeed.

We therefore protect our property the best way we can how" said my father "take your goods and be off with them; ther are no longer mine and I fear to allow them to remain under my root.

"Surely," said the clerk, "they will be out of your way directly. and now let us speak about your money, or will you take some merchandise as part of it?"

"Not a bit, not a bit," replied my father, "I want all my money in rupees—no, stay, not all in rupees, give me five thousand in silver and the rest in gold, it will be easier carried"

"I suppose you mean five thousand rupees, and the rest in gold bars, well, you must purchase gold according to weight, and the best is twenty rupees a tola, but you had better take bills, and the exchange is favourable "

"No, no, no bills," said my father, "but the gold, if I remember rightly, the price of gold was high when I left Dehli, and was likely to remain so, and I have plenty of persons for my guard if robbers should attack me"

"You forget me," cried the dullal, "and my percentage"
"Make yourself easy," said I, "it will be paid out of the five thousand rupees, it will be about fifteen hundred I think"

"What did you say? fifteen hundred To whom?" asked the clerk

"To this dullal," said I, "I suspect the rascal is cheating us" "Cheating! surely he is Why, Mohun Das, good man, what have you been about? Are you mad, to ask so much?"

"Ah, it was my lord's offer and promise," said he, "and surely I shall now get it Pray what business is it of yours?"

"What ought he to have?" asked my father

"One per cent is ample," replied the other, "and you might have saved this too if you had only applied yourself to the different sahoukars"

"We were strangers," said I, "and knew not their places of residence, so we were obliged to have recourse to this rascal, who offered his services"

"What! did you not take me from the Char Minar? Did you not promise me five per cent, and bind me to secresy about the sale of your goods?" cried the dullal.

"Lasten to him," said my father, "he raves Now, Meer Sahib, did not this rascal come begging and beseeching for employment, and when I said I would try him, and asked his terms, he said he was miserably poor, and would take whatever was given him, was it not so? And now, Punah-i-Khoda, we are to be bearded in this manner, defiauded of fifteen hundred rupees, where we have not as many couries to give, and made to eat dirt into the bargain Beat him on the mouth with a shoe! spit on him! may he be defiled so that Ganges' water would not purify him! may his mother, sisters, and all his female relatives be _____,"

"Nay, my good friend," said the sahoukar's clerk, "be not thus rash and hot-headed, nor westo your breath upon so mean a wretch since you have employed him, something must be given it is the custom, and next time you will know better say may I pay him the one per cent which will be three hundred and six rupces?"

"Three bundred and six rupces! Alla, Alla! where am I to get the half? cried my father "For the love of the Prophet, get me off what you can I swear by your head and eyes that I am a poor man, and only an agent 1s it not so Meer Sahib? Am I not miser ably poor ?

You certainly cannot afford to pay so much money as one per cent on this large sum. I replied; nevertheless, as such appears to be the custom, you had better give something say one hundred and fifty rupees.

Certainly said my father "I am ready I will not refuse any thing in reason; but so large a sum—I was quite astounded at the importanence of the demand, and lost my temper like a fool.

Mohun Das stood all this time with his ever and mouth wide open looking from one to the other every word that was uttered increasing his astonishment and disappointment.

Do you pretend to say "screamed be at last, "do you pretend to say that I am not to get my money my fifteen hundred rapees, for which I have toiled night and day? And do you pretend to say I came to you first? Did you not take me with you from the Char Minar?,"

Any licro is the Char Minar again for the sake of Ula, said I to the clerk, if you really know this follow advise him to be quet What have I, who am a soldier to do with his filthy traffic? Ho may provoke a patient man once too often, and people with weapons in their hands are not safe persons to play jokes with — and I twisted up my mustachies.

I have told you, sahib, what a coward the fellow was; he fell in stantily on the ground and rubbed his forchead against the floor

"Pardon! pardon! he creed, "most brave sirs! anything what ever you choose to give me even ten rupees, will be thankfully received, but do not kill me do not put me to death; see I fall at your feet, I rab my nose in the dant."

You fool, cried the clerk, holding his sides with laughter for he was a fat man; "you fool; ah, Mohim Das, that I should have seen this! In the name of harryan, who will do you say harm? Are you a child—you with those mustachies? Shame on you man;

dullal as you are be something less of a coward get up, ask for your money boldly ask for whatever these gentlemen please to give you, though indeed you deserve nothing for your impertinent attempt at deception."

He got up and stood on his left leg with the sole of the right foot against the calf, his hands joined, his turban all awry, and the expression of his face most ludicrously miserable

"Ten rupees, my loid," he faltered out, "your slave will take ten iupees '

We all once more burst into a peal of laughter, the gomashta's sides appeared to ache, and the tears ran down his cheeks

"Ar Bhugwan! Ar Narayun!" cried he, catching his breath, "that I should have seen this! Ar Sectaram! but it is most amusing Ten rupees ' why, man," said he to the miserable dullal, "you just now wanted fifteen hundred!"

"Nay," said my father, "let him have his due You said one hundred and fifty,—that he shall have Do you, Meer Sahib, go with this worthy sahoukar to his kothee, and bring the money, I daie say he will give you a guard back, and you can hire a porter for the gold and silver"

"Certainly, you shall have the men," said the gomashta, "and now come along, I shall have to collect the gold, and it may be late before it can be weighed and delivered to you, and the rupees passed by a smaff"

As we went on, the dullal said to me, "You will pay me at the kothee, will you not ?"

"We will see," said I, "the money is none of mine, and I will ask advice on the subject"

"Not your money! Whose then?"

"Why his who has employed you, and from whom you are to get one hundred and fifty rupees," I said "Ale you a fool? why do you ask?"

"Ah nothing, only I was thinking—"

"Thinking of what?" I asked, "some i ascality, I doubt not"
"Ah," said he, "now you speak as you did at the Char Minar" "By Alla!" said I, stopping and looking at him, "if ever you mention that word again____"

"Never, never!" cried the wretch, trembling, "do not beat me, remember it is the open street, and there will be a disturbance, the words escaped me unawares, just as I was thinking---"

"That is twice you have said that, and by Alla! I think you have some meaning in it What would you be at?"

"Nothing, nothing," said he, "only I was thinking-"
"Well!"

"I was only thinking that you are an adventurer, who has accompanied that rich merchant from Hindostan"

"Well, and what of that? you knew that before"

"You are not rich?"

"No indeed," said I, "I am not"

"Then," said the wretch, "why not both of us enrich ourselves?"

"How? I asked

"Refuse the guard, or take some men I will guide you to they will do whatever you like for five rupees apiece me will fly with the money and there is a place in the rocks close to this where I have plunder hidden—we will go thither and share it."

"Where is the place you allude to-is it far? I asked.

No said he "will you come I can show it you from a distance we need not got up the rocks—there is danger of being seen in the daytime."

I followed him for a little distance and he pointed to a huge pile of rocks at the back of the karwan and Begum Bazar

There, do you see a white spot about halfway up on a rock?"

"I do, and L

That is the spot," he replied "it is known but to myself and a few others whatever I can pick up I put there"

What do you get?

"Ah, little enough sometimes a shawl, a brocade handkerchief or some gold, anything in fact. But why do you ask? will you do what I said, and join us? There are sixteen of us one is yonder disguised as a fakeer the rest are hard by and will accompany us.

Dog! cricd I dashing him to the certh, dog! dost thou know to whom then speakest? Here there is no one (for we had got to the back of the honses) and it were an easy task to send thee to Johanum one blow of my sword and that false tongue would cease to speak for ever " and I half drow it. I know the effect this would have there was the same groveling cowardice he had displayed before. He clung to my knees I spuraed him and spat on him

Reptile!" croed I at length, weared by his abjectness, I would seem to touch thee a synd of Hindostan is too proud to atoop to such game as then art. Lend me to the sahoukar for by Alla, I distribute the state of the sahoukar for by Alla, I distribute the sahoukar for by Alla, I distribute

"Nay in this matter I have been honest and the wretch 'the money is sure

It will be well for thee that it is." said I or I swear to be reverged Lead on and beware how you go if I see one attempt at escape I will cut you in two, were it in the middle of the bann

Then follow me closely said he and he gathered up hi garments, which had become disordered and we again entered the crowded bazar

We were soon at the salienkars, who awaited us; the money and gold were told out and a receipt I had brought with me given and necompanied by the guard of soldiers. I took the treasure to my father

Meer Saluh, kind Meer Saluh " and the dullal, as no appeared our durilling you will forget all that has passed. Bhagman knon-

I was only jesting with you, I love to play such tricks,—nay, I have always been of a jesting disposition," and he laughed in his terror. "You will not forget my little perquisite, my hundred and fifty rupees, I know you will not"

"Peace!" cried I, "if you wish to get a courie Has it not been promised to thee on the word of two of the faithful? Thou shalt get the uttermost farthing "

I dismissed the sepoys with a small present, when the money had been lodged in our strong-room, and as they went, the miserable dullal looked after them as though he thought with them had departed his last chance for existence. It certainly drew to a close

"Give me my money and let me depart," said he in a hollow voice

"Wait," said I, "till it is counted out for you"
"Ah, I had forgotten the dullaliee," cried my father, "I will get out his due."

CHAPTER XVII

Cheel ke ghur men, mas ka dhér — Hindee Proverb There's always meat in a kite's nest — Free Translation

My father counted out the money and handed it over to the dullal, his countenance brightened as he viewed it, and he made numberless salams and protestations of thanks "Now you must write a receipt for the money," said my father

"Surely," replied the fellow, taking a pen out of his turban, "if my lord will give me paper and ink" "Here they are," said I, "write"

He did so, gave me the paper, and tied the money up in a coiner of his dhotee, which he tucked into his waistband "Have I permission to depart?" he asked, "my loid knows the poor dullal, and that he has behaved honestly in this transaction. Whenever my lord actums to Hyderabad, he can always hear of Mohun Das, if he inquires at the Char Minai, and he will always be ready to exert himself in his patron's service"

"Stay," said I, "I have somewhat to say to thee," and I related to my father the whole of the conversation I have just described

"Is it so?" said he to the miserable being before him, "is it so? Speak, wietch! let me hear the truth from thine own lips Wouldest thou have robbed me?"

But the creature he addressed was mute, he stood paralysed by fe ii and conscious guilt, his eyes starting from his head, his mouth open, and his blanched lips drawn tightly across his teeth

"Thou hast deserved it, continued my father. I read in that vile face of thine deeds of robbery of murder of knavery and villany of every kind thou must die!"

Ah, no, no! Die? My lord is pleased to be facetions what has his poor slave done?" And he grinned a ghastly smile

Thou wouldest have robbed me" said my father "when I trusted thee with my whole substance them wouldest have left me to starve in a strange land without compunction then hast robbed others, and cheated thousands say art thou fit to live to prey longer upon the world thou hast already despoiled?

He threw himself at my father s feet he grasped his knees he could scarcely speak, and was fearfully convulsed and aguited by extremo torror "I am all that you say" he cried "thief murderer and villain! but oh! do not kill me My lord s face is kind—I cannot die—and my lord has no sword and how will he kill me? Hi had only just perceived that we were both unarmed, and he made a sudden rush at the door The kotwal shall know of this," he cried "people are not to be terrified with impunity The door was fastened he gave several desporate pulls and pushes at it; but I was at his back, and the fatal handkerchief was over his head: he turned round and glared on me—the next instant he was dead at my feet.

"There" said my father exultingly "judgment has overtaken him, and the memory of his crimes will sleep with him for over we have done a good deed "

Yes, said I, a good one indeed; he confessed himself to be a murderer robber and knave—what more need you? and so young too for this accumulation of crime!"

'Drag him in here" said my father "I like not to look on him; and go for the lugbaces he must be buried at night in the small yard of the house; I dare not have the body carried out in thi crowded city

'It shall be done I replied "but think what an escape we have lind. Had you not told me to go with the wretch we should have lost our money

"les, my son and even had we got it had you not suspected that five per cent was too much, I should certainly have paid the num but I saw your drift and I think took up the clue admirably We have cheated the knave both out of his money and his life."

"True" said I it has been a good adventure and amusing withal; besides, it promises further advantage "

"I rom the rock and the fakeer? "Ies there will be good booty"

"Take care said my father; "the land may be there and they will give you a warm reception.

"I will go and consult with Bhudi math," said I, "the adventure will just suit him and Suifuiaz Khan, we will do nothing rashly"

Bhudi math was at the serai waiting for me

"So, Meer Sahrb," said he, "you are still in the humour for a fiolic, how many lives will satisfy your worship to-night? There is no lack of men in this abode of villany"

"I am in the humour," said I, "but not for what I intended, I have better game in view"

"Ha!" said he, "so you have been acting sotha, and pray what may this game be ?"

"One that will require stout hearts, and, may be, naked weapons,"

I replied; are you willing to accompany me ?"

"To death," said Bludi math, "but I cannot for my life see what you are driving at "

"Listen," I replied, and I related to him the whole history of the

dullal

"Cleverly done, very cleverly indeed, my young jemadar," said he, when my relation was ended "No one could have managed it better from first to last, the rascal descrived his fate, and now I suppose we must search out these hidden treasures in the rock"

"Exactly," said I, "I would do so this very night if I knew how to go about it properly "

"Let me see," said Bhudinath musing, "we shall not want many men, six or eight resolute fellows will be sufficient. You and I, Peer Khan, Motee-ram, and four others, are ample, there is no use waiting for Surfuraz Khan, he will not now be back before the morn-But how to get intelligence of the place, and whether any of the rascals are there at might?"

"Can no one personate a fakcer?" said I, "a kulundur, anything will do He might go up now, as the spot is close by, and bring us news in an hour or so "

"I have it," cried Bhudrinath "Here, some one, call Shekhjee to me"

Shekhjee came He was an old man, with a long beard, but he was an able fellow and a rare good hand with the handkerchief

"Shekhjee," said Bhudi math, "sit down, I have something to say to you You can personate a fakeer, if necessary, can you not?"

"Certainly," replied the old fellow, "Moosulman or Hindoo, all kinds are familiar to me I know all their forms of speech and have many of their dresses"

"It is well," said Bhudrinath, "now listen You must go and disguise yourself this instant, we have an enterprise in view," and he related our purposed scheme and what had preceded it "And he related our purposed scheme and what had preceded it now," continued Bhudrinath, "you must be wary, and by dark you must return and tell us of the place and if there are men there" "Is the fakeer who lives there a Hindoo or Moosulman?

"I saw the impression of spread hands in whitewash on the rock, so he must be a Mossulman, and I

"Then I know how touct, cried the Thug Sahiba, I take my leave and will not fail you. I shall be with you by the time I am required."

Will be manage at? I asked of Bhudranath, "Methanks at is a delicate business

Nover fear him," and Bhudrinath he is a most accomplished regue, and is a capital hand at disguise, especially as a fakeer and once got us considerable booty by enticing five Nanukshae fakeers among us who had picked up a good deal of money and were going to build a well with it. Besides, he is as brave as a hon, and you have seen his other work

As we were talking Surfaraz Khan came in Ours has been a good business, he cried exultingly "and there sood spoil. We have killed all the men and the plunder is coming in charge of our follows.

"That is so far good, and I but is there any ready money or as at all goods?

"Both, Meer Sahib both but methinks you need not be so ready to ask, when we have not seem your face ever since we have been in the city. We might all have been taken and safely ledged in Pantoo Lall's huw lee for all you know of the matter. I do not like such conduct

I was enraged at his speech, and was about making an angry reply when Bhudringth interfered.

Teace!" said he no brawls at a disgraceful and only fit for drunkards and smokers of gana; listen to me Surfarus Khan you are no boy and ought not to let your anger have sway listen, and hear what our young jemadar has been about, and I swear by Bliomance I think he will ret put us all to shame"

He then related all I had told him, on hearing which Surfarix klian's angry feelings gave way in a moment he rose and embraced me.

"I was wrong said he "and you must forgive me; and to prove that I am more than ever your friend I beg you to allow me a place in this adventure for by Alla it promises to be a strongone."

one"
"Willingly "said I; we thought you would not arrive in time hat now you are come I would not on any account that you did not accompany no

"So you have strangled the fellows you took out said Ill mil rinath. Had you any trouble?

"None whatever" replied the khan. We took them out on the Masulipatam road, and found a spot on the other side of Surroonuggur, we threw the bodies into a well and returned by another road Soobhan Alla! this is a rare place, and we might remain here for years and have some amusement every day I think I shall stay here"

"You may do as you please about that," said I, "when we have shared the spoil we have got You will then be free, but I should be sorry to lose you"

In such conversation we continued till it was dusk, and then assembling the men we intended to take, eight in all, and seeing that our arms were in good order, we waited in great anxiety for the return of our emissary

At last he came

"There is no time to be lost," said he "I went up to the place and found the fakeer He is a fine sturdy young fellow, and at first warned me to descend, but when I told him I was hungry and weary, that I had just arrived from Hindostan, and did not know where to lay my head, and begged for a crust of bread and water in the name of the Twelve Imaums, he was pacified, and admitted me into his cave, gave me some food and a hookah, and we sat carousing for some time I pulled out my opium-box and took a very little, seeing it, he begged for some, and has taken such a dose that he will not wake till morning I left him fast asleep"

"He shall never wake again," said I, "but did you observe the place? Where can the plunder be hidden?"

"He lives in a cave, between two enormous rocks," said Shekhjee "It was nearly all in darkness, but I saw a corner at the back of it built up with mud and stones, which he said was his sleeping-place, and I suspect it is there that the plunder is concealed "

"Come then," said I, "there is not a moment to be lost, if we delay we may chance to find the rest of the gang This is just the hour at which they are all out in the bazars, stealing what they

We all sallied out, and conducted by our guide, crept stealthily along the foot of the rocks till we gained the narrow pathway by which we were to ascend

We held a moment's conference in whispers, and bidding five of the men stay below until we should tell them to ascend, Bhudrinath, myself, and Surfuraz Khan crept up the narrow track to the mouth of the cave, whither the old Thug had preceded us

"He still sleeps," said he in a whisper, "but tread softly, lest you wake him He hes yonder, close by the lamp"

"Mind, he is mine," said I to Bhudrinath, "do you and Sufuraz Khan hold him," for as I looked on the powerful form before me, I felt this precaution to be necessary But he slept, how was

I to throw the roomal about his neck? Bhudmath solved the difficulty he gave the fakeer a smart blow with the flat of his sheathed sword upon the stomach and the fellow started up to a atting posture.

What is this? Thieves!" was all he could say my handkerchief was ready and now it never failed me he was dead in an instant " Now trim the lamp, said I to Bhudrinath Call up three of the men, and let the others remain below to look out.

Bhudrinath tore a piece of rag off the clothes of the dead fakeer which he twisted up into a thick wick and put into the oil vessel its strong glare lighted up the interior of the cave and we saw every thme distinctly

Hero is the wall which I spoke of, said Shekhice and we had better search behind it "

We did so There were piles of earthen jars in one corner which we at first supposed to contain grain or flour and indeed the first two we uncovered had rice and dal in them the third felt heavy

This has something in it beyond rice said I; "examine it The mouth was stuffed with race, but when they were removed we beheld it filled with money-rupees and pice mixed together

"This was not wase" said Bhudrinath the Shah Sahib ought not to have mixed his copper and silver the silver will be tarnished; but we can clean it.

The next pot was the same : the last was the best : it was full of gold and silver ornaments, rings, anklets, and armlets. We shad

dered to see that many of them were stained with blood

"The villains! I exclaimed; "that wrotch then told the truth when he confessed himself to be a murderer the city is well rid of him. But we must not stand talking Do one of ye tie there things up and be ready for a start while we look out for further aporl.

But there was nothing else in this corner no bales of cloth or other articles as we had expected We were looking about to find any other place of concealment and had nearly given up our search when Surfama Khan, who had gone outside called to us.

Come here" he cried; there is a place here which looks sur picious."

We ran to the spot and found the hole he had discovered to be between two rocks at was dark within, and a man could but just enter by crawling upon his hands and kneed

"Give me the light said I; I will enter it if the devil were in ride"

"Better the devil than any of this infernal gang said like limath to me as I entered.

I found no one, and the space within, which was so low that I could scarcely stand upright, was filled with bundles "Neither the devil or any of the gang are here," cried I to those outside, "so do some of you come in quickly and see what I have found "

I set myself to work, as did also the others, to untie the different bundles, and we were all busily employed I had just opened one which contained, as I thought, brass cooking-pots and water-vessels, and was overjoyed to find some gold and other silver, when the alarm was given from outside We all got out as quickly as we could and mouned the cause

"There are two men," said the scouts, "whom we have watched come round the corner of the houses yonder and approach the bottom of the rocks, they do not walk fast, and appear to be carrying loads of something"

"Only two," said I, "then they are easily managed Put out the light, and conceal yourselves at the entrance of the cave, we must fall upon them as they enter"

We had just taken our posts behind a rock which was close to the mouth, our roomals ready, and two with their swords drawn, when one of the fellows called out, "Ho! Sein! Sein! come down and help us up Here we are, laden like pulla-wallas, and thou hast not even a light to show us the way"

"Not a word," said I, "as you value your lives Let them come"
"May his mother be defiled!" said the other fellow "The beast is drunk in his den and does not hear us I will settle with him for this"

I suppose he stumbled and fell, for there was another series of execrations at the fakeer, the load, and the stones, but in a few moments more they both reached the platform and threw down then bundles, which clanked as they fell

"Where is this drunken rascal?" said one, a tall fellow as big as the one we had killed "No light for us, and I warrant the brute has either smoked himself dead drunk or is away at the blungkhana just when he is wanted"

The other sat down, apparently fairly tired and out of breath "Go inside," said he, "you will find the lamp and cruse of oil behind the wall I will not stir an inch"

The first speaker entered, cursing and abusing the fakeer Surfuraz Khan and I rushed on him and despatched him, but the other hearing the scuffle cried out and attempted to escape He was not fated to do so, however. his foot slipped, or he stumbled over one of the bundles he had brought, and fell, and before he could rise had received his death-wound by a cut in the neck from one of the men behind the rock, who darted out upon him

Enough of this work," said I; we had better be off first, how over let us pay one more visit to the hole and get what we can, and do one of you see what is in the bundles.

We again entered the hole and each taking a bundle we got out.
Those the fellows had brought only contained cooking pots and a few cloths, so we left them behind, and made the best of our way to the serni laden with our booty

I have forgotten to tell you, sahib how many more proofs we discovered in that cave of the bloody trade of these villains. Many of the bundles were of wearing apparel, and most of them covered with blood. One that I opened was quite saturated and as the still wet gore stuck to my fingers, I dropped it with mingled di gust and horror.

CHAPTER XVIII

SHOWING HOW SURFURAL KHAN AND HIS PARTY GOT INTO A FCRAIL AND HOW THEY WERE EXTRICATED THEFEFORM

When we returned we had a good laugh over our success. The adventure was novel to us all and we pictured to conselves the mortification and chagen of the robbers, when they should arrive at finding their stronghold plundered of all its valuables, and their friends lying dead at the threshold, instead of being ready to receive them and recount their adventures of the evening

As a better place of security I took the powers and silver vessels I had found to our house and locked them up in the strong room to be disposed of afterwards as best they might be

My father I need not say was overpowered with joy; and every new feat that I performed seemed to render me more dear to him.

He caressed me as though I had still been a child

"Wait till these actions are known in Hinde-tan, my son" said he with enthusiasm; "I am much mistaken indeed if they do not miss you to a rank which has been attained by few—that of subsider.

I did not reply to him, but I made an anymal determination to venture everything to attain it. I was aware that nothing but a very successful expedition coupled with large body and a deed of some notoriety and daring could raise me to the rank my father had mentioned but that it could be attained I had no doubt, ance others had reached it before me and why should not I whose whole soul was bent upon winning fame through deeds which men should tremble to lear?

Two days after our adventure at the rebbers care the whole of the karman and adjacent neighbourhood were thrown into great excitement from the aiscovery of the dead bodies by their smell and the number of vultures they attracted. Various were the conjectures as to the perpetiators of the violent deed, and many attributed it to the treachery of some of the band of robbers, however, all agreed that a great benefit had been done by unknown agents Much of the stolen property was recovered, among it was some of great value which had been stolen from a sahoukar a short time before, and which in our hurry and confusion had escaped us, but, as it was, we had got a considerable booty. All the gold and silver was secretly melted into lumps by one of our men who understood how to do it, and it was valued by weight at upwards of seven thousand rupees

On a general division of the proceeds of the booty being proposed, which amounted in a gross sum, by the sale of the camels, horses, bullocks, carts, and various valuables, to about fifty thousand rupees, all the Thugs agreed that it had better be reserved until the return of the expedition to our village, and meanwhile twenty rupees were disbursed to each inferior, and fifty to each jemadar, for their present wants My father now talked of leaving the city; but I entreated a further stay of ten days, as, in concert with Bhudrinath and Surfuraz Khan, I had laid out a plan for dividing our gang into four portions, one to take post on each side of the city, and to exercise our vocation separately, the proceeds to be deposited as collected in one place, and to be divided when we could no longer carry on our work

The plan was favourably received by him, and that day it was put into execution We paid the trifling rent of our house, and on the pretence that we were about to leave the city and return to Hindostan, quitted the kaiwan and took up our quarters on the other side, in a suburb which bordered upon the Meer Joomla tank Bhudrinath and his party went into the Chuddar Ghat bazar, near the magnificent mansion of the Resident, as, being a grand thoroughfare, it was frequented by numerous travellers, and from thence branched off many roads, both to the north and east Surfuraz Khan with eight men continued at the kaiwan, as he was less known than we were Another large party took post on the west-ern road from the city towards Shumshabad, under Peer Khan and Motee-ram, who were resolved by their exertions to merit the trust which had been confided to them

Our plan succeeded wonderfully, not a day passed in which the destruction of several parties was not reported, and though the booty gained was inconsiderable, yet it was probably as much as we could expect, and it was all collected and deposited in our new abode, from whence my father disposed of such as met a ready sale

I pass over my own share in these little affairs I had thought,

when I selected the quarter I did, that there would have been more work than turned out to be the case I was disappointed in the small share which fell to my lot, in despite of my utmost exertions to the contrary and entreated Bhudanath or Surfurar Khan to exchange places with me. They however would not they had laid their own plans and as I had myself selected my station I had no right to any other nor ought I to have been dissatisfied.

It was very early in the morning of the eighth day after we had commenced operations, that Bhudrinath came to me in great alarm.

"We must fly " said he "the city is no longer safe for us.

"How?" I asked in automshment what has happened? Has anght been discovered, or have any of the band proved faithless and denounced us?"

I will tell you," replied Bhudrinath it is a sad affair—some of our best men are taken and in confinement. You know Surfuras Khan to be daring far beyond the bounds of discretion, and that for this reason few litherto have liked to trust themselves to his guidance and but for this fault he would ere now have been one of our leading joundars, for he is a Thug by descent of many generations, and his family has always been powerful.

But the matter cried I impatiently "what in the name of Shitan have we to do with his ancestors? By Alla! you are as bad as a---

"Nay I was not going to make a story about it," said Bhud ranath mildly for nothing could provoke him, so do not lose your temper but listen Surfarax Khan, then, yesterday evening had got hold of two sahoukars, who were on the eve of departure for Aurungabad he persuaded them to put up in the serai with him and they were to start the next morning. They were supposed to be rich, as their effects in two panniers were brought into the serai, and carefully watched by thom. By some unlucky chance just as the evening set in, they were visited by two or three other mer chants whom they seemed to know and who persuaded them to wait for another week, and to join them in their journey up the country To the extreme mortification of Surfaras Khan they agreed to the proposal but as they said there would be danger in removing their lags from the semi at night they told their friends they would alcep there and join them in the morning burfumz Khan, I bear made every exertion by persuasion to induce them to alter their determination but in vain. So you know there remained but one alternative which was to put them to death in the serai and to dupo e of the bodies as well as they could; be ides the circumstance of the men being afraid to risk their bags by removal at night looked as though they were of value I mu t own Meer Sahib it was tempting it would even have been so for you or me -law much more for the Khan! Had he even waited till towards morning, done the business, and started, leaving the bodies where they were, he could have got clean off with the booty, which was large, and he could have come round the back of the city and joined you or me, any one of us could have taken his post in the karwan. and no one would have been at all suspicious But no, he did not reflect, the men were killed almost immediately after their friends left, and their bags plundered As it is, we have got some of the spoil in the shape of two strings of pearls, but the best are gone "

"And how was the matter discovered? you have not said"

"Why," continued Bhudrinath, "one of the sahoukars' friends shortly after returned with a message Surfuraz Khan made some excuse that they had gone out, but would soon return The fellow waited for a long time, but at last growing suspicious he went away, and returned with the others, who insisted upon a search for their friends Surfuraz Khan had contrived to bury the bodies in the yard, but some articles were found on his person which the others positively swore to, as also the bags in which they had been, and the upshot of the whole was, that they were all marched off to the city by a guard which was summoned from somewhere or other for the purpose, except one of them, by name Himmat Khan, one of Surfuraz's own people, who happened to be absent "
"It is a sad business truly," said I, "and I do not exactly see what is to be done to extricate them"

"Nor I," replied Bhudrinath, "but this evil comes of not taking the omens, nor attending properly to them when they are taken" "Nonsense!" said I, "you are always prating about these foolish omens, as if success lay in them more than in stout hearts and cunning plans I believe them not"

"You will rue it then one day or other," said Bhudrinath, "depend upon it you will rue it I tell you I could mention a hundred instances of the disastrous effects of disregard of omens, and what I say will be readily confirmed by your father"

"Pooh," said I, "he is as superstitious and absuid as yourself, why do you not make your lamentations on my want of faith to him, instead of troubling me with them?"

"I would," he replied, "but that he seems to have given over the charge of the whole expedition to you, and to have forgotten his station as the leader and conductor Did any one ever hear of a whole band being separated, and each pursuing a separate course, without the omens being taken, or a solemn sacrifice offered to Bhowanee?"

"I thought you had performed all the rites you seem to think so necessary," said I sneeringly, "and if you have not, to whom else have we to look but to you, who are the nishan-buidar? By Alla and his prophet! Bhudrinath, methinks you have deceived us all and said I, my angor rising "I hid you beware how you speak o my father as you have done remember that I am able and willing to avenge any word which may be spoken against him, and I will do it.

"Young man, and Bhadrinath gravely you well know me to be one who never enters into idle brawls or quarrels, and these angry words of yours are wasted keep them I pray you, for these who will gratify you by taking offence at them—to me they are trifles. Your placing no dependence upon the omens which have been considered by Thugs both of your faith and mine to be essential to our success, is only attributable to your inexperience; the necessary offenings have been neglected by us, and behold the punish ment. Though at present it has fallen lightly upon us, there is no saying how soon the whole of us may be in danger suppose any of these taken are put to the torture and denounce us, how could we escape?

"Then what do you counsel?" said I.

"I would first propose an offering to Bhowance and then such measures for the deliverance of these who have been seized as may be hereafter determined on by us all."

Perform the ceremonies by all means, said I "you and my father know how to do so. My ignorance might mar your object, so I will keep away from you till they are over "

"You are right, it might, and I am glad to hear you at length speak reasonably where is your father?

"You will find him asleep within, said I "and you had better go to him "

Sabib the scerifices were made the omens watched and declared to be favourable. What they were I know not I cared so little about these ceremonies then that I did not go near them, or even ask what had been done. It was only in after days that their value and importance were impressed upon me by a series of mistoriumes which were no doubt sent to check my presumption; since them my faith in them has been steadfast, as you shall hereafter learn.

My father and Bhadrinath returned to me with joyful countenances. "Bhowance is propitious, said they, in spite of this little display of heranger The truth is, we have in some manner neglected her but she is now sati fied.

"Since that is the case" said I we had better be stirring and doing something for the poor fellows but what to do I know not When did you say they were recred Bludrinath?"

About the middle of the night.

Then they are now in confinement remembers or oth and will be impossible to effect their release by day. A little I dare n offer, for they say Hussem Alı Khan, the kotwal, is an upright man

When is it likely they will be brought before him?"

"I know not," said Bhudrinath, "but it can easily be ascertained," and he went into the street, and soon returned "I asked an old bunnea the question, or rather at what time the kotwal held his durbai, and he told me in the first and second watches of the night"

"Then," said I, "they must be rescued by force, and I will do it"
"Impossible!" cried both at once

"But I tell you I will do it," said I, "where is Himmat Khan? With him and six of our best men I will do it, if they will stand by Do any of them know the kotwal's house ?"

They were summoned, but none knew it

"Then," said I, "I will go even now and find it out, and will return when my plan is perfected "
"And I will go and bring some of my men," said Bhudrinath, "I will be back by noon"

"See that they bring their swords and shields, Bhudrinath, some of them may volunteer to accompany me"

"I will do so for one, Meer Sahib, I have confidence in you in spite of your want of faith," and he laughed "I understand you," said I, "you forgive me?"

"Certainly, did I ever quarrel with you?"

"No, indeed, though you had cause, I was foolish"

"Why, what is all this?" said my father "You have not surely been offended with each other?"

"It is nothing," I replied, "for you see the end of it, but I am losing time, I must depart"

I went into the city, and easily got a person to show me the kotwal's It was in a long, narrow street, which did not appear much of a thoroughfare This exactly suited my purpose, for we could have done little in a crowded place It seemed very practicable to surprise the men who should escort our friends, and I had no doubt if suddenly attacked, they would scamper off, and leave their prisoners to their fate

I returned and laid the result of my inquiries before my father He was not averse to the undertaking, but was in much alarm at the prominent part I should have to play, and the chance of our being defeated

"But," said he, "my son, these thoughts are the cowardly ones which affection often suggests, and Alla forbid they should have any effect with you, go, in the name of the Prophet, to whose protection I commend you"

Towards evening, therefore, myself, Bhudrinath and six others, two of whom were rappoots, who swore to die rather than come back unsuccessful, went into the city We separated but kept in view of each other and they all followed me to the street in which the kotwal resided. There we lounged about for some hours, and I grew very impatient. Would they ever come? had they even be fore this been tried, condemned, and cast into prison? were questions I asked myself a thousand times. That the durbar was being held I knew by the number of persons who went in and came out of the house but still there were no signs of our brethren.

I was sitting listlessly in the shop of a tumbolco, almost the only one in the street when Himmat Khan came up to me his face that he had news and descended from the chabcotra upon which the man exposed his goods, and turned round a dark corner

They come said he, panting for breath from anxiety I have been watching one end of the street and Khoseal Sing the other; they are coming by my end and will be now about half way up.

And by whom are they guarded? I asked.

said he "a parcel of line-walles, about twenty soldiers with old muskets we could cut through a hundred of them

Have they their bayonets fixed ?" I inquired.

They have but what of that? they are cowardly rascals and, you will see, will run away "Then, said I, run and tell Bhudrinath, who is yonder; tell him to walk down that side I will go down this when we are near them I will give the jlurnee." My four men had now joined me as I told them to do if they saw me speak to any one Bhudrinath was joined by his, and by Klioscal Sing who had given up his watch at the other end and arrived at the entical moment. Our parties proceeded down the street exactly opposite to each other I thought not of danger though it was the first time I had ever drawn a sword in anger against a f llow creature and I was about to precipitate myself into what might be a sudden and desperate combat. Our shields apparently hung loosely and easily on our arms but they were tightly gra ped and our swords were free in their scabbards. I saw the party approach; they marched carelessly and had not the arms of my companions been tightly bound and the whole tied together by a rope which th leader of the party held in his hand they might have casily e caped

Our men joined together in the middle of the street and when we were close to the coming party I ened in a ! ad tone. Ilhace Pan Ho!" It was the signal our swords fla hed from their seel lards and we threw ourselves on the separs. I cut right and left and two men fell the others were as succes ful. I rushed to the pro oners, and a few strokes of my sword and of those who were mearest cut their bonds and they were free As Himmat I lan lad said, the whole of the serve fiel on the instant of the attack.

"Fly to the gates, my brothers, or they will be shut!" I cried, "fly through these narrow dark streets, no one will know who you are nor trouble themselves about you"

We all dispersed in an instant I cast a hurried look around me as I returned my bloody sword into its scabbard, and saw five poor wietches lying on the ground and groaning It was enough, I too fled down the nearest street which offered, reached the gate I had entered by, and when I got on the embankment of the Meer Joomla Tank, I plunged among the gardens and enclosures which are below it, and by the various lanes which led through them soon reached my father's house

The attack on the escort of the prisoners, salib, was so sudden, and over so quickly, that I can give you but a faint idea how soon it was made and finished It occupied less time than I have taken to tell it, and I have often wondered since that the noise and confusion not only caused by us, but by a few passengers who witnessed the fray, did not alarm the whole street, and cause the inhabitants to

mse on us

By morning all our companions were present at the different places of rendezvous, but thinking we were no longer safe about the city, my father sent them all out of the way to the camp at Hassain Sagor, where he bade them wait, for we knew that it would never be searched for as

Nothing now remained to detain us but to dispose of the plunder we had gained during the last ten days, and there was none of much value a few strings of pearls, several shawls, and some unset precious stones were the best, and they were soon sold, the gold and silver as before had been melted down

CHAPTER XIX

IN WHICH THE READER WILL PERCEIVE THAT AMEER ALI PASSED A BUSY AFTERNOON

I mad now only two matters on my hands one to discover Zora if I could, the other to endeavour to get the bills of exchange I had brought with me cashed

Of the first I had but little hope for since the day I went to her house, although I had constantly men on the watch about it, I could discover nothing of her or the old nurse, the latter I had bribed handsomely, and I knew if it was possible to convey to me any information of her I loved, she would do so I had several times passed the house myself in the hope of seeing Zora by some accident or other, but it was in vain, and at the time I now speak of, I had almost given her up in despair Had it not been, salib, for the wild interest of my trade, I should have sunk into apathy and wretchedness, so fondly so deeply did I love her. It was this which rescued me from myself for I could not be behind the rest in seeking adventures and once that I had a hand entirely under my own direction, I was incessantly occupied in finding om ployment for it, and taking my own part in the catastrophes which enmed.

The day after the rescue of our brothren we held a consultation, at which the principal members of the band were present. I need not relate particulars suffice it to say that all agreed in thinking we had remained long enough consistently with our safety and it was resolved to depart in the course of the next day or at most the day after One by one the parties, as they were then divided, were to take the nearest road towards Beeder which led through Puttan cherroo and the last mentioned place was to be the rendezrous whence we should proceed in company

Little time therefore remained to me and as soon as I possibly could I took Bhudringth and Moteo-ram with me and we went into the city We sat down on the steps of the Char Minar Wonder ful indeed were the stories we heard of our skirmish with the kotyral a soldiers the accounts of the killed and wounded on each aido were ludicrously inconsistent, and you may imagine how we enjoyed the various relations we heard, all either from persons who declared they had been eye-witnesses of the matter or who had heard it from undoubted authority But it was not our ermud to waste time by listening to idle tales, not one of which contained a word of truth, but to get the money for the bills we had found among the effects of Synd Mahomed Ali alias Kumal Khan and we had repaired to the Char Minar as the most likely place to meet with a person who could read them, and without su picion tell us upon whom they were drawn

Observing as we sat a miserable half-starved looking wretch with a pen stuck between his turban and his car an ink bottle hanging by his side and a roll of paper under his arm, I fixed upon him as a likely person to suit our purpose. I beckoned to him an i he ran eagerly towards us. "Canst thou read Goozerattee!"

asked.

Noble air I can not only read but write it for it is my native tongue what are my lord a commands ?

"Simply said I "to read a hoondee-no great matter " an I I handed him one of the bills.

"It is an order calib, drawn in favour of Kumal Khan (my lord's name I presume) by Bearce Mul of Nandur upon Gopul Chund Bun Chund of the Begum Bazar, for four hundred rapes at mine days sight."

"Is it correctly drawn?" I asked.

The fellow looked at the bill, and turned it round and round. examining every part of it "Does your worship suspect it?"

"Alla forbid!" said I, "for if it is wrong, I and these worthy associates of mine are ruined, for we have more like it, and for larger sums"

"I see nothing wrong in the bill," said the man, "but let me see the others" I showed them

"They are all correct," said he, "you have only to take them for acceptance, and you are sure of your money"

"Is the firm upon whom they are drawn well known ""

"They have a great deal of country business in hoondees," said the man, "and are on that account perhaps less known than many of our leading bankers, but nevertheless the firm is most respectable"

"Where did you say they live?"

"In the Begum Bazar If your worships wish it, I will accompany you thither"

"Good," said I, "do so, we are strangers, and might not readily find the house You shall be rewarded for your trouble"

We went out of the city by a small gate at the end of a street which led down from the Char Minar,—I think it is called the Dehli gate,—and turning to the left, after crossing the river, we were soon in the midst of the populous and wealthy suburb in which the bankers we sought resided The road through the principal street was almost blocked up by bags of grain, bales of merchandise, tethered bullocks belonging to the grain-carriers, and empty carts, and it was as much as we could do to keep together, both from these causes and the crowd of people The noise, too, of the crowd, of the buying and selling in the bazar, the curses and execuations of bullock-drivers and unloaders, the cites of men measuring grain, and a thousand others, made a din and confusion which I had never heard equalled However, by dint of pushing and elbowing our way, we reached a respectable-looking house, and were introduced to one of the partners by the man we had taken with us

I put a bold face on the matter, and presented one of the hoondees The sahoukar was an old man, and taking a pair of spectacles from a fold in his turban, he placed them on the end of his nose and carefully read the hoondee, he afterwards turned it round and round, and examined it most carefully, looking from time to time

most suspiciously at me over his glasses

I own this would have been unpleasant had I been alone, but with the two companions I had brought with me I cared not, had at come to the worst, our weapons were ready, and we would have used them for our liberty

"I wish to speak a few words with you, if you will follow me into the next room," said the sahoukar pointing to one which led from that in which we sat. He rose, and I followed him.

"How came you to be possessed of this f said he anxiously "and who are you?

It matters not who I am, I replied "and it must suffice for you to know that I am to receive the money for that hoondee and for these also and I showed him the others.

Most extraordinary! he exclaimed after he had examined them. "I cannot understand it It is most strange that they should be presented by another. Young man by what authority are you here to receive this money?"

By his for whom they were drawn, I replied His name, and the schoolar's who drew them?

Kumal Khan,—and the sahoukar s, Bearce Mul."

That will not do, said the school or you have blundered in your errand, young man; the drawer s name any one could have told you.

Perhaps this may enlighten you further upon the subject " and I, and I took from my waistband the seal of the synd.

He examined it, and going to a box in the room he took from it a bundle of papers. He turned them over rapidly

Ay here they are, said he reading Accounts of Synd Mahemed Ah; and now young man, if there is decent in that scal it can be easily proved, for behold the scal of the worthy synd him solf; and he showed me an impression on one of the papers.

I confess I had been in much suspense for had I by any in lucky chance got hold of the wrong seal my detection would have certainly followed but still I had taken the ring from the mans own finger and it was not likely that he had any other. The in stant I saw the impression, however I was satisfied that it was the right one.

Now for the proof," said the schonkar rubbing the seal over with ink and wetting a piece of paper with his tongue "If you have attempted deceit, young man your detection is certain. Shall

I stamp it ?"

Certainly " said I I am innocent of any attempt to deceive you. The worthy synd gave me the seal in order that you might be satisfied."

Ho pressed the scal to the paper and withdrew it; the impress in was perfect, and exactly corresponded with that on the paper of accounts.

"This is correct he said at length; "though I cannot real I er sinn, the letters appear the same and the size is exact. I cannot therefore doubt longer; but still; is most strange."

"I can only say," said I, "that I am the synd's confidential agent, whom he has sent to you for the money, if you will not pay it, say so, that I may write to him "

"By no means," said the sahoukar, "the money is here But why did not the synd come lumself? the bills are made payable to him alone"

"True," said I, "they are, but if you are in his confidence, as you seem to be, you will know that there are good reasons for his absence from the city at present, and as he wanted the money he has sent me for it"

"And where is he?"

"That I cannot tell you," said I, "it can be divulged to no one Suffice it for you to know that when the proper time comes he will emerge from his place of concealment" And I told the truth, salub, for will he not rise at the day of judgment?

And Ameer Alı laughed heartily at his own concert

"Well," said the sahoukar, "no doubt remains as to your right to the money When do you want it? the bills are at nine days' sight "

"Now, I have no time to lose, I must depart in the morning You can deduct the interest for nine days But stay," I continued, "the synd told me that if he owed you anything you were to deduct it, and if any balance of his remained in your hands you were to pay it to me "

"Good," replied the sahoukar, "I will see," and he turned to his books "Ah, here is the account Last balance struck the fifteenth of Suffer, nearly a year ago,—in his favour three hundred and twelve rupees, four annas"

"So much the better," said I, "now pay me the moneys and write a receipt, I will sign it with the seal, which I must take back with me"

The sahoukar called to a man inside

"Here," said he, "register these hoondees, and get the money for them, and make out a receipt Your name?" said he to me

"Ameer Alı, an unworthy syud"

The money was duly counted out, a trifling deduction made for interest, and the whole paid to me I put my own seal as well as that of the syud to the receipt, and after seeing the balance in the sahoukar's books duly cancelled, there was no longer cause to delay "How will you carry all that money?" said the sahoukar, "this is not a safe place for people to be seen out at so late an hour" (for the evening was now closing fast) "with such a sum in their possession"

"Content yourself," said I, "we are three stout fellows, and well able to defend our charge"

"You had better take two of my men, at any rate, to carry the

monor

I will carry some, if I am permitted, said the man no had brought with us "Bhugwan knows I have eaten nothing to-day and knew not where to get a meal till these kind gentlemen met me and I may perhaps earn a trilling sum above what they have promised me."

Good," said I; how much can you carry?
Two thousand rupees," he replied, if my lord will try me."
Very well, then, take up that tag The rest we divided between ourselves, and departed We did not return as we had gone but avoiding the city passed by the house of the English resident crossed the river below it and on the other side struck into some close lanes, which led to the suburb we lived in. As we went along I said to Bhudrinath in Ramasce, which I had now learned. That fellow must not live; our secret is safe with the schoolar but not with another What do you say?

I agree with you," said he. "We can throw the body into a well and there is one not far off. I think I listhed there this morn

Very well," said I when you see the place give the signal I will settle all our accounts with him for his trouble and carriage of our money

We came to the well and the signal was given I was ready and my victim also, but he struggled hard, as the bag of rapecs was on his shoulders, and my roomal had not fair play He died however and we threw him into the well with a large stone tied in his clother to sink him

Strange, sahib, that after protesting his poverty as he had done we should have found forty three rupees in his girdle!

You may judge of my father s joy at my success and to prove his sense of the value of my address and ready wit, he presented me with five hundred rupces out of the sum I had brought.

With this at my disposal, I determined to make a last attempt for Zora, for I thought that with it I might bribe the old woman who called herself her mother; and, late as it was, I pleaded some excu " and set off for the city I soon reached the now well known street and finding the door open I entered, and was ushered into the pre sence of the old woman and Zora s aister Lenat.

They rose on seeing me and welcomed me kindly

"You have not been with us, Meer Sahil, since the Mohorum." said the old woman as she cracked all her fingers against I er temples You knew that you would always be our most favoured guest, and vet no have not seen you. Why has there been this estrangement

trum us c

I did not like to accuse the old woman of turning me from the door, as I have related before, so I said I had been absent from the city, and having only just returned had come to pay my respects to "And now, mother," said I, "where is Zoia? Why is the lose separated from the nightingale?"

"Zora!" said the old woman, "why, have you not yet forgotten that foolish girl? Is there not Zenathee, who is dying for you, and has raved about you ever since she saw you?"

"Touba! touba!" cried Zenat, covering her face affectedly "For shame, mother, how can you speak so? how can you tell such lies ?"

"I say the truth Meer Sahib, I swear the foolish gul's head has been turned by your beauty," and she stroked my chin caressmgly

What could I do? I saw at once that if I did not affect love for Zenat I should never hear aught of Zora, but I could not forget her so easily, and I hated Zenat for her love I thought it better to come to terms at once if I could

"Mother," said I, "I am proud of your daughter's love, and to one so young as I am such marks of preference as you say she is inclined to show me are most flattering, nevertheless I cannot forget Zora, and tell me, by your soul, am I to see her or not? Now hear me, I am not a rich man, not one who could lavish thousands upon her, but what I have is hers for ever, and yours too, if you will give her to me Will you part with her 9"

"What do you offer?" said the old woman "Methinks you must be one of our nobles in disguise to come here with such a proposition "

"I am no noble," said I, "but a poor syud I have five hundred rupees, and they are yours if you make Zora mine for ever, say the word, and to-morrow I will be present, we will send for a moolla, and the nika shall be performed"

"Five hundred rupees!" cried the old woman, and she and her daughter burst into an uncontrollable fit of laughter "Five hundred rupees 1" continued she at length, when she could speak, "O man, thou art either mad or drunk !"

"I am neither the one nor the other," I replied very angrily, "I am as sober as either of you, nay far more so "

"Then if you are so," said the old wretch, "what, in the name of Alla, has come to you, that you think we would part with Zora for five hundred rupees? Five thousand, and twice as much, would not be sufficient "

"Then," said I, "you are a pair of the devil's children, and I spit at you Not content with spurning me from your house like a dog, you now deny me the only happiness I looked to on earth Women have you no hearts?

"Yes," cried the old hag in a fury ver we did spurn you, as I do now Begone! and never dare to intrude as you have done this night, or I will see if I cannot bring a few stout fellows together to

"Pencel woman," cried I "boware how you rerile my father"

"Lay his mouth be filled with earth and his grave defiled! May your mother-

I could bear this no longer I ran to the door for my shoes, and held one in my hand threateningly

" Now said I "another word of abuse and I will beat you on the month."

It did not check her A fresh torrent poured from her lips, and I was really provoked. I could bear it no longer I rushed at her beat her on the face with my shoe and spit on her The daughter harried to the stair head and raised cries of alarm

Thief thief! He is murdering us! Kasim, Maliomed Mi, where are ye? We are murdered-we are defamed! Bring your swort, and kill lum t

I had pretty well belaboured the old woman and thought it high time to be off so I rushed to the door and seizing Zenat threw her to the other side of the room with all my force. I saw that she had a heavy fall, and I ran down the stairs About halfway I met a man with a drawn sword he stood, and was about to make a cut at me but I seized his arm and hurled him down the steps, and as he rolled to the bottom I leaped over him and was outside the house in a moment.

Well, thought I as I went along I have not got fore but I have slippered the old devil her mother which is some satisfaction, and Bhudrinath will laugh rarely when he hears of my exploit.

CHAPTER XX.

Cil-Madam your cong is parello - parelengte Air -And will thou me t then gity my extate Fo the love of Alla, young man!" cried a low and sweet voice as I pu ed un ler the giteway of a respectable-looking hon e; "f r the love of Alla, enter and rave my mistress!"

Olf Flay

I resh adventures, thought I as I looked at the speaker a young girl, dressed like a slave "Who are your

It may ters not "sail the speaker" dil you not pa sills way re-tenlar afternoon in a myany with two otlers ?"

"I did, and what of that ""

"Everything, my mistiess, who is more beautiful than the moon at its full, saw you and has gone mad about you"
"I am sorry," said I, "but I do not see how I can help her"
"But you must," said the girl, "you must, or she will die low me, and I will lead you to her"

I hesitated, for I had heard strange stories of lures spread for unwary persons-how they were enticed into houses for the gratification of wicked women, and then murdered But the thought was only momentary "Courage! Ameer Ali," said I to myself, "trust to your good fate and follow it up Inshalla! there will be some fun"

"Look you," said I to the girl, "you see I am well armed I will follow you, but if violence is shown, those who oppose me will feel the edge of a sharp sword"

"I swear by your head," said the girl, "there is no danger lord is gone into the country, and has taken all the men with him; there is no one in the house beside myself but two slaves and three old women "

"Then lead on," said I, "I follow you"

She entered the gateway and conducted me through a court into an open room, where sat a girl, richly diessed and of great beauty, but she covered herself immediately with her dooputta, and cried when she saw me, "Ya Alla! it is he, am I so fortunate?"
"Yes, lady," said I, "your slave is at your feet, and prays you to remove that veil which hides a houri of paradise from the gaze of a true believer"

"Go," said she faintly; "now that you are here I dare not look Go, in the name of Alla! what will you not have thought on you of me ?"

"That your slave is the most favoured of his race," said I, "I beseech you to look on me, and then bid me depart if you will"

"I cannot," said the fair girl, "I cannot, I dare not, ah, nurse, what have you made me do?"

The old woman made me a sign to take the veil from her face, and I did so gently She faintly opposed me, but it was in vain an instant I had removed it, and a pair of the loveliest eyes I had ever seen fixed their trembling gaze upon me-another, and I had clasped her to my heart

"That is right," said the old woman; "I like to see some spirit in a lover Mashalla! he is a noble youth," and she came and cracked her fingers over my head

"Now I will leave you," said she, "you have a great deal to say to each other, and the night is wearing fast"

"No, no, no!" cried the girl, "do not leave us, stay, good nurse, I dare not trust myself with him alone"

"Nonsense" eried the old woman, this is foolishiness. Do not mind her noble sir and she left the room.

'Lady said I fear not, your slave may be trusted " and I removed from her and sat down at the edge of the carpet.

I know not what you will think of me sahib, she said, "and I am at a loss how to confess that I was enamoured of you as I saw you pass my house yesterday but so it was. My liver turned to water as I looked on your beauty and I pined for you till my at tendants thought I should have deed. They said they would watch for you, and Alla has heard my prayer and sent you "Ho has sent a devoted slave 'said I one whose soul burns."

"He has sent a devoted slave 'said! one whose soul burns with love such as that of the bulbul to the rose. Speak, and I will do your bidding

"Hear my history and you will know then how I am to be pitted and the fair girl and it is told in a few words. I was the daughter of humble parents, but I was as you see me—they say I am beautiful they marred me to my husband,—so they said,—but they sold me. Sahib, he is old, he is a tyrint, he has beaten me with his shoe, and I have sworn on his horian that I will no longer remain under his roof. Yes I have sworn it. I would have fled yesterlay but I saw you, and I prayed Alla to send you, and he hav done so. Now think of me what you please but save me! And she arese and throwing herself at my feet clasped my knees. You will not refuse me protection? If you do and your heart is hard towards me one thing alone remains—I have prepared a butter draught and to-morrow sain will look upon my dead body.

draught and to-morrows sun will look upon my dead body Alls forbid Lady said I. He who has sent me to you has east you a willing and a fearless slave fly with me this instant, and I will lead you to a father who will welcome you, and a land far away where our flight will never be discovered.

"Now-so soon ?" she exclaimed

Ay lady now; leave your house this moment; I will protect you with my life "

'I dare not, sahih, I dare not; ah, what would become of us if we were discovered? I ou would escape but I—you know a woman's late if also is detected in integree

"Then what can be done? said I Alas! I am a stranger in the city and know not what to miri e"

"I will call my nurse let us leave all to her - hulloo!

The old woman entered. "What are your commands?" said

"Lasten, and I; "I love your fair charge with an intensity of ta son; this is no place for us to give ourselves up to love fir it ross danger and we mus By; I am a stranger in the city and am on the ever departure for my hom which is in Hindestan and whither I will convey her safely, she is willing to accompany me, and your aid and advice are all that is required.

"To fly to leave home and every one for Hindestan, and with one unknown! Areem three this is midness, how know you who he is, and where he will take you? I will not assist you. I was willing that you should have a lover, and helped you to get one, but this is mere madness—we shall be ruined"

"Mother, 'said I "I am no deceiver, I swear by your head and eyes I can be faithful. Do but help two poor ereitures whose affections me fixed upon each other, and we will invoke the blessings of the Prophet on your head to the latest day of our lives. I leave here to morrow, my father is a merchant and accompanies me, he has ample wealth for us both, and I am his only child, we shall soon be beyond any chance of pursuit, and in our happiness will for ever bless you as the author of it. Ah muse, cannot you contine something? is there no spot on the road past Golconda which you could fix on for our meeting? I can reward you richly, and now promise you one hundred rupees if you will do my bidding."

Azeema gathered courage at my words, and fell at the feet of the old woman

"Kulloo!" she cued, "have you not known me as a child? have I not loved you from infancy? Alas! I have neither mother not father now, and has he not beaten me with a shoe? have I not sworn to quit this house? and did you not swear on my head you would aid me?"

"What can I do? what can I do?" cried the nurse, "alas, I am helpless, what can an old woman like me do?"
"Anything, everything," I exclaimed, "woman's wit never yet failed at a pinch "

"Did you not say you had made a vow to visit the durgah of Hoosain Shah Wullee?" cried Azeema, "and did not you say you would take me to present a nuzzur at the shine of the holy saint, if I recovered from my last illness?"

"Thou hast hit it, my rose," said the nurse, "I had forgotten my Salub, can you meet us at the durgal to-morrow at noon?"

"Assuredly," said I, "I will be present Good nurse, do not fail us, and another fifty shall be added to the hundred I have already promised "

"May your condescension and generosity increase!" cried she "Sahib, I have loved this fair girl from her infancy, and though it will go sorely against my heart, I will give her into your hands rather than she should be further exposed to the indignities she has already undergone"

"Thanks, thanks, good nurse, I believe you, but swear on her head that you will not brak your faith"

I swear said the old woman, placing her hands on Azcema s head, I swear she shall be thine

Luough," I cried, I am content now one embrace and I leave von. I shall be missed by my father and he will fear I am mur

dered in this wild city

We took a long pa sionate embrace and I toro myself from her To-morrow I cried, and at the durgah we will meet, never again to part. So cheer thee, my beloved, and rouse all your ener gies for what is before you. To-morrow will be an eventful day to us both, and I pray the good Alia a prosperous one.

"It will it will, cried the nurse "fear not for anything Aur guz is faithful, and shall accompany us the rest are long ago a sleep and know not you are here. But now begone further delay is dangerou and \urgiz will lead you to the street."

She called and the same slave who had ushered me in led the way to the door

By your soul, noble sir by your father and mother do not be unfaithful or it will kill her

"I need not swear pretty muden," said I; your mistress s beauty has melted my heart, and I am hers for ever

Then may Alla protect you, stranger! That is your road, if you go by the one you came yesterday

I turned down the street and was soon at home. My father was asleep, and I lay down but Alla! Alla! how my heart leat and my head throbbed! A thousand times I wished I had carried off the beautiful Azeema a thousand times I cursed my own folly for having left her when by a word from me she would have for aken home and every tie and followed me but it was too late. In the midst of conflicting thoughts and vain regrets I fell asleep; but I had di turbed dreams. I thought her dishonoured lord had sur presed us as we tasted draughts of live and a sword glittered over his head with which he was about to revenge his di grace. Again, I fancied one of the moollas of the durgah to be him, and ju t as she was about to depart with us, and was stepping into a cart he ru hed to her and seized her and I vainly en leavoure I to drag her from lum. I woke in the excitement of the dram and my father etand over me

What, in the name of the Proph t is the matter with you Ameer Ah, my son't en 1th oll man. It is the b une f prayer I came to awake you and I find you to sing wildly in your sleep ar I calling on some or thou h I could no do tingue h the rame it soun led like a menta-trems, I think. Whe have you been ab a ? Had you may lungly thight?"

Bunij was the cast phra of rour victim and I she blered at the id as at called up

"No, no," I said, "nothing Let me go and perform my ablutions, I will join you in the namez It will compose my thoughts, and I will tell you"

Our prayers finished, I related my adventures of the past night He laughed heartily at my relation of the scene with Zora's mother, and declared I had served her rightly, but when I came to that with Azeema, his countenance was changed and troubled. However, he heard me to the end without interruption, and I augured favourably from it. I concluded all by throwing myself at his feet and imploring his sanction to our union

"You have gone too far to retract, Ameer Alı," said he "If you do not fulfil your promise to Azeema she will drink the poison she has prepared, you will be one cause of her death, and it will he heavy on your conscience, therefore on this account I give you my sanction I am now old, a few years must see my end, and all I have long wished for is to mairy you respectably and to see your children I endeavoured to effect a marriage-contract in Hindostan before we left, but I was unable to do so There is now no occasion for one, you have made your choice and must abide by it, Alla has sent you your bride and you must take her—take her with my blessing, and you say she is beautiful, in which you are fortunate Money you will want, as you have promised some to her nurse, if she is faithful, give her from me an additional fifty rupees, and you had better take gold with you,—it will be easier carried"

"Spoken like my beloved and honoured father!" I exclaimed, "and I am now happy I ask your blessing, and leave you to carry our plans into execution We shall meet again at Puttuncherroo in the evening"

"Inshalla! we shall," he replied "Be wary and careful I apprehend no danger, but you had better take some men with you"

"I will," said I, as I rose to depart, "I will take some of my own, whom I can trust," and I left him

My horse was soon ready and my men prepared, but some conveyance was necessary for Azeema, and I ran to a house a short distance off where dwelt a man who had a cart for hire I had been in previous treaty with him, to be ready in case I should get intelligence of Zora, and had engaged him to go as far as Beedei

"Come," said I, "Fazil, I am ready and the time is come"

"And the lady " said the fellow, grinning

"Ah, she is ready too, only make haste, we have not a moment to lose"

"Give me twenty rupees for my mother, and I will harness the bullocks and put in the cushions and pillows"

"Herethey are," said I, "now be quick—by your soul, be quick!"
"I will be back instantly," said he, and he disappeared inside his house but returned almost immediately with the cushions and cur tams of his cart There—said he as he completed his preparations and jumped on the pole where was his driving seat, you see I have not been long Now whither shall I drive? to the city?

No, said I "to Hussain Shah Wallee's durgah. Do you precede and we will follow you, for I know not the read.

I know it well," said he follow me closely

Does it lead through the Begum Bazar or the karwan? I

Through both, or either just as you please.

and is there no other way ?

"There is, but it is somewhat longer We must go by the Fig.
lish Residence and turn up towards the Gosha Mahal the read will lead up for behind both the karwan and Begum Baara

"That will do, said I I wish to avoid both Bismilla! then, cried the driver—let us proceed " and twist ing the tails of his bullocks, a fix gentle hints from his toes about their hind quarters set them off into a trot which however they exchanged for a more sober piece before we had get far—I allowed him to proceed to some distance and then put my small party in motion.

CHAPTER XXI

HOW ANDEED ALL PIDES TESTER, AND IS NOT DISAPPOINTED.

We soon passed the suburbs of the citr and held on our way towards the durgal. I was not without hope that we might fall in with Arcema on the road but in this I was disappointed. As we passed over the brow of an eminence the tombs of the kings of Colconds broke on our sight occupying the whole of a riving ground in front. I had never before seen them, indeed I knew not of their existence and they were the more straking on this account. I was astoon held at their size and magnificence even from that the lance but how much more so when we approached them nearer! We had plenty of time befrom a and I proposed if the durgah should in the much farther to diverge from the road and examine them. I from the place of our destination.

"You cannot see the durgah set "sail the man "but it is just behind the tembs on the bester f a large tank. You cannot miss it; you will see its white dome and gilt spire above the tamann!

tre s wl ch surround it."

Verrgad, mill do you go on thither an lif you are asked any questions, say that you belong to a party which is coming out from the city We shall go to the tombs, and will join you shortly"

The driver kept to the road, and we, diverging from it, directed our way to the mausoleums of the departed kings As we approached them, their immense size, and the beautiful groups which they assumed as our point of view shifted, struck forcibly on the mind, while the desolation around them added to their solemn appearance

"What a pity," said Peer Khan, who accompanied me, "that the good people of the city do not make gardens about these proud buildings The spot seems to be utterly neglected, even as a burying-ground"

"They are better as they are," said I; "the dust of the present miserable generation would hardly mix with that of so noble a one as that which has left such a monument of its glory Ay," continued I, as we entered the first immense tomb, "these were kings and princes, who lie here, men who won their kingdoms at the sword's point, and kept them, -how different to the present degenerate race, who are indebted for the bread they eat to the generosity of the Feringhees!"

We ascended by a narrow stair to the top of the tomb, and from the terrace out of which the huge dome proudly reared itself the view of the city was superb, but it was not equal to the one I have before described to you, for we saw none of the white buildings, the Mecca Mosque and the Char Minar were alone distinguishable over the mass of trees, if I except the innumerable white minarets which rose out from the foliage in every direction From the other side of the terrace the whole of the large tombs were seen at a glanceeach by itself a noble and striking object, but rendered still more so when grouped with others of smaller size, whose contrast increased their massiveness Not a creature was to be seen, the old fort itself, its grey mouldering walls covering the face of a huge pile of rocks, seemed tenantless, and was in unison with the abodes of the illustrious dead who had built it

The silence and desolation were oppressive, and we scarcely made a remark to each other, as we traversed one by one the interiors of the noble edifices, -some of them dark and gloomy, and filled with bats and wild pigeons, whose cooing re-echoed within the lofty domes, and others whose wide arches admitted the light of day, and were more cheerful in appearance

"Enough," said I, after we had examined some of the largest, "we do but loster here while we may even now be expected Yonder is the durgah, and we had better go to it and be prepared, she cannot now be long absent"

I saw as we approached the sacred edifice that our cart was ready, but there was no other and my mind somewhat misgave me that Azeems had been unable to keep her appointment, and I resolved within myself that, should she not arrive before noon, I would return to the city and seek my bride, for such I now con sidered her I could not leave so lovely a creature to the rule treatment she would experience from him to whom she was united —one who was undeserving to possess a jowel such as she was but it was still carly and perhaps some hours must clapse before she could reach the durgab which was farther from the city than I had anticrated.

I entered the holy precuests, and after offering up a gift upon the shrine of the raint, I put up a fervent prayer that the object we had come for should end succes fully. This done I sat down under the shade of the trees and entered into conversation with one of the many modlas who attended on the tomb, and who were constantly employed in reading the Koran over the grave of the saint. He a ked mo who I was. I told him I belonged to the city and had brought my wife to perform a vow to the saint on her recovering from a dangerous illness. "But she is not yet come said I;" II rode on with some of my attendants, and she will follow and will soon be here."

Hour after hour passed, and yet Areema did not come Sabib, I was in a torment of suspenso and anxiety Could sho have metwin any mi fortune? could her lord have returned home unexpectedly? could she have played me false? Ah not the last her grief her hive had in dissembling? Noon came and the music of the nobut begin to play—still no signs of her. My patience was fairly exhausted, and I went to the place where my horse stood, mounted him, and bidding the men remain where they were I rode on towards the city. I had scarcely got beyond the small village by which the dargah was surround d when I saw three carries with curtains to them carifully closed approaching. My heart best quickly with he pe and I d termined to inturn one of them surely shers thought I and I will await her coming in the diagrah.

"SI comes' cried I to I cer Khan as he eagerly asked the cause I my quick return. She comes the I and here his earl in realiness and take it round to the gate which leads towards I attunel erros.

I do m unted and at sol at the gate

The first curt arrand; it was filled with dancing girls who had a new to legal the shine one of them having hat her vice some timel for hit had now not up as they apply a faith interest and the high Walle. They not more hard their your songrapher of their melodies inside the tomb.

The second arrived, three old women got out, who were the bearers of some trays of sweetmeats for the moollas, the offering of some lady of rank, who was ill and begged their prayers and intercession with the saints for her recovery

"Mother," said I to one of them, "saw you aught of a cart with three females in it, my zenana in fact, on the road from the city?"

"Yes," said the woman, "they are close behind us, their vehicle broke down in a rivulet we had to pass, and is coming very slowly, but it will be here directly, and the ladies are safe, for I spoke to them and offered to bring them on, but the damage had been repaired somehow or other, and they declined my offer"

"Alhumd-ul-illa" I cried, "they are safe then, I have been waiting here since morning, and in anxiety enough about them "

"No wonder," said the old lady, "for the khanum seemed to be pale and weakly-looking, but, Mashalla she is beautiful, and my lord too is in every way worthy of her"

"She has been ill," said I carelessly, "and her coming is in consequence of a vow she made"

"May Alla give her a long life and many children! I feel an involuntary interest in a pair whom he hath joined together, in every way so fitted for each other, but I go, noble sir, my companions await my coming "

She also passed on, and in a few moments more the cart I so longed to see turned the corner of some projecting houses, and advanced slowly towards the gate How my heart throbbed ! Was it her, my life, my soul, or was I doomed to a third disappointment? It stopped, and I could have fallen down and worshipped the old nurse, who first emerged from the closely-curtained vehicle, I ran towards her, but was stopped by the driver
"It is a zenana, noble sir," he said, "and courtesy requires you to go out of sight, lest their faces should be seen in descending'

"Peace, fool! the women are my own"

"That alters the case," said the man, "and my lord's displeasure must not fall on his slave for this delay. The axletree cracked in passing a rivulet, which is a circumstance no foresight could have prevented, seeing that it was newly fitted after the Mohorum"

"It matters not," said I, "but you may now leave us I will return and pay you your hire there is an empty cart yonder which I will engage for them to return in "

The fellow retired to a short distance, and my breath went and came as I put my head into the curtains and saw my beloved sitting anveiled, beautiful beyond description, and her fine features glowing with the excitement of her success

"Shookur khoda!" she exclaimed, "you are here, my own best and dearest, you have not been unfaithful to your poor slave" caught her in my arms, and imprinted numberless kisses on her lips.

Tonba! touba! for shame!" cried the old nurse 'cannot you trans for a while? Assist her to dismount, and we will go into the durant.

I did so and closely careloped in a boorka, and leaning on the old woman and Aurgus, Azecma followed me into the inclosure

Our first care was to offer up at the shrine some money and a few sweetments which Axeema had brought with her the old moolla to whom I had before spoken received them and laid them on the tomb

They are accepted," said be "and whatever prayers you may offer up, our kind saint will intercede with the hely Prophet for you, that they be granted.

Thanks good moolla, said I; all I denre is, that the pearl of my eyes may be protected in health and long spared to me. Truly an anxious time have we had of it with her but she is now restorted to health, and may Alls grant it be continued!

It will be he replied; Albumd ul illa! our blessed saint a prayers are wonderfully efficiences, and I could relate to my lord

many miracles which have been performed here

"To doubt," said I; "the fame of Hoosan Shah Wulleo is spread far and wide and we of the city haro reason to be thankful that such blessed saints were led in days of old to take up there resilence near it for our present generation is so degraded that without the aid of his prayers the displeasure of the Supreme One would fall heavily on us

"My lord's words have a sweet and holy cavour said the moolla, "and show that, though his bearing is that of a soldier his heart is filled with religion; and blessed is he in whom both are seen united. But I could tell my lord of many of the saint's mirucles, if he has lessure to hear them; and as he will not return till the afternoon, we can sit down under the trees and I will relate them."

I scuse me good moolls," said I; "time presses and I have promised the syndance's mother that I will return before the cold of evening a to in, and it is now past noon

"As you will, eard he; "yet perhaps these few pares white I have compiled during my lesure hours may entertain as well as in atract if my lord will accept them; of course ly can read Presant"

"In liferently well said I we soldiers are rarely good sell lirs; nevertheless I will keep the box hand him is a trille which may prove acceptable and I put an a bruffee into his ban I

The o'l man a eyes glus enel as he saw it; and after a profe un of complements Le kft as to correlies.

"Now there is no time to be lost," said old Kulloo; "we must travel far and fast this day. You have brought a cart with you?"
"I have, it is ready, if there be aught in the one you came in, tell me, and I will have it put into the other"

"Send a man or two with us," said the nurse, "I and Nurgiz will arrange the new vehicle, and return instantly"

They too left us, and we were alone No one remained in the large inclosure, the women were still singing in the tomb, and all the moollas were sitting round them listening

"Can you support the fatigue of further travel, Azeema?" said I

"I am strong and can bear anything, so I am with thee and thou with me," she replied "Dearest, I am now secure, but oh the suspense I have endured since I last saw you, and until I was fairly out of that vile city!"

"Tell me," said I, "how did you contrive to clude suspicion?"
"When you left us," replied Azeema, "I thought my happiness had fled for ever, I would have given worlds to have called you back, and to have fled with you then I had seen your noble face, I had heard your vows of love, Alla had sent me a lover such as my warmest fancy had painted to me, while I was daily suffering torments which the fond and loving only can feel, when their affection is returned by severe and bitter insult, and I thought I had lost him, that I had only gained a few moments of bliss, which would appear like one of those dreams that had often cheated my sleeping fancy, to leave me when I awoke to the bitter realities of my sad lot—and I was inconsolable, but my kind old nurse and Nurgiz soothed me They told me they would die for me, and assured me you would be faithful, so I gathered courage, and Kulloo proposed that we should make immediate preparations for flight We packed up some clothes and my jewels, and all the money which had been left with us,—a few hundred rupees,—and before morning we lay down to take a little sleep. At daylight Kulloo told the other slaves and the two old servants that I was going to this durgah, and sent one of them for a cart, it came about sunrise, and concealing the articles we had packed up in two large bundles of carpets and sheets, which we said we should require to sit on at the durgah, we put them into the cart, got in ourselves, and the driver made the best of his way hither"

She had just spoken, when Kulloo came to us

"All is prepared," said she "I have dismissed the other cart, and your new one is now ready,—do not delay"

There was no occasion for her to hurry us, we were as well inclined to set off as she was, and we rose and followed her

The cart was ready-my men with it, and Nurgiz already inside Azeema got in, and her old nurse followed

You too? cred L

Yes, Meer Sahib my home is at Beeder whither I will accompany you; the city is no longer safe for me my life would be forfeited were I ever to enter it again, and fall in with that prince of devils, Nuarut Ali Khan, whose house is now dishonoured, and whose beard we have spat upon.

Drive on." I exclaimed to Faxil "go as fast as you can we must reach Puttuncherroo before night-fall.

The road from the durgah, after passing the tank upon which it was situated led through a wild pass piles of rocks frowned over us, and the road was at times so narrow that the cart could searcely proceed.

A rare place for a little work, said I to Peer Khan, as we reached a low barner will thrown across the road, and pierced with holes for muskstry "many a wild deed hat been done here in times past, I'll warrant

"They tell queer stories of the place, he replied "and we have used it curvelves in some of our late expeditions from the city. There he the seven brances you heard of, and he pointed out a remarkable rock not far from the road. A sad business we had with the grave it was all rock underneath, and the bodies were hardly covered but who eaks about them in this country? Why as we accompanied the travellers, we saw lying in this very pass the bodies of two men who had been murdered and dreadfully mangled."

"Well," said I, we have left our marks behind us at any rate, and all things considered we have been lucky. It matters not if we get no more bunn all the way to Hundostan.

We have enough to make us comfortable for some years," said he nevertheless one s hand gets out of practice, and you are but young at the work the more you have for a few years to come.

the better

We reached Puttuncherroo late in the evening and to my inex pressible joy found my father and the whole band safely arrived and comfortably encomped under a large banian tree, by which was a fakeer a tomb. One of our small tents had been pitched for Auseum, and after seeing her settled for the right I joined my father

You are a looky fellow " said he when I had told him of all my success "I have been in anxious suspense about you, especially when the evening set in and you came not but now there is no danger we are once again in the country and the reeds are our own. And now tell me, what is your new bride like? Is she as handsome as Zora?

"She is quite as handsome," said I "the full moon is not more beautiful, she is tender in her love, and of an affectionate and kind disposition You must see her to-morrow, she is now fatigued with travel"

"And you must be fatigued also, my son, and hungry too have a rare pllau ready for you"

It was brought, and after sending a portion to Azeema, my fingers were very soon busied with the rest of the contents of the dish, and I enjoyed it, for I had tasted nothing but a few of the sweetmeats Azeema had brought with her during the whole day

CHAPTER XXII

Rosalind -Now tell me how long you would have her, after you have possessed her

Orlando -For ever and a day

As You Like It, Act IV . Scene 1

On the fourth morning we reached Beeder If not so striking in its outward appearance as we approached it as Hyderabad, this city was nevertheless interesting. The summit of a long table-land broke into a gentle descent, and from it Beeder suddenly opened on our view The walls of the town occupied the crest of a high ridge, and over them one tall minaret, and what appeared another rude unfinished one, of great height, towered proudly On the right hand the large white domes of some tombs peeped out of a grove of mango trees, with which the hill was clothed from top to bottom, and there was a quiet solemnity about the approach to the now nearly deserted capital of the Dukhun, the favourite residence of the once proud and powerful Bahmunee kings, which accorded well with our feelings, and formed a powerful contrast to the busy city we had just left Some of our men, who had gone on in advance, had chosen a spot for our encampment near the gate of the city upon the road we were to take in the morning, but separating from my party, I rode through the town, which, though now mean in comparison to what it must have been, was more striking than I had expected to find it

I joined the encampment on the other side, which now presented its usual bustling appearance some were already cooking their morning meal by the edge of the well, others were bathing, and all talking and conversing in that joyous manner which showed their minds were free from care and full of happiness, at the prospect of a speedier return to their home than they had anticipated, and well laden with a rich booty

"My father, this is a city full of true believers," said I, as I joined him, "Moollas there must be in plenty, and I pray you to send for one that the nike may be performed, and that I may receive Azeema at your hands as my wife.

I will not oppose it, my son but the old moolls, whoever he may be, will think it strange."

"He may think what he pleases, said I but I can no longer live without her therefore pray consider the point settled, and send for him at once.

Accordingly Peer Khan was despatched for the holy person, who duly arrived. He was received with the greatest courtesy by my father and the object for which he was required was explained to him. He expressed the utmost astonishment it was a proceeding he had never heard of, for persons to celebrate a marriage on a jour ney and was in every respect improper and indelicate hm.

When he had exhausted his protestations, my father replied to

"Look you, good moolla," said he, there is no one who pays more respect to the forms and usages of our holy faith than I do. Am I not a synd of Hindostan? Do I not say the names five times a day fast in the Ramsan, and keep every featival enjoined by the law? And unwilling as I am to do anything which may be thought a breach of the rules of our faith, yet circumstances which I cannot explain render it imperative that this ceremony should be performed and if you refuse, all I can say is, that there is no want of moollas in Beoder and if you do not perform it some less scrupulous person must, and carn the reward which I now offer to you " and my father laid two ashrufees before him.

"That alters the case materially said the moolls, pocketing the Since the ceremony must be performed, in Alla s name let it take place. It was no doubt fated that it should be so, and you will therefore find no person in Beeder more willing to read the form of the mks than myself. Let me I pray you return for my book,—I will be back metantly " and he departed. "There, and my father "I thought it would be so No one can withstand the night of gold. From the prince on the throne to the meanest peasant, it is the same its influence is all powerful. With it a man may purchase his neighbour a conscience, his neigh bour s wife, or his daughter; with it a man may bribe the venerable Karee of Karees, in any city he pleases, to declare him innocent, had he committed a hundred murders, forged documents, stolen his noighbours goods, or been guilty of every villamy under the sun with it a good man may be better-but that is rare a bad man in creases his own damnation for it any one will lie, cheat, rob, murder and degrade himself to the level of a beast young women will dishonour their lords, old women will be bribed to assist them. A man who has heards will practise every knavery to mercase them, yet is never happy, those who have no money, hunger and thirst after it, and are also never happy Give it to a child to play with, and by some mysterious instinct he clutches it to his bosom, and loars if it be taken from him. In short, its influence cannot be opposed, old and young, nich and poor-all are its slaves Men's wisdom is nothing, men's eloquence is nothing, their character nothing, their rank nothing, but this vile metal, which has no voice, no intellect, no character, no rank—this rules our destinies on earth as surely and as potently as Alla himself does in heaven"

"Alla ke Qoodrut!" said I with a sigh, "your words are true, my father, now that one thinks on them, and we have had a precious specimen in the sudden change of opinion in the worthy moolla, who asked no further questions when he saw your gold "
"No!" cried my father, "and if one only had enough, one might

Who was Sikundur P By all accounts, a petty prince, not half so powerful as he who rules this country, and yet, when he gained favour in the sight of the jins, and afterwards by his magic got dominion over them, did they not place the treasures heaped up in the bowels of the earth at his disposal? and who could then stop his career? Is not this all written in a book, and is it not as true as the Koran?"

"It were heresy to doubt it," said I, "but here comes the subject of our conversation, with his book under his arm, I will prepare Azeema "

I went to her "Dearest," cried I, seating myself and passing my arm round her waist, "dearest, the time is come, when, with the blessing of Alla and my father's sanction, you will be mine for ever, and when the law shall bind us together, for death alone to separate us A moolla has come, and with your permission, now, even now, the mka shall be performed, further delay is idle, and I am consumed with the burnings of my love"

"So soon, Ameer Ali? Oh, not till we reach your home What will your father think of my consenting to this wild union?"

"He sanctions it, beloved, 'twas he who sent for the moolla, 'twas he who persuaded him to perform the ceremony, and they but await my return to the tent to read the words which make you mine for ever"

"Alas! I know not," said the fair girl, "I am another's wife—how can this be done?"

"Forget the hateful marriage," I cried, "Azeema, these objections will kill me Am I not your slave? Are we not now on our way to a distant land, where he from whom you have fled will never again hear of you? Ah, do not continue to talk thus, for it seems like a bitter mockery that you should have fled with me, now to deny yourself to me"

No, no no! do not say so, my lord you saved me from meult, and from a miscrable death to which I had doomed myself. I am your slave not you mine; do as you choose with me let it be even as you will. I will follow you till death." And she hid her face in my bosom.

"Then," cried I, "beloved, the preparations are soon made Call Kulloo, and let her know all."

The old woman came, and was overjoyed to hear of my proposal.

I had feared you would not have bound yourself by this tie, Meer Sahib," end she, "and my mind sorely troubled me on the sablect but now I am easy and I will give my precious child to you with joy and confidence may you be blessed in her and see your children's children! Would that I could proceed with you! but I am old and my bones and spirit would not reat easily in a strange land your generously and what I have seened together is enough to make me comfortable for life and when my hour comes I shall die conteut.

Then be quick said I "put up a screen and I will call the modla; you can all three of you sit behind it while the ceremony is read.

A cloth was stretched from one side of the tent to the other and fastened to the ground my father myself and the mooila sat on one side the females on the other

All is ready moollajee " said I begin.

He opened his book and read the usual service in Ambic. I did not inderstand a word of it neither indeed did he; but it was saff cent that it had been read—the ceremony was complete and Azeema was mine for ever

It would have been a pity to have left Beeder without seeing more of the town and fort, of which I had heard many praises; and in the evening therefor my father myself and a few others strolled into the town for the purpose of seeing what we could. First we passed the old Ma Ire a, a noble mass of runs the front was covered with brantiful cnained from top to bottom and the immense minaret which we had seen from a distance in the morning was also covered with the raine. The large round forments of another lay readiered about in every direction, and I could well picture to myself the noble building it must have been, ere by an unfortunate explosion of guing powd it when is also as a magning by Aurungy by its front was by we out one minaret destroyed, and the whole rent and torm as if by an cartiquake.

Is ing onwards we arrived at an pen space left of the account and majority rains of the first. Piles upon piles of old rain dipersons in many places built upon the walls them elves and all 1 due to their fall while they improved no with a stemper idea of the magnificance of their builders than anything we had as jet seen, were a lesson to humble proud man, to teach him that he too must moulder in the dust is their founders had done. They had stood for centuries, yet now the owl, the but, and the wild pigeon were the only tenants of these splended halls where once be unty had dwelt and had been the adoration of the brave and glorious

Where were now the princely state, the pump of royalty the gallant warriors who had of old manned these lofty walls and towers, and so oft balden defined to ho to of invaders? All were gone, all was now lonely and desolate, and the stillness accorded well with the runous appearance of the sc ne before us. Not however that the walls were dilapidated or overthrown. the premained as firm and solid as ever, and here and there the muzzle of a cannon pointing from a loophole or rude embrasire showed that they were still capable of defence though, alast defenders there were none. We thought the place absolutely described, and went on to the gate-It was massive, and highly ornamented with enimel work, such as we had seen before in the old Madressa and the tombs at Golconda

While we thus stood admiring the outside, a soldier approached us and asked our business

"We are strangers, who have put up in the town for the day," answered my fisher, "and we could not leave the spot without looking at the venerable fort of which we have heard so much. May we be permitted to enter "

"Cutamly" he replied, "persons of your respectable appearance are always gladly admitted. If you will follow me, I will show you over the interior which is worthy your inspection"

We followed him, and passing through two gateways, which were defended by triverses so as to be impenetiable to invaders, we stopped under the third, and our conductor sud,-

"The rooms above this are well worth seeing, if you will ascend "

"Surely," said I, "we twould willingly see everything"

We ascended a narrow stair, which at the top opened into a small but beautiful suite of rooms, profusely adoined with enamel, far surpassing in its bulliancy of colours and minuteness of design any that we had before seen on the outside Sentences of the Koian in white letters on a brilliant azure ground were all round the cornices, and 'the ceilings and walls were covered with flowers of every hue and design, their colours and the enamel in which they were worked being as fresh and bright as the day they were first painted "These are imperishable," said I to my father, "would that the buildings which held them could be so too, to remain to generations yet unborn a proof of the magnificence and wealth to which they owed their erection!"

Ay said he there requires no better proof than these of the present degeneracy. The monarchs of those times were just and liberal as well as powerful; the wealth their dominions brought them was freely expended in beautifying their cities, and raising edifices by which they might be remembered. Now with the same dominions, the wealth they bring is either uselessly hearded or wastefully expended now no buildings arise as monuments of a dynasty no armies rejoice in the presence of a brave and noble sovereign, and, stimulated by his example win for him renown at the points of their bright swords. All now is mean and sorded from the poor pensioned descendant of Shah Jelian and Alumgeer to the representative of the once proud Soobahs of the Dukhun

Yes said our conductor; "what is the use of new calling oneself a soldier with scarcely bread to cat? The few of us who are in the fort wander about the ruins of the noble palaces and the descried walls, and our only enemies are the panthers and hyanns who have taken advantage of the yearly increasing jungle and desolation, and bid fair to expel us altogether But look from the window sirs the open ground over which you came is called the Futteh Mydan, the plain of victory Here the proud monarchs of Beeder first the Bahmunco and afterwards the Beerced dynastics, used to sit while their gallant troops poured forth from the gates, and amused while they gratified their sovereign with feats of arms. And yonder added he taking us to another window "yonder are their tombe, where their mortal remains rest though their spirits are in the ble sed paradise of our Prophet.

We looked, and the riew was lovely as it was unexpected. We were on the t p of what appeared to be a lofty mountain so far and so deep did the noble exprise of valley before us descend. The blue listance melted into the line of the heavens, while nearer and nearer to us the villages and fiel is became more and more distinct till close under us, they seemed as it were drawn out on a map, and among them at red the tombs, a cluster of noble-looking edifices their white domes glann, in the red light of the declining san

"Ay" cried I they must have felt that they were kines, while they gazed a lauringly on their gallant soldiers and looked forth

over the lovely country which they ruled

Come" and my father breaking in upon my reflections, which were rapilly peopling the open space of the I utteh My lan with the troops and narriors of past ages, and picturing to me their mouly games their mock faht the shouts of the contenting parties while from the spot whereon I stood the praises of the king and arelimations of his courtiers were ringing through the arch I re-fe a I machallett multitules without- Com it is growing la c and we mu t soon return."

We again followed our guide, and as we passed over a causeway which was built across the moat, we had a noble view of its great width and depth. The bottom was partially covered by stagnant pools, the remains of the water the monsoon had deposited, for the rainy season was now past. The fosse was very curiously dug, with a view to defence, having been excavated out of the solid rock to a considerable depth, three walls had been left standing, with large intervals between each, and they would certainly oppose a most formidable interruption to an invader

We entered the fort by a large gloomy archway, within which some soldiers were lounging, and from thence, traversing a large court-yard covered with fragments of ruins and rank brushwood, we emerged into an open space beyond. Here a scene of still greater desolation than even the outside presented opened on our view, ruins of all descriptions—of palaces, stables, offices, baths, magazines for arms and ammunition strewed the ground, it was a melancholy sight, but the whole was evidently far beyond repair, and fast hastening to destruction

We left the spot, to see the only remaining real curiosity of the place, an immense cannon, the sister, as our guide told us, of one at Beejapoor. It was on a high bastion, from which there was a magnificent view of the plain below us, over which the huge fort now flung its broad deep shadow, while the distant country was fast fading into obscurity under the growing darkness of the evening. The herds of the town, winding up the steep ascent from the plain, alone broke the impressive silence, as their lowings, the tinkling of their numberless bells, and the melancholy yet sweet notes of the shepherd's rude pipe ascended to our lofty station

But we could stay no longer, we returned by the way we had come, and though I longed to have roamed over the ruined and deserted palaces, and explored their recesses, it was too late, dismissing our guide therefore with a small present for his civility, we retraced our steps to our encampment.

From Beeder, sahib, we had no adventures worth relating till we reached Ellichpoor, by which town we directed our route homewards. However we did not travel by the same road as we had done in coming down, which would have led us by Mungrool and Oomraotee, and we had good reason for avoiding both places—the remembrance of the fate of the sahoukar would necessarily be fresh in the memory of the inhabitants of the latter place, and our appearance was too remarkable to be easily forgotten—So we struck off from Nandair on the Godavery towards Boorhanpoor, and when we reached Akola in the Berar valley, we turned again towards Ellichpoor, and reached it in safety—You must not think, however, that during this long journey we were idle, on the contrary, we pursued our avocation with the same spirit and success with which we had commenced and continued our fortunate expedition and no traveller however humble who joined our party or was decoyed among us, escaped; and by this means though our booty was not materially increased, yet we collected sufficient to support us without taking aught from the general stock, which was to be divided when we reached our home.

At Ellichpoor we encamped under some large tamarind trees, clot the durgah of Rhymin Shah Doolah. It was a quiet lovely spot. Below the durgah ran a small river which had its rise in the neighbouring mointains and over its stream the hallowed buildings of the saint, embowered in thick trees, seemed to be the abode of prace and repose. Thither Axeema and myself, attended by some of our men, went as soon as we had rested ourselves a little and changed our read-soiled garments to present our officings at the shrine and to offic up our thanksgivings for the continued care and protection of Alla.

This done I sent her back to our camp and entered into general conversation with the moollas, as was my wont, in order to gather in formation to guide us in our enterprises and from so large a city as Ellichpoor I had some hope that we should gain a valuable booty

We conversed upon many topics of everylay occurrence at last, one of the moollas asked me where I had come from and whither I was going I said I was a horse-dealer who had been down to Hyderabad with horses from Hindostan and was now returning having di po ed of them. And the men who accompany you who are there? I asked the moolla.

My father who is a merchant is one said I "besides him there are the grooms and attendants who accompanied us and several trivillers who have joined us from time to time as we journesed hither

"Then you are a kafila? said the moolla.

Laxetly so said I "and feeling our lives to be strong we are d termined to try the read to Jubbulpoor by Baitool, which, though an afe for small bodies presents no obstacle to our numerous roots."

Cetainly not, be replied; "and the road will rare you a long distance which in a would have had to travel had you gone round by Nappor; and i since you are bent on trying the jungle road, perhaps you would in their any objection to an increase to your party? and I think I could get you one.

"Certainly n t," said I if the travellers are respectable

"Highly a said the mooths the person of whom I speak is a man of rank node than a number who is returning to his neghew who rules over III. pal. "Ah, I have heard of him, I think," said I, "you do not mean the nuwab, Subzec Khan, as he is called?"

"The very person, and a fine old soldier he is It is a pity he is so addicted to the subree or bhang, from which, however, he has gained a name which it is well known has struck terror into his enemies on the battle-field, and has fairly superseded any other he may have had "

"It is a pity," I said, "for report speaks well of the noble khan, and his deeds of arms are known to all who have sojourned in Hin-I shall be right glad to accompany him, for 'tis said also that he is a lare companion "

"You have heard rightly," said the moolla "The numb will be here before sunset, as he always comes to converse with us and drink his bliang, if you will step over from your encampment when I send to you, I will introduce you to him"
"Thanks, worthy moolla," said I, "you only need to summon me, and I will attend your call with pleasure"

I left him soon after Here was the commencement of an adventure which promised fairly to eclipse all our former ones, the rank of the number of followers he would necessarily have with him, and the noise there would be made about him when he was missed,—all contributed to render this as pretty an adventure

as a Thug seeking plunder and fame could desire

I did not mention a word of my hopes to any one, I was determined to have this matter all to myself, both in plan and execution If I succeeded, my fame and character were established for ever, and I could not fail with so many to back me A momentary thought flashed across me-that the numab was a man of war, that he would be armed to the teeth, and who was I that I could oppose him? but I dismissed it in an instant as unworthy My confidence in my own prowess, both as a Thug and with every weapon whether on foot or on horseback, was unbounded, it had never as yet been checked, and I feared nothing living, I believe, in the form of man

Yes, Ameer Alı, said I, you and all your tribe have ever feared us Englishmen You have never yet attacked one of us, nor dared

The Thug laughed No, sahib, you are wrong, we never feared you, but to attack any of you would have been impossible When you travel on horseback you are not worth attacking, for you never carry anything about your persons. In your tents you are surrounded by a host of servants, and at night you are always guarded When you travel post, we might possibly get a few rupees from your palankeens, but you are generally armed, you usually carry pistols, and some of us must undoubtedly fall before we could effect our object. But, above all, there would be such a hue and cry if any of you were missing that it would be impossible to escape especially as any property we might take from you would assuredly lead to our detection.

Your reasons are weighty said I laughing but I suspect, Ameer Alt, you do not like the pustols and that is the reason we have examed you. But go on with your story I have interrupted you

Well then, subib to continue. I waited very impatiently till towards evening when, as I was sitting at the door of my tent. I saw a man on horsehact, attended by a small retinue, among whom to my great astonishment was a young good looking gril mounted on a spirited pony coming down the read from the city. He passed near our camp and crossing the river ascended the opposite bank and entered the durgah. Was this my new victim P. I was not long in suspense a message soon came from the moolla, requesting my company and taking my sword and shield with me I followed the man who had come to call me.

CHAPTER XXIII

He was a stalwart knight and keen, And had in many a battle been; His evebrow dark and eye of fire Showed spirit proud and prompt to ire — Marmion.

STATTO with the old meella I have before mentioned, the numb, Subree Khan Buhadoor (for by that name alone I know him) was qualing his bitter and intoxicating drought. Around him stood some of his retainers, fierce looking fellows one or two of them with deep scars on their rough vagges which showed they had bravely flowed their noble matter through many a hard fought field. Hehind him rat the slave I have mentioned, a slender fair girl who was be ally engaged in making a fresh bowl of the infusion the numb was so ford of

The mooila introduced me "This," said he my lord, is the young man I spoke of I need repeat no praises of him for no doubt your discerning eyes will at once observe that he is a person of respectability and good breeding and a fit companion for one of my lords exalted mak."

I prevented the lift of my sword as a nurzur and after touching it with his hand, he bid me be scated near him on the curps t

This I was too polite to do so exen ing myself on the groun lef unworthin at f such I onour I seated myself on my heels on the edge of the carpet, and placed my sword and shield before me

The sword immediately attracted his attention. 'That is a noble weapon, Meer Salub," said he, "may I be allowed to look at

"Certainly," said I, presenting the hilt, "the sword is at my lord's service"

"Nay, Meer Sahib, I want it not, but I am curious in these matters, and have a choice collection, which I will one day showyou"

He drew it carefully from the scabbard, and as the brightly polished blade gleamed in the sunlight, he looked on it with a smile of delight, such as one would greet an intimate friend with after a long absence

I must, however, describe him In person he was tall and strongly made his aims in particular, which were distinctly seen through his thin muslin dress, were remarkably muscular, and very long, his figure was slightly inclined to corpulency, perhaps the effect of age, which had also sprinkled his cuiling beard and mustachios with grey hairs, or it might be that these had been increased in number by the dangerous use of the ding he drank in such quantities face was strikingly handsome, and at once bespoke his high birth A noble forehead, which was but little concealed by his turban, was covered with veins which rose above its surface, as though the proud blood which flowed in them almost scorned confinement. His eyes were large and piercing like an eagle's, and, but that they were swollen and reddened by habitual intemperance, would have been pronounced beautiful He had a prominent thin nose, large nostills, almost transparent, and a mouth small and curved like a bow. which, when the features were at rest, wore an habitual expression of scorn His flowing and graceful beard and mustachios, which I have already mentioned, completed a countenance such as I had never seen the like of before, and have not met with since The whole was inexpressibly striking, and in the meanest apparel the nuwab would at once have been pronounced by any one to be a man of high family and a gallant soldier

A rosary of large pearls was about his neck, and with this exception he wore no ornaments. His dress was studiously plain, while it was neat in the extreme. I remarked two deep scars, one on the back of his head where it joined the neck, the other on his broad chest, and its deep seam was not concealed by the thin dress he wore. Such was Subzee Khan, who had won his ienown in many a hard fight, and whom I was determined to destroy on the very first opportunity

He continued looking at the blade so earnestly and so long, that I began to think that it had possibly belonged to some victim of my father's, who might have been known to the nuwab, and I was mentally framing a reply in case he should ask me where I got it, when he suddenly said, as he passed his finger along the edge, "So you too have seen battles, my friend there are some slight dents in this good sword which have not except the touch of an old solder. How dul it come by them?"

"Oh, a trifling skirmish with robbers as I came down from Hindosian, said I and I related to him our affair with the thieves in the Nummil road.

It was well done, said he, when I ended my account "but methinks, you might have followed up your success and sliced some more of the rogues a little. This weapon would not have failed you if your heart had not

"My heart never failed me yet \umab I replied those who know me well also know that I burn for an opportunity to prove that I am a man and no coward but what could I do in that in stance? there were but few of us, and the jungle was terribly thick

-we could not have followed them in the dark.

"You are right" he replied and what say you my youngreed, to following the fortunes of Sabree Khan? He has at present naught to give thee but Inshalla! the time is fast approaching when men of tried valour may win romething. My friend Dott Mahomed writes to me to come quickly for he has need of leaders in his new enterprises and methinks, your figure and ad dress would find favour with him. What say you? You have turned any money in your present expedition you cannot expend it in a manner more befitting your service. Dot Mahomed has need of such youths as you, and, Inshalla! I wo will yet do something to win is fame.

May your favour increase, Bunde Nuwar!" cred I 'it is the very thing my soul longs for with your introduction I cannot fail of obtaining a rice and if once we have anything to do, you will find I shall not be backward

Then you will accompany me?" said he I am glad of it You have some men with you I perceive and some travellers what say you to taking the direct read to Jubbulpoor? It is a rough one but I am preved for time and that by Angpoor though free from interruption or danger of robbers is much longer

I had determined on taking it Numb Sahib, I replied, even before I sim von f rwe are a sin og party and well armed; but now I can have no hesitation. As for therees or robbers, I have no dread of them, and my lord a suredly can have none f

"Non-since you have joined in the sull; "but with the few flows I have I confeet hardly liked to brave the jungle; for the lands who rows through it are strong and in reflect, and it would be a sorry face for the Khan to fall in an unknown spot, after a life sign in but it Cells"

And yet you will do so, Nuwab Sahib, said I internally, your death-blow will reach you in that jungle you dread, and no monument will mark the spot where the remains of Subzee Khan will Tie

"And when shall you be ready to move, Meer Sahib?" continued he, "have you aught to delay you here?"

"Nothing," I replied "I had purposed marching to-morrow morning, but if my lord wishes I can wait a few days"

"Ah no,-to-morrow morning I cannot move conveniently, but the day after I will join you here by daylight, and we will travel

"Jo Hookum!" I replied, "I shall be ready, and now have I permission to depart?"

"Certainly," he said, "I will no longer detain you, for I must be off myself My friend Sulabut Khan has an entertainment of some kind to-night, and I have promised to attend it"

I returned to my tent, and though I longed to break the matter to my father, yet I refrained from doing so until the nuwab had fauly joined us, when I would introduce him properly

As we were preparing to start the third morning before daylight,

the nuwab rode into our camp and inquired for me

I was speedily with him, and my father coming up to us I introduced them to each other After the usual compliments had passed, my father, unobserved by the nuwab, threw me a significant glance, -I returned it, and he understood me, a look of triumph passed across his features, which gratified me, because to me alone was the band indebted for the adventure which was to follow

Our party was soon in motion, and as the light increased with the dawning day, it revealed to me the person and dress of the nuwab, who now rode by my side He was mounted on a splendid bay horse, which moved proudly and spiritedly beneath his noble master, the trappings of the animal were of crimson velvet, somewhat soiled, but still exceedingly handsome, for the saddlecloth and headstall were embroidered with gold thread in a nich pattern

But the rider chiefly attracted my observation He wore a shirt of mail, composed of the finest steel links, exquisitely polished, over his ordinary clothes, at his waist it was confined by a handsome green shawl, which he had tied round him, and in which were stuck two or three daggers, mounted in gold and silver. His arms were cased in steel gauntlets, as far as the elbows, and greaves of steel protected his thighs On his head was a bright steel cap, from the top of which a crimson silk tassel depended, and a shawl handkerchief was folded round it to protect his head from the heat of the At his back hung a shield of rhinoceros hide, richly painted and gilt, a long sword hung at his side from an embroidered velvet you too have seen battles, my friend there are some alight dents in this good sword which have not escaped the touch of an old soldier. How did it come by them?"

"Oh a trilling shirmish with robbers as I came down from Hindo-Nirmul road.

It was well done, said he, when I ended my account 'but methniks, you might have followed up your success and sliced some more of the regues a little. This weapon would not have failed you if your heart had not."

"My heart nover failed me yet, Nuwnb" I replied those which was me well also know that I burn for an opportunity to prove that I am a man and no coward but what could I do in that in stance? there were but few of us, and the jungle was terribly thick—we could not have followed them in the dark.

You are right," he replied; and what say you my young froud, to following the fortunes of Subsee Khan? He has at present naught to give thee but, Inshalla! the time is fast approaching when men of tried valour may win something. My friend Dott Mahomed writes to me to come quickly for he has need of leaders in his new enterprises and, methinks, your figure and ad dress would find favour with him. What say you? You are not fit to soil horses all the days of your life and if you have turned any money in your present expedition, you cannot expend it in a manner more besitting your appearance than in getting a few men together and offering your service. Dost Mahomed has need of such youths as you, and I inshalls! we will yet do something to win its fine.

May your favour increase, Bundé Nuwaz!" cried I "it is the very thing my soul longs for with your introduction I cannot fall of obtaining service and if once we have anything to do, you will find I shall not be backward.

"Then you will accompany ma? said he I am glad of it. You have some men with you I perceive, and some insvollers; what say you to taking the direct road to Jubbulpoor? it is a rough one but I am pressed for time and that by Nappoor though free from interruption or danger of robbers, is much longer.

I had determined on taking it, Nuwab Sahib I rephed, even before I saw you for we are a strong party and well armed but now I can have no heatshon. As for thieves or robbers, I have no dread of them, and my lord assuredly can have none?"

"None, ance you have joined me, he said but with the few fellows I have, I confees I hardly liked to brave the jungle for the bands who ream through it are strong and merciless, and it would be a sorry fate for Subzee Khan to fall in an unknown spot, after a life spent in battle-fields" And yet you will do so, Nuwab Sahib, said I internally, your death-blow will reach you in that jungle you dread, and no monument will mark the spot where the remains of Subzee Khan will lie

"And when shall you be ready to move, Meer Sahib?" continued he, "have you aught to delay you here?"

"Nothing," I replied "I had purposed marching to-morrow morning, but if my lord wishes I can wait a few days"

"Ah no,—to-morrow morning I cannot move conveniently, but the day after I will join you here by daylight, and we will travel together"

"Jo Hookum'" I replied, "I shall be ready, and now have I permission to depart?"

"Certainly," he said, "I will no longer detain you, for I must be off myself My friend Sulabut Khan has an entertainment of some kind to-night, and I have promised to attend it"

I returned to my tent, and though I longed to break the matter to my father, yet I refrained from doing so until the nuwab had fairly joined us, when I would introduce him properly

As we were preparing to start the third morning before daylight,

the nuwab rode into our camp and inquired for me

I was speedily with him, and my father coming up to us I introduced them to each other. After the usual compliments had passed, my father, unobserved by the nuwab, threw me a significant glance, —I returned it, and he understood me, a look of triumph passed across his features, which gratified me, because to me alone was the band indebted for the adventure which was to follow

Our party was soon in motion, and as the light increased with the dawning day, it revealed to me the person and dress of the nuwab, who now rode by my side. He was mounted on a splendid bay horse, which moved proudly and spiritedly beneath his noble master, the trappings of the animal were of crimson velvet, somewhat soiled, but still exceedingly handsome, for the saddlecloth and headstall were embroidered with gold thread in a nich pattern

But the rider chiefly attracted my observation He wore a shirt of mail, composed of the finest steel links, exquisitely polished, over his ordinary clothes, at his waist it was confined by a handsome green shawl, which he had tied round him, and in which were stuck two or three daggers, mounted in gold and silver. His arms were cased in steel gauntlets, as far as the elbows, and greaves of steel protected his thighs. On his head was a bright steel cap, from the top of which a crimson silk tassel depended, and a shawl handker-chief was folded round it to protect his head from the heat of the sun. At his back hung a shield of rhinoceros hide, richly painted and gilt, a long sword hung at his side from an embroidered velvet belt which passed over his shoulder and at his saddle-bow was fastened a small battle-axe, with a long and brightly polished steel handle.

Well did his appearance accord with his fame as a warrior I had seen hundreds of soldiers at Hyderabad, but I had novor yet looked on one so perfectly equipped as he who now rode bends me nor one could I but have attached myself to him, in whom I should have placed such confidence and followed readily into the deadliest strife. But what was the use of his weapons or his armour? they would not avail him,—his hours were numbered, and his broath already in his neetrils.

You observe me intently said he.

I do," I replied for I have never yet seen so perfect a cavallor or no. Do and acconfirments all agree in setting off their noble owner. Do you always travel thus?

Always, Meer Sahib a solder should never be out of his har ness. The short time I have spent in idlences with that luxurious dog Sulabut Khan has softened my body and even now I feel my armour chafe me. But the time comes when I shall need it and I had as well accustom myself to it."

We continued the whole of the march together and he beguiled the way with relations of his adventures, battles, and escapes. I was as much fascanated by them as by his powers of conversation, which were remarkable; and I often visibled that I had met him as a friend, or enrolled myself under him, when I ringht have followed his banner and endeavoured to equal his deeds of valour. But he was marked in our emphabo language he was become a bunn, and he was doomed to die by every rule and sacred obligation of our profession.

We reached our first stage without any adventure. Beyond it the villagers told us that the jungle grew thicker and thicker that the road was very bad and stony and shove all, that the Gonds were in arms, and plundered all whom they met with

"Let them try us, said the nuwab as he listened to the relations, "let them try us! Inshalls! they will do us no harm, and it may be some of them will get broken growns for their pains.

But the next morning we moved with more canton our men were desired to keep well together and I picked out a trusty few to surround the cart, which moved on with difficulty over the rough and stomy roads the nuwah and myself rode at the head of the party

As we advanced, the read grew wilder and wilder in many places it was narrowed almost to a footpath, and the men were abliged to cut away the branches, which often nearly met corose the read to as to allow the cart to proceed. At other times it run between high banks, which almost overhung us, and from which missiles might have been showered on our heads, without a possibility of our being able to strike a blow in self-defence

"That was an ugly place, Nuwab Sahib," said I, as we emerged from one of these narrow passes into a more open country, though still covered with jungle, "had we been attacked there we should assuredly have fallen victims"

"It was indeed," said he, "and I am thankful we have got out of it, if I iemember aright, it has a bad name. From hence, how ever, I think there are no more, the jungle becomes a forest, and there is not so much underwood. But look," cried he, "what is that? By Alla! the Gonds are upon us. Shumshere Alum!" cried he, in a voice which rang like the sound of a trumpet, "Shumshere bu dust!" and his glittering blade flashed from the scabbard. Checking his horse, and at the same time touching its flanks with his heels, the animal made two or three bounds, after which the nuwab fixed himself firmly in his seat, pressed down his cap upon his head, and cried to me to be ready

I was not behindhand, my sword was drawn and my shield disengaged, which I placed before me to guard me from the arrows A few bounds of my horse, which was scarcely second to the nuwab's, brought me to his side, and we were followed by Bhudrinath and a few others mounted on pomes, and some men on foot with their matchlocks

"Come on, ye sons of defiled mothers," cried the nuwab, "come on and prove yourselves true men, come on and try your cowardly arrows against stout hearts and ready weapons! Base-born kafirs are ye, and cowards, Inshalla! your sisters are vile, and asses have loved your mothers"

I could not help laughing at the nuwab's gesticulations and abuse, as he pouled it upon the Gónds and shook his sword at them. They would not move, and perched up as they were on the side of a hill, they prepared their bows to give us a volley—and down it came certainly, the arrows whistled past us, and one wounded the nuwab's horse slightly in the neck, at which the Gónds set up a shout of triumph

"Ah, my poor Motec, thou art wounded," cried he, drawing the arrow from the wound "Meer Sahib, those rogues will never come down, you had better give them a volley and disperse them"

"Now, my sons," cried I to my followers, "whenever a fellow raises his body to fire, do you mark him "

They did so One Gond in particular, who was sitting on a rock drawing a large bow which he placed against his feet, was a conspicuous object, and apparently careless of his safety Surfuraz Khan aimed at him—fired—and in an instant he rolled over and over almost to our foot the ball had but him in the throat, and he was quite dead. The rest seeing his fate set up loud yells, and for a moment we thought they would have charged us however another of their number fell badly wounded, and carrying him off they rapidly retreated to their mountain fastnesses. Pursuit would have been wan as it was impracticable.

We met with no further adventure during our march and duly arrived at our stage by the usual hour

"Amoor Alı, said my father coming to me shortly afterwards, is the numb to be ours or not? If you have invited him as a guest, say so if not, you had better arrange something"

A guest! cried 1 "oh, no, he must be disposed of there can be no difficulty where there are so many good places to destroy hım.

"Impossible! said my father "on herseback it would be mad ness. He is a beautiful rider and his horse is too spirited; the least confusion would make him bound, and who could hold him? We must devise some other plan.

Leave all to me, said I "if there is no absolute necessity for selecting a place, I will watch my opportunity

CHAPTER XXIV

Lear -No no no life Why should a dog a horse, a rat have life, And thou no breath at all? O thou wilt come no more. Never never never never!

King Lear Act v Scene 8

"I suppose you have long ere this guessed, my friends, said I to Bhudrinath and Surfuria Khan, next day "why the nuwab in is our company ?"

"We can have little doubt," replied the former since you have brought him so far but, tell us, what are your wishes, how is it to be managed? It will be impossible to attack him on the road he would cut down some of us to a certainty and I for one have no ambition to be made an end of just at present.

You are right, said I we must not risk anything Still, I think an opportunity will not long be wanting "How?" cried both at the same moment.

Insten," said I, " and tell me whether my plan meets with your approval. During the march yesterday the nuwab was regretting that we did not fall in with a good stream of olear water that he might take his usual sherbet you know that the slave girl he has with him always prepares it. Now I am in hopes that we may meet one in to-morrow's march, and I will try all I can to persuade him to alight and refresh himself, while he is engaged in conversation with me if we find him off his gurid, we can fall on him "
"Nothing is easier," replied Surfurar Khan, "we cannot fail if he once sits down his weapons will not then serve him"

"I do not half like the job," said Bhudanath "Suppose he were to be on his guard, he would assuredly escape, and though both myself and the khan here fear neither man nor devil, yet it is something out of the way to kill a numab, he is not a legular bunit and I think ought to be allowed to pass free of haim"

"Nonsense!" cired I "This from you, Bhudi math? I am astonished! What, if he be a numb, is he not a man? and have I not fairly enticed him according to every rule of our vocation? It may be something new to kill a nuvab, but think, man, think on the glory of being able to say we had killed Subree Khan, that valiant among the valiant why, our fathers and grandfathers never did such an act before"

"That is the very ierson why I raise my voice against it," said he, "anything unusual is improper, and is often offensive to Bhowanee "

"Then take the omens upon it," said I, "and see what she says Inshalla! we shall have the numb yet "

"Ay," replied he, "now you speak like a Thug, and a proper one I will take the omens this evening and report the result, should they be farourable, you will find Bhudimath the last man to

In the evening the omens were duly taken, and proved to be favourable Bhudinath came to tell me the news with great delight

"I said how it would be," I cited, "you were only to doubt our patroness after the luck she has given us hitherto, and now listen, I have not been idle I have found out from the villagers that about four coss hence there is a small stream with plenty of water, the banks are covered with jungle, as thick as we could desire, and I have fixed on that as the place Shall we send on the lughaces?"

"Certainly," said Bhudi nath, "we may as well be prepared; but no," continued he, "what would be the use of it? If the jungle is as thick as you say it is, we can easily conceal the bodies, and at any rate, as there is a river, a grave can soon be made in the sand or gravel But the nuwab is a powerful man, Meei Salub, you had better not risk yourself alone with him, as for the rest, the men have secured them,—that is, they have airanged already who are to do their business"

"So much the better," said I, "for there is little time now to think about it"

I have selected one, continued Bhudrmath, ' the fellow who calls himself the nuwab s jemadar-I have scraped an intimacy with him, and am sure of him the others have done the same but we loft the numb to you.

"He is mine," cried I "I did not wish to be interfered with. If Surfurar Khan has not selected any one, I will get him to help

"Ho has not, Meer Sahib, that I know of, and he is as strong a man as any we have with us with him and another of his men you cannot fail. But let Surfuras Khan be the shumshes, he is a good

' I scarcely need one if the nuwab is sitting " said I perhaps it is better to have one in case of any difficulty "

We made all our arrangements that night, and next morning started on our journey in high spirits. The numbe and I, as usual, rode together at the head of the party

"This is an unblest country Moor Sahib," said he, as we rode "Didst thou ever see so dreary a jungle, and not a drop of water to mousten the lips of a true believer from one end of the stage to the other? It is well the weather is cool, or we should be sorely tired in our long stages and here have I, Subme Khan, gone without my usual sherbet for three days on this very account. By Alla! I am now as thirsty as a crow in the hot weather and my mouth opens in spite of me. Oh that we could light on a river or a well in this perched desert! I would have a glorious draught."

Patience, Khodawund!" eried I, "who knows but we may be near a stream? and then we will make a halt, and refresh our selves. I am hungry myself, and should not care for an hour's delay to break my fast with some dates I have with me.

"Ha, dates I will have some too my fellows may find something to eat in my wallets, and thou sayest truly the cold wind of these mountains makes one hungry indeed."

But coss after coss was left behind, and as yet no river appeared. I was beginning to think I had received false information, and was in no very good humour at my disappointment, when, to my joy on possing over the brow of a hill, I saw the small river the villagers had spoken of below me.

There, said I, Khodawund! There at last is a river and the sparkling of the water promises it to be good. Will you now halt for an hour? We can have a pipe all round and your slave can prepare your sherbet."

Surely creed he. We may not meet with another and this is just the time when I like my sherbet best send some one to the rear for my slave, and hid her come on quickly

I deepatched a man for her and reaching the stream, we chose a smooth grassy spot, and spreading the covers of our saddles, sat down

One by one, as the men arrived, they also rested, or wading into the water refreshed themselves by washing their hands and faces in the pure stream, which glided sprikling over its pebbly bed, the beasts too were allowed to drink, and all the men siting down in groups, the rude hooka passed round among them, while they cheerfully discussed the ments of the road they had passed, and what was likely to be before them. Casting a hasty glance around, I saw that all the men were at their posts, three Thugs to each of the numb's servants and retainers. They were therefore sure. Azeema's cart was standing in the road, and in order to get her away, I went to her

"Beloved," said I, "we have halted here for a short time, to allow of the people taking some refreshment, but you had better proceed, the road appears smooth, and we shall travel the faster to overtake you"

"Certainly," she replied, "bid them drive on, for I long to be at the end of the journey Poor Nurgiz and myself are well-night golted to death "

"Ah, well," I said, "bear up against it for another stage or two I promise you to get a dooly, if I can, at the first large village or town we come to, and then you will be comfortable"

"Now proceed," said I to the Thug who acted as driver (for I had purchased a cart on the road, soon after we left Beeder, and he had driven it ever since), "proceed, but do not go too fast"

She left me, and I returned to the numb. He was sitting in conversation with my father, and even now was partially intoxicated with his detestable beverage

"Ho! Meer Salub," cried he, "what dost thou think? Here have I been endeavouring to persuade this worthy father of thine to take some of my sherbet By Alla! 'tis a drink worthy of paradise, and yet he swears it is bitter, and does not agree with his stomach Wilt thou take a drink?" and he tendered me the cup "Drink, man! 'twill do thee good, and keep the cold wind out of thee, and as to the preparation, I'll warrant it good, for there breathes not in the ten kingdoms of Hind a slave so skilled in the art of preparing subzee as Kureema yonder. Is it not so, gul?"

"My lord's favour is great toward his slave," said the maiden,

"and if he is pleased, 'tis all she cares for "

"Then bring another cup," cried the nuwab, "for what saith the song?" and he roared out the burden of one I had heard before—

"Peyala pea, to myn nc pea, phir kisse ko kya?" *

"and what is it to any one? All the world knows that Subzee

^{*} A cup (of wine) is drunk,—then I have drunk it, What is that to any one?

Khan drinks blang and is not the worse soldier for it. Now with a few fair girls to sing a gluzul or two to us, methinks a heaven might be made out of this wild spot.

'It is a good thought, nuwah," ened I, chiming in with his to: I dore say they will accompany us for a march or two

"You say well, Moer Sahib, yours are good words, very good words and Inshalls! we will have the women, said the nuwsb slowly and industrictly for he had now swallowed a large quantity of the infusion, which had affected his head. "By Alla! they should dance too—like this—" continued he with energy and he got up and twirled himself round once or two with his arms extended, throwing learning glances around upon us all

It was irrematibly ludicrous to behold him. His splendid armour and dress but ill assorted with the mining goit and absurd motions

he was going through, and we all laughed heartily

But the farce was proceeding too long and wo had sterner matter in hand than to waste our time and opportunity in such fooleries. So I begged him again to be seated, and motioned to Surfuraz Khan to be ready the instant he should see me go round to his back.

"Ho! Kureema," crued he, when he had aguin seated himself, by Alla! this thirst is unquenchable and thou are excelling thyself to-day in preparing it. I must have more, or I shall never get to the end of this vile stage. I feel now as if I could sleep, and some more will revive me.

"Fazil Khan, bring my hooks, orned I, as loud as I could. It was the signal we had agreed on.

Ay cried the nuwab, I will beg a whiff or two, twill be agreeable with my sherbet

I had now moved round behind him my roomal was in my hand, and I signalled to Surfuras Khan to sees him.

Look, Nuwab!" cried he and he laid hold on his right arm with a firm grasp.

"How dare you touch me, slave?" encoulated Subsee Khan.

How dare you touch a nuwab -- ?"

He did not finish the sontence. I had thrown the cloth about his neck, Surfuras Khan still held his hand, and my father pulled at his legs with all his force. The nuwab sonced several times like a man in a deep sleep but my grip was firm and did not relax—a horse would have dided under it. Suddenly as he writhed under me, every muscle in his body quivered he moved again still louder, and the now yielding form offered no resistance. I gained upon his features and say that the breath of life had passed from the body it had but now animated. Subzee Khan was dead—I had destroyed the slayer of hundreds!

But no one had thought of his poor slave girl, who at some distance, and with her back turned to us, had been busily engaged in preparing another rich draught for her now unconscious master She had not heard the noise of our scuffle, nor the deep groans which had escaped from some of the numb's people and she approached the spot where Surfurz Khan was now employed in stripping the armour and diess from the dead body

Ya Alla! Salub, what a piercing shrick escaped her, when she saw what had been done! I shall never forget it, nor her look of horror and misery as she rushed forward and threw herself on the

Although master and slave, salub, they had loved

Her lips were glued to those of the unconscious corpse, which had so often returned her warm caresses, and she murmured in her agony all the endearing terms by which she had used in their private hours to call him, and implored him to awake

"He cannot be dead! he cannot be dead!" cried the fair girlfor she was beautiful to look on, salub, as she partly rose and brushed back her dishevelled hair from her eyes, "and yet he moves not-he speaks not"-and she gazed on his features for a moment "Ah!" she screamed, "look at his eyes—look at them—they will fall out of his head! and his countenance, 'tis not my own lord's—those are not the lips which have often spoken kind words to his poor Kureema! Oh, my heart, what a pain is there!"
"This will never do," cried I, "some of you put her out of her misery, for my part, I war not with women

"The girl is fair," said Surfular Khan, "I will give her a last chance for life"

"Hark you!" cried he to her, "this is no time for fooling," and as he rudely shook her by the aim, she looked up in his face with a piteous expression, and pointed to the body by which she was kneeling and mourning as she rocked herself to and fro me," cried the khan, "those who have done that work will end thy miserable life unless thou hearkenest to reason I have no wife, no child thou shalt be both to me, if thou wilt rise and follow me Why waste further thought on the dead? And thou wast his slave too! Rise, I say again, and thy life is spared—thou shalt be free "

"Who spoke to me?" said she, in tones scarcely audible do not take me from him, my heart is broken! I am dying, and you would not part us?"

"Listen, fool!" exclaimed the khan, "before this assembly I promise thee life and a happy home, yet thou hearkenest not tempt not thy fate, a word from me, and thou diest Wilt thou then follow me? My horse is ready, we will leave the dead, and think no more on the fate of him who lies there" "Think no more on him! forgot him—my own my noble lover! Oh, no no, no! Is he not dead? and I too am dying"

"Again I warn thee miserable girl, cried Surfurus Khan urge me not to use force I would that you followed me willingly—as yet

I have not laid hands on thee.

A low moan was her only roply as she turned again to the dead, and caressed the distorted and now stiffming features.

'Away with the body! cried I to some of the lighaces, who were waiting to do their office one would think yo were all a parcel of love-sick girls, like that mourning wretch there Are we to stay lottering here because of her fooling? Away with it!

My order was obeyed; four of them souzed the body and bore it off in spite of the new frankie exertions of the slave; they were of no avail she was held by two men, and her struggles to free her self gradually exhausted her

Now is your time, cried I to Surfuras Khan "lay hold of her in the name of the thousand shitans, since you must have her and put her on your horse you can hold her on, and it will be your own fault if you cannot keep her quiet.

Surfurns Khan raused her in his arms as if she had been a child and though now restored to consciousness, as she by turns reviled us, denounced us as murderers, and implored us to kill her he bore her off and placed her on his horse. But it was of no use her screams were terrific, and her struggles to be free elmost defied the efforts of Surfuris Khan on one side and one of his men on the other to hold her on.

We proceeded about half a coss in this manner when my father who had hitherto been a silent spectator rode up, as I was again rainly endeavouring to persuade the slaye to be quiet and to bear with her fate.

This is worse than folly" cried he, "it is madness and you, above all, Surfuras Khan, to be enamoured of a smooth-faced gril in such a hurry! What could we do were we to meet traveller! She would denounce us to them, and then a fine piece of business we should have made of it. Shame on you! Do you not know your duty ofter?

I'll have no more to say to the devil, said the man on the left of the horse doggedly "you may even get her on the best way you can what with her and the horse, a pretty time I am likely to have of it to the end of the journey and he quitted his hold.

Ay said I, "and think you that tongue of hers will be silent when we reach our stage? What will you do with her then?

Devil! cred the khan, striking her violently on the face with his sheathed sword, "will you not sit quiet, and let me lead the horse?

The violence with which he had struck caused the sword to cut through its wooden scabbard, and it had inflicted a severe wound on her face

"There," cried my father, "you have spoilt her beauty at any rate by your violence, what do you now want with her?" "She is quiet at all events," said the khan, and he led the horse a short distance

But the blow had only partly stunned her, and she recovered to a fresh consciousness of her situation, the blood trickled down her face, and she wiped it away with her hand, she looked pite-ously at it for an instant, and the next dashed herself violently to the earth

"One of you hold the animal," cried the khan, "till I put her up again" But she struggled more than ever, and rent the air with her screams, he drew his sword and raised it over her

"Strike!" she cried, "murderer and villain as you are, strike! and end the wretched life of the poor slave, you have already wounded me, and another blow will free me from my misery, I thought I could have died then, but death will not come to me Will you not kill me?" and she spat on him

"This is not to be borne, fool that I was to take so much trouble to preserve a worthless life," cried the khan, sheathing his sword, "thou shalt die, and that quickly" He threw his roomal about her neck, and she writhed in her death agomes under his fatal grasp "There!" cried he, quitting his hold, "I would it had been otherwise, but it was her fate, and I have accomplished it!" and he left the body and strode on in moody silence

Some of the lughaees coming up, the body was hastily interred among the bushes which skirted the road, and nothing now preventing us, we pursued our journey with all the speed we could Thankful was I that I had sent on Azeema in her cart, she was far beyond the scene of violence which had happened, and of which she must have guessed the cause had she been within hearing, but the driver of her cart had hurried on, and we had travelled some coss ere we overtook her Strange, sahib, that after that day Surfuraz Khan was no longer the light-hearted, merry being he had used to He was no novice at his work, hundreds of human beings, both male and female, had died under his hand, but from the hour he killed the slave he was an altered being he used to sit in silent, moody abstraction, his eyes gazing on vacancy, and when we rallied him upon it, his only reply was a melancholy smile, as he shook his nead, and declared that his spirit was gone, his eyes too would on these occasions sometimes fill with tears, and sighs enough to break his heart would escape from him

He accompanied us to our home, got his share of the booty, which he immediately distributed among the poorer members of the band, and after bidding us a melancholy farowell, stripped himself of all his clothes, covered his body with ashes, and went forth into the rudo world to bear its buffets and scorn in the guise of a falcer

I heard, years afterwards, that he returned to the spot where he had killed the gut, constructed a but by the road side, and ministored to the wants of travellers in that wild region where his only companions must have been the bear the tiger and the welf. nover saw him again after he parted from us, and many among us regretted his absence and his during skill and bravery in the expeditions in which we afterwards engaged his place was never filled amoug us.

I have no more adventures of this expedition to relate to you we reached our home in due course without any accident or interruption and who will not say that we enjoyed its quiet sweets, and apprecated them the more after our long absence and the excitement and perils of our journey? I was completely happy secure in the increasing love and affection of Azeema, whose sweet disposition developed itself more and more every day I was raised to a high rank among my associates, for what I had achieved was duly related to those who had stayed in our village, and to others who had been out on small expeditions about the country and the immense booty we had acquired, and my father's well known determination to retire from active life pointed me out as a leader of great fortune, and one to whom many would be glad to entrust themselves in any subsequent expedition, as I appeared to be an especial favourite of our patroness.

The return of Hoosens party about two months after we had arrived, was an event of great rejoicing to us all when they reached our village. As we had agreed beforehand, at our separation, the whole of the proceeds of the expeditions of both parties were put into one, for general distribution, and on a day appointed it took place. Sahib, you will hardly believe it when I tell you that the whole amounted to very nearly a lakh of rupees.

It was carried by general acclamation that I should share as a jamadar and according to the rules of our band I received one-eighth of the whole. Bhudrmath and Surfuras Khan received what I did but the latter only of such portion as we had won since he joined I forget how much it was, but, as I have told you, he divided it among the poorer members of the band and having apparently stayed with us only for this purpose, he left us immediately as I have before mentioned.

Upon the sum I had thus acquired I lived peacefully two years. I longed often to go out on small expeditions about the country but my father would not hear of it.

"What is the use?" he would say "You have ample means of subsistence for two years to come, my wealth you know is also large, and until we find the supply running short, why should you risk life in an attempt to gain more riches, which you do not need?"

But my spurt sorely rebelled against leading such an inactive and inglorious life, and every deed I heard of only made me more impatient to cast off the sloth which I feared would gain hold on me, and to mingle once more in the exciting and daring exploits of my profession

Still I was fond of my home Azeema had presented me with a lovely boy, who was the pilde of my existence, and about the time I am speaking of I expected another addition to my family. I had already seen two seasons for departure pass, and a third was close at hand, but I suffered this also to elapse in mactivity, although I was repeatedly and strongly urged by Bhudrinath and others to try my fortune and head another band to penetrate into Bengal, where we were assured of ample employment and success

But much as I wished to accompany them, my father still objected something had impressed him with an idea that the expedition would be unfortunate, and so in truth it turned out gang under several leaders set out from our village at the usual time, but the omens, although not absolutely bad, were not very encouraging, and this had a dire effect on the whole not proceeded far when jealousies and quariels sprung up among the several leaders, they separated from each other and pursued different ways One by one they returned disappointed with their expedition, having gained very little booty, scarcely sufficient to support them for the remainder of the year But one party was never heard of more, it consisted of my poor friend Bhudrinath and six noble fellows he had taken with him Years afterwards we heard his fate he had gone down into Bengal, had visited Calcutta, and up to that period had been most successful, but there his men dissipated their gains in debauchery, and they set out on their return with barely sufficient to carry them a few marches

They had nearly reached Benares, when, absolute starvation staring them in the face, they attacked some travellers, and, as they thought, killed them. They neglected, however, to bury their victims, and one, who was not dead, revived the gave information to the inhabitants of the nearest village. My poor friends were overtaken, seized, the property they had about them immediately recognised, and the evidence given by the survivor of the party they had attacked was convincing. What could oppose this? The law had its course, and they were tried and hung

Ameer Alı here stopped in his narrative, and promising to resume

it in a few days, he requested permission to withdraw and making his usual salam departed

A strange page in the book of human life is this! thought I, as he left the room. That man, the perpetrator of so many hundred murders, thinks on the past with satisfaction and pleasure may he takes a pride in recalling the events of his life, almost every one of which is a murder and glories in describing the ministest particulars of his victims, and the share he had in their destruction with scarcely a symptom of remorse! Once or twice only has he winced while telling his fearful story and what against all his most at the commencement of his tale I have yet to hear

With almost only that exception, his spirit has seemed to ruse with the relation of the past and his own native elequence at times, when warmed with his tale and under the influence of his vivid imagination and faithful memory has been worthy of a better pen and a more able translator than I am. But let this pass I repeat, it is a strange and horrible page in the varied record of humanity Murderers there have been in every country under heaven, from the time of Cain to the present,-murderers from hate, from revenge, from pollousy from fear from the instigation of any and every ovil passion of our nature but a murderers life has over been depicted as one of constant misery—the worm that duth not, the agony and repreach of a guilty conscience gnawing at the heart, corroding and blasting every enjoyment of life, and either causing its wretched victim to end his existence by suicide, to deliver himself up to justice, or to be worn down by mental suffering-a more dreadful fate perhaps than the others. Such are the descriptions we have heard and rend of murderers but these Thugs are unlike any others. No remorse seems to possess their souls. In the wearmess of perpetual impresonment one would think their imaginations and recollections of the past would be insupportable to them but, no they est, drink, and sleep like others, are solicitous about their dress, ever ready to talk over the past, and would, if released to-morrow again follow their dreadful profession with a fresh xest after their temporary preclusion from it. Strange too, that Hindoo and Moslem, of every sect and denomination, should join with one accord in the superstation from which this horrible trade has arisen. In the Hindoo perhaps it is not to be wondered at as the goddess who protects him as one whom all costes regard with reverence and hold in the utmost dread but as for the Moslem, unless his conduct springs from that terrible doctrine of fatalism, with which every true believer is thoroughly imbued from the first dawn of his reason, it is difficult to assign a reason for the horrible pursuit he has engaged in. His Koran denounces murderers. Blood for blood, an eye for an eye, and a tooth for a tooth, is the doctrine of his Prophet, which he trembles at while he believes And Ameer Ali is a Bhula Admee, even in the eyes of his jailers, a respectable man, a religious man, one who from his youth up has said his namaz five times a day, is most devout in his life and conduct, is most particular in his ablutions, keeps the fast of the Ramzan and every saint's day in his calendar, dresses in green clothes in the Mohorum, and beats his breast and tears his hair as a good synd of Hindostan ought to do, in short, he performs the thousand and one ceremonies of his religion, and believes himself as sure of heaven and all the hours promised there as he now is of a good dinner

And yet Ameer Alı is a murderer, one before whom every murderer of the known world, in times past or present (except perhaps some of his own profession), the Free Bands of Germany, the Lanzknechts, the Banditti, Condottieri of Italy, the Buccaneers and Pirates, and in our own time the fraternity of Burkes and Hares (a degenerate system of Thuggee, by the bye, at which Ameer Ali, when I told him of them, laughed heartily, and said they were sad bunglers), must be counted men of small account

Reader, these thoughts were passing in my mind, when at last I cried aloud, "Pshaw! 'tis vain to attempt to account for it, but Thuggee seems to be the offspring of fatalism and superstition, cherished and perfected by the wildest excitement that ever urged human beings to deeds at which humanity shudders"

"Did Khodawund call?" said a bearer, who had gradually nodded to sleep as he was pulling the punkah above my head, and who was roused by my exclamation "Did the sahib call?"

"No, Boodun, I did not, but since you are awake, bid some one bring me a chilum My nerves require to be composed."

CHAPTER XXV

He is a man, take him for all in all, I shall not look upon his like again

Hamlet, Act 1, Scene 2

At the expiration of a week, Ameer Ali sent word to me that he was ready to resume his narrative, and I lost no time in requesting him to repair to my residence He arrived, and making his usual graceful obeisance, I desired him to be seated

The reader will perhaps like to know something of the appearance of the man with whom he and I have had these long conversations, and no longer to keep him in the dark on so important a subject, I will describe Ameer Ali to him. He is what would be called a short man, about five foot seven inches in height his figure is now alender which may be the effect of his long imprisonment, -impri sonment it can hardly he called, except that to one of his formerly free and unrestrained habits and pursuits the smallest restraint must of course be irksome in the highest degree and painful to boar His age may be about forty or forty five years but it sits lightly on him for a native of India, and it has not in the least whitened a board and mustachies on which he evidently expends great care and pains, and which are always trimmed and curled with the greatest neatness. His figure, as I have said, is slight, but it is in the highest degree compact, agile, and muscular and his arms are remarkable for the latter quality combined with un usual length and smewyness. His dress is always sorupulously neat and clean, and put on with more attention to effect than is usual with his brother approvers, his turban being always tied with a smart cock, and his waist tightly girded with an English shawl or a mily dyed handkerchief, where once a shawl of Cashmere or a handkerchief of brocade was better suited to his pretensions. complexion he is fair for a native his face is even now strikingly handsome and leads me to believe that the accounts of his youthful appearance have not been exaggerated. His forehead is high and broad; his eyes large, sparkling and very expressive, especially when his eloquence kindles and bursts forth in a torrent of figure two language, which it would be impossible to render into English, or if it were rendered, would appear to the English render unused to such forms of speech, highly exaggerated and absurd; his cheeks are somewhat sunken, but his nose is aquiline and elegantly formed, and his mouth small and beautifully chiselled, and his teeth are exquisitely white and even his upper hip is graced with a pair of small mustachies, which would be the envy of many a gay heutement of hussars while a beard close and wavy from which a straggling hair is never suffered to escape, descends nearly to his breast, and hides a throat and neck which would be a study for a painter or a sculptor to complete all, his chest is very broad and prominent, and well contrasts with the effect of his small waist.

His manner is graceful, bland and polite,—it is indeed more than gentlemanlike—it is courtly and I have not seen it equalled even by the Mahomedan noblemen, with many of whom I have associated. Any of my readers who may have been in India, and become acquainted with its nobles and men of rank, will estimate at once how high is the meed of praise on this score which I give to Ameer Allis language is pure and fluent, perhaps a little affected from his knowledge of Perman, which, though slight, is sufficient to enable him to introduce words and expressions in that language, often when they are not needed, but still it is pure Oerdoo he prides himself upon it and holds in supreme contempt those who speak the corrupt pitois of the Dukhun, or the still worse one of Hindostan Altogether Ameer Ali is a chiracter, and a man of immense importance in his own opinion and that of every one else, and the swagger which he has now adopted in his gait, but which is evidently foreign to him, does not sit amiss on his now reduced condition

Reader, if you can embody these descriptions, you have Ameer Ah before you, and while you gaze on the picture in your imagination and look on the mild and expressive face you may have fancied, you, as I was, would be the last person to think that he was a professed murderer, and one who in the course of his life has committed upwards of seven hundred murders. I mean by this, that he has been actively and personally engaged in the destruction of that number of human beings

Now, Ameer Ali, said I, since I have finished describing your appearance, I hope you are ready to contribute more to the stock of adventures you have already related

Your slave is ready, salib, he replied, and Inshalla Ta-alla! he will not disappoint you. But why has my lord described my poor appearance, which is now miserable enough? Might your slave ask what you have written? and the tone of his voice implied that he had concluded it could not be favourable.

Listen, said I, and I will read it to you. At every sentence the expression of his face brightened. When I had concluded, he said,

It is a faithful picture, such as I behold myself when I look in a glass. You have omitted nothing, even to the most trifling particulars, nay, I may even say my lord has flattered me, and he arose and made a profound salam

No, said I, I have not flattered your external appearance, which is prepossessing, but of your heart I fear those who read will judge for themselves, and their opinions will not be such as you could wish, but such as you deserve

You think my heart bad then, salub?

Certainly I do

But it is not so, he continued Have I not ever been a kind husband and a faithful friend? Did I not love my children and wife while He who is above spared them to me? and do I not even now bitterly mourn their deaths? Where is the man existing who can say a word against Ameer Ali's honour, which ever has been and ever will remain pure and unsullied? Have I ever broken a social tie? ever been unfaithful or unkind to a comrade? ever failed in my duty or in my trust? ever neglected a rite or ceremony of my religion? I tell you, salib, the man breathes not who could point his finger at me on any one of these points. And if you think on them, they are those which, if rigidly kept, gen for a man cateem and honour in the world.

But the soven hundred murders, Ameer Ali, what can you say to them? They make a fearful balance against you in the other scale.

Ahl those are a different matter said the Thug laughing quite a different matter I can never persuade you that I was fully anthorized to commit them, and only a humble instrument in the hands of Alla. Did I kill one of those persons? No; it was He! Had my roomal been a thousand times thrown about their necks and the strength of an elephant in my arms, could I have done aught, would they have died, without it was His will? I tell you, sahib, they would not, they could not? but as I shall never be able to per snade you to think otherwise, and, as it is not respectful in me to bandy words with my lord, I think it is time for me to recommence my tale, if he is roady to listen, for I have still much to relate. I have been so minute in the particulars of my first expedition, that perhaps I need not make the narrative of the other events of my life so prolix indeed were I to do so, you, sahib, would be tired of writing and your countrymen of roading for it would be an almost endless task to follow me in overy expedition I undertook. I shall, therefore, with your permission, confine myself to the narration of those which I think will most interest you, and which I remember to possess remarkable incidents.

o possess remarkable incidents. Go on, said I I listen.

Well then said the Thug Khodawund must remember that I told hum I passed over three expeditions, and that I had partly determined to go on the third. It is of that expedition I would now speak, as it was marked by an extraordinary circumstance, which will show you at once that it is impossible for any one to avoid his fate if it be the will of Alla that he should die.

At the time I speak of I had been obliged to form another set of intimates in consequence of the loss of Bhudrnath and Surfuras Khan, for both of whom I had the sincerest regard. Hoosein, though I loved and revered him as my father's dearest friend, was now too old and grave to participate in all my thoughts and perhaps wild aspirations for distanction. So, as Peer Khan and Motes-ram, with whose names you are familiar had now risen to my own rank, and proved themselves to be "good men and true" in various expeditions, I took them into my confidence, and we planfied an enterprise, of which I was to be the leader and they my subordinates. Fifty of the youngest, stoutest, and most active and enterprising of our acquaintance were fixed on as the band; and all having been proviously warned, we met a few days before the Dissers of the year 18— in a grove near our village, which was shady and well adapted for large assemblies, and was always used as a place of meeting and deliberation, it was considered a lucky spot, no unfortunate expedition ever having set out from it

We were all assembled It was a lovely morning, and the grass, as yet not even browned by the sun and drought, was as if a soft and beautiful carpet had been spread on purpose for us rounding fields, many of them tilled by our own hands, waved in gieen luxurance, and the wind as it passed over them in gentle gusts caused each stalk of tall jowaree to be agitated, while the sun shining brightly made the whole glitter so that it was almost painful to look on for a continuance Birds sang in the lofty banian trees which overshadowed us, hundreds of given parroquets spoited and screamed in their branches, as they flew from bough to bough, some in apparent sport, others to feed on the now ripening be ries of the trees, and the whole grove resounded with the cooing of innumerable turtle-doves, whose gentle and loving murmurs soothed the turbulence of the heart, and bade it be at peace and rest and as happy as they were

My father and Hoosem were present to guide us by their counsels and experience, and the matter in hand was commenced by a sacrifice and invocation to Bhowanee, but as I have before described these ceremonies, it is needless to repeat them, suffice it to say that the omens were taken and were favourable in the highest degree, they assured us, and though I had little faith in them notwithstanding all I had heard to convince me of their necessity, they inspirited the whole band, and I partook of the general hilarity

consequent upon them

My father opened the object of the meeting in a short address. He said he was old and no longer fitted for the fatigues and privations of a journey, he recapitulated all I had done on the former expedition, pointed out the various instances in which I had displayed activity, daring, and prudence beyond my years, and concluded by imploring the men to place implicit confidence in me, to obey me in all things as though he himself were present, and above all not to give way to any disposition to quarrel among themselves, which would infallibly lead to the same disastrous results as had overtaken the expedition which had gone out the previous year

They one and all rose after this address, and by mutual consent swore on the sacred pickaxe to obey me, the most impressive oath they could take, and any deviation from which they all firmly believed would draw down the vengeance of our protectress upon them and lead to then destruction

I will not occupy your time, sahib, by a narration of what I myself said, suffice it to say, I proposed that the band should take the high road to the Dukhun, and penetrate as far as Jubbulpoor or Nagpoor; from thence we would take a direction eastward or westward, as hope of booty effered, and so return to our home. Khan doeh I mentioned, as being but little known to us Thugs and where I thought it likely we might meet with good booty as I had heard that the traders of Bombay were in the labit of sending large quantities of treasure to their correspondents in Malwa for the purchase of opium and other products of that district. I concluded by assuring them that I had a strong presentient of great success, that I felt confidence in myself, and that if they would only follow me faithfully and truly we might return in a few menths as well laden with spoil as we had on the former occasion.

Again they rose and pledged their faith and truly it was a solemn aight to see those determined men nerve themselves for an outorpriso which might end happily but which exposed them to fearful risk of detection, dishonour and death.

CHAPTER XXVL

AMERICALI STARTS ON A NEW EXPEDITION THE ADVENTURES HE MESTS WITH

Our meeting broke up, and I returned to prepare Axeoma for my departure. I had invented a tale to excuse my absence. I told his that the money which I had gained on my mercantile expedition to the Dukhun was now nearly expended and although, in her scorety and in the enjoyment of happiness such as I had never hoped for I had been hitherto unwilling to leave my home, yet I could delay to do so no longer without absolute runs faring us in the face. I added, that my father had placed a sum of money at my disposal for the purposes of trade with which, if I met with the success I had reasonable ground to hope for from the letters of my correspondents at Nagpoor and other places, I could not fail of realizing a handsoma profit—enough to allow us another continued enjoyment of peace and affiltence.

Long and vamly she strove to overrule my determination, pointed out the dangers of the road, the raiss to which I should be needs asily exposed, the pain my absence would cause to her both finding these were of no avail, as I told her my plans had been long laid, and that I was even now expected at Sangor where my agents had collected the horses I was to take for sale, she implored me to take her and our children with me, adding that travelling was a matter of no difficulty to her and that the children would empty the change of scene and the bustle and novelty of the camp

But this also I overruled. It would have been impossible to take her, not to mention the expense of her travelling-carriage, and at last, after much pleading and objections of the description I have mentioned, she consented to remain, and placing her under my father's care on the morning we were to depart, I took an affectionate farewell of her—Many were the charms and amulets she bound about my arms and hung round my neck, which she had purchased from various wandering fakeers and holy moollas, and with streaming eyes she placed my hands upon the heads of my children and bade me bless them—I did so fervently and truly, for I loved them, sahib, with a love as intense as were the other passions of my nature

At last I left her Leaving one's home is never agreeable, often painful, for the mind is oppressed with indistinct visions of distress to those one leaves behind, and is too prone to imagine sources from which it might spring, though in reality they exist not. It was thus with me, but the appearance of my gallant band, as they greeted my arrival among them with a hearty shout, soon dispelled my vague apprehensions, and my spirit rose when I found myself in the condition which had been the object of many a fervent aspiration. I was my own master, with men willing to obey me, and, Inshalla' I exclaimed to myself, now Ameer Ali's star is in the ascendant, and long will it gleam in brightness!

I have told you of the ceremonies which immediately preceded our departure on a former occasion, of course they were repeated on this, the omens were again declared to be favourable by Motee-ram, who was our standard-bearer and director of all our ceremonies, as Bhudrinath had been, and we proceeded, accompanied for some coss by my father and Hoosein, who stored my mind with the results of their long experience. Among other things both particularly urged me to avoid the destruction of women

"In olden times," said my father, "they were always spared, even parties in which there might by chance be any, although in other respects good bunij, were abandoned on their account, as, our patroness being a female, the destruction of her sex was considered obnoxious to her, and avoided on every occasion. Moreover, men are the only fit prey for men, no soldier wars with women, no man of honour would lift a finger against them, and you of all, my son, who have a beauteous wife of your own, will be the last to offer violence to any of her sex."

"Rely upon me that I will not," said I, "I was, as you know, strongly against the fate of the unhappy women who died on my first expedition, and, you will remember, I had no hand in their deaths; but I was overruled in my objections, first by Bhudrinath and afterwards by Surfuraz Khan, and what could I do? And it would be terrible indeed to think that the distresses of their party and the unknown fate of poor Bhudrinath were owing to the tardy but too sure venerance of our patroness.

It may be so, said my father; "but let not that prey on your mind; both myself and Hoosen have Lilled many a woman in our time, and, as you know no ill effects have resulted from it. But bear in mind what I have said not with wisdom and discretion, and above all pay implied attention to the omens and your success and protection are sure."

We rode on, conversing thus, and when we arrived at the boundary stone of our village, we dismounted and embraced each other and

I left them and rode on with my men.

According to our rules, no one was to shave or cet pan until our first victum fell and as this was a matter of meonvenience to many of the men, you may be sure we had our eyes in all directions and our scouts well occupied in every village we passed through or helicid at. But it was not till the fifth day that we met with any one who effered a secure and in every way eligible sacrifice. We had fallon in with bands of travellers, some going to and others departing from their homes, but they had invariably women in their company and them I was determined to spare, as well for my wife s sake as from the infunctions of my father.

However as I have said, on the fifth day early in the morning we came to a cross-road, and were glad to see a party of mine travellers, three upon ponies, having the appearance of respectable men, and the rest on foot, coming up the road a short distance from To our great joy they struck into the road we were about to take We had halted in pretended indecision as to the road, and when they come up we asked it of them. They readily pointed to the one before us, and although expressing themselves astonished at our numbers, they agreed to accompany us to the village where we proposed to halt, and the road to which we had inquired of them. I soon entered into conversation with the most respectable of their party and I replied, in answer to his inquiries, that we were soldiers, proceeding after our leave to Hindorfan, to Nagpoor where we were in service. He told me in return, that he and his brother one of the two others mounted, with a friend and some attendants, were on a travelling expedition that they had come from Indoor and were going to Benares, as well for the purchase of cloths and brocades, as to vist that sacred place of Hindoo pilgrimage.

Ho, ho I thought I, these are assuredly men of consequence going in disguase, and I have no doubt are well furnished with ready cash. No time must be lost, as they have come by a cross-road, and have not been seen in our company; there can consequently be no truck by which we could possibly be suspected on their disappearance so the soomer they are dealt with the better. To this and I lagged behind a little, and imparted my determination to Peer Khan, who rode in the rear of all, by him it was told to another, and thus it circulated throughout the band before we had gone far I was gratified and delighted to see how, as they became aware of what was to be done, each took his station, three Thugs to each traveller, and the rest disposed themselves round the whole, so as to prevent any possibility of escape

I iemembered the road well, for it was that upon which we had travelled before, and what Thug ever forgets a road? I knew also that, although the country around us was open and bare, there was a river not far off, the sandy bed of which was full of the wild cypress, and the bodies could be easily disposed of in the brushwood

When we arrived at the brink of the river, the man I had continued to converse with begged for a short halt

"We have been travelling since midnight," said he, "and I for one am well tired, and should be glad of rest "

I made no objection, of course, for it was the very thing I wished, and dismounting, and leading my house to the water, I allowed him to drink, and then joined the party, which had all collected, and were now seated the travellers discussing a hasty meal they had brought with them, and the Thugs sitting or standing around them, but all in their proper places

I was on the point of giving the jhirnee, and I saw the bhuttotes handling their roomals in a significant manner, when, thanks to my quick sense of hearing, I distinguished voices at a distance. It was well for us that I had not given the signal, we should have been busily engaged in stripping the bodies when the party I had heard would have come upon us. Of course they would have seen at a glance what we were about, and have taken the alarm. But our good destiny saved us. I hesitated, as I have said, and in a few minutes fourteen travellers made their appearance, and came directly up to where we were sitting. They were persons of all descriptions, who had associated for mutual protection, and I had half determined to destroy them also, which I think we could have done, when they relieved me greatly by taking their departure, wishing us success and a pleasant and safe journey.

On one pretence or another I delayed our associates until the other party had proceeded far beyond the risk of hearing any noise, should there be any, and now, seeing everything ripe for the purpose, I called out for some tobacco, the word we had agreed to use, as being least likely to attract attention or inspire suspicion. I had planted myself behind the man I had been speaking to, and as I spoke my handkerchief was thrown. Three years' rest had not affected the sureness of my hold, and he lay a corpse at my feet in an instant. My work was done, and I looked around to see the fate of the rest; one poor wretch alone struggled, but his sufferings were quickly ended, and the party was no more.

"Quick, my lads | cried I to the lughaces, quick about your work! One of them granued.

Why said he, did you not observe Doolum and four others go away to you brushwood when we reached this spot? Depend upon it they have the grave ready or they have been idle dogs.

And it was even so the grave had been dug while the unsuspecting travellers sat and conversed with us.

We were so busily engaged in stripping the dead, that no one observed the approach of two travellers, who had come upon us unawares. Never shall I forget their horror when they saw our cocupation; they were rooted to the spot from extreme terror they spoke not, but their eyes glared wildly as they guzed now at us and now at the dead.

"Miserable men, said I, approaching them, "prepare for death!
You have been witnesses of our work, and we have no resource but your destruction for our own preservation."

"Sahib, said one of them, collecting his energies, "we are men, and fear not to die since our hour is come " and he drew himself up proudly and gazed at me. He was a tall, powerful man, well armed, and I hesitated to attack him.

I give you one alternative," said I become a Thug and join our band-you shall be well cared for and you will prosper

Never! he exclaimed "never shall it be said that Tiluk Singh, the descendant of a noble race of rulpoots, herded with mur derers, and lived on their unblessed gams! No if I am to de let it be now! Ye are many but if one among you is a man, let him step forward, and here on this even said I will strike one blow for my deliverance and he drew his sword, and stood on the defensive.

"I am that man, cried I, though the band with one voice earnestly dissuaded me from the encounter and declared that he was more than a match for me "I am that man. Now take your last look on the heavens and the earth, for by Alla! you never qui this spot!"

Come on, boasting boy l he exclaimed; "give me but fair play and but none of your people interfere, and it may not be as you say " you say "

"Hear all of you "creed I to them, "meddle not in this matter
.... tus mine and mine only As for the other deal with him as yo list " and in an instant more he was numbered with the dead.

"These are your cowardly tricks," cried the rappost, now advancing on me, for he had stood contemplating the fate of his companion "my end may follow his; but I shall due the death of a soldier and not that of a mangy dog as he has done.

I have before told you, sahib, that my skill in the use of every weapon was perfect, thanks to my good instructor, and I had never relaxed in those manly exercises which fit a man for active combat whenever he shall be called into it. My sword was the one Nuwab Subzee Khan had so much admired, and I felt the confidence of a man when he has a trusty weapon in his hand and knows how to wield it.

I have said that the rapport advanced on me He had no shield, which gave me an immense advantage, but the odds were in his favour from his height and strength, yet these are a poor defence against skill and temper

He assailed me with all his force and fury, blow after blow I caught on my sword and shield, without striking one myself, he danced round me after the fashion of his people, and now on one leg, now on the other, he made wild gyrations, and at intervals rushed upon me, and literally rained his blows at my person, but I stood fixed to the spot, for I knew how soon this mode of attack must exhaust him, and the loose sand of the river added to his fatigue

At length he stood still and glaied on me, panting for breath "Dog of a kafir!" cried he, "son of an unchaste mother, will nothing provoke thee to guit that spot?"

"Kafir!" I exclaimed, "and son of a kafir, thy base words have sealed thy fate," and I rushed on him He was unprepared for my attack, made a feeble and uncertain blow at me, which I caught on my shield, and the next instant my sword had buried itself deep in his neck He fell, and the blood gushed from the wound and from his mouth

"Shookur Khoda!" exclaimed Peer Khan, "you have settled his business nobly, let me embrace thee," and he folded me in his arms

The rajpoot was not dead he had sufficient strength remaining to raise himself up on his arm, and he looked at me like a devil. He made many attempts to speak his lips moved, but no sound followed, as the blood prevented utterance

"Some of you put him out of his pain," said I, "the man behaved well, and ought not to suffer"

Peer Khan took my sword and passed it through his heart, he writhed for an instant, and the breath left his body

"Away with him!" cried I, "we have loitered too long already"

The lughaees took him by his legs and arms, to avoid his blood, and carried him away, others strewed a quantity of dry sand over the spot where he had fallen, and in a few minutes more we were pursuing our way as if nothing had happened

After this proof of my personal courage and skill, I may safely say I was almost adored by the whole band. They all assured me that a Thug having killed a traveller and a soldier in fair open combat was an unprocedented circumstance, and only required to be known to make me the envy of old and young and I gloried in what I had done their praise was sweet income to my vanity

The booty we got from the merchant and his brother was rich, and was of itself a fair amount of booty for any expedition. Some were even for turning back, but they were only two or three voices, and were coally overruled

It would be a shame, I said, "if while fortune favoured us we did not take advantage of our good luck.

Sahib, we continued our march, and when we had reached Sauger we had killed nineteen other travellers without, however laying obtained much plander ten fifteen, and on one occasion only nearly a hundred rupees, were as much as any of them afforded us

The town of Sauger was, and is now a large and busy place, built on the edge of an immense lake, nearly as large as that of the Hoosean Sagor The cooling breases which travel over it make it a delightful spot. We encamped on the border of the lake near the town.

For the four days we remained there, we daily perimbulated the bearars, and frequented the shops of bluttoans, one of whom was well known to Peer Khan, and whom we paid handsomely for information. He promised to be on the look out for us, and on the third day after our arrival, Peer Khan came to me in the evening as I sat before the entrance of my little tent, smoking and emprying the delightful breeze which came over the vast sheet of water spread before me.

Meer Sahib," said he, "the bhutteers is faithful he has get news of a schoular going our road, who is to leave this place in about a week he says we are certain of him, but that we must quit this spot, and march about within a few coss of the town, leaving two or three men with him to carry information.

"Ul hund ul illa! cried I, he is a worthy man. We will have to his advice, and be off to morrow early. Three of the best runners shall stay here as he counsels to bring us the news.

"But he stipulates for a large reward in case we are successful."

I see nothing against it," said I; "he will be worthy of it if he is true to his word."

"Oh, for that you need not fear he is faithful so long as you pay him

Then he shall have it. How much does he want?

Two hundred rupees if we get five thousand," he replied "double, if we get ten and in proportion if between one and the other

"If the schoular is rich, Khan, said I, we can well spare what he asks so go and tell him he shall have it.

"UI humd ul illa!" I exclaimed; "so much the better And he will be a good buny you think?

"He will be worth seven or eight thousand good rupees to you, said the bhuttearn and all sugd (ready money) too.

and the bhuttern and all saga (ready money) too.

"Good again friend; but why do you not take to the read?

You are a likely follow enough.

"Oh, I have tried it already said he laughing "I was out on two expeditions with Ganesha Jamadar Do you know him?"

"I have heard of him." I replied "he is a leader of note."

"Ho w," said the bhuttern but he is a cruel dog and to tell the truth,—I fear you will think me a coward for it,—I did not like the way he treated the poor people he fell in with, so I quited active work, and only do a little business as you see now by which I nick me a trile now and then."

"Well, said I, "you do good it appears; but beware how you act, and see that you do not bully poor Thugs out of their money

by threatening to denounce them

The fellow winced a little at my observation, but recovering him solf he stoutly protested he had nover been guilty of so base an act.

Peer Khan threw me a sly look, as much as to say you have hit the right nail on the head but I did not press the matter further for we were completely in his power

Then, said I "we start in the morning I suppose ?

"Do so," replied the man the schoular goes to Jubbulpoor It would be as well not to show yourselves for some days, as he might take the slarm and some people of note have disappeared of late on the road."

"Now said I to Peer Khan, "we have no further business here, and I am tired let us go to the camp. We can send two scouts to remain here, to give us intelligence of the schooker s departure of necessary

The men were instructed in what they had to do, and we left them and the bhuttears.

"You probed that ruscal deeply by what you said, said Peer Khan as we walked along "it is the very practice by which be gots his money the fellow is as rich as a sahoukar by this means, and never omits to levy a contribution on every gang which passes Sangor"

"Then," said I, "my mind is made up as to his fate. Such a wretch is not fit to hve—a cowardly rascal, who sits at his case, runs no risk, undergoes no fatigue, and yet gets the largest share of any one. He ought to die. What say you to putting him to death?"

"It is a rare plan," replied he but how to get him out of the town I know not he is as wary as a fox.

"Oh," said I, "that is more easily managed than you think The kafir is fond of money?"

"As fond as he is of his own miserable existence"

"Then, Peer Khan, we have him Directly we get to the camp I will send a man with a message, which you shall hear me deliver. and if it does not bring him, call Ameer Ali a father and grandfather of rackasses"

"Good," said he laughing; "we will see this rare plan of yours, but I tell you the villain is most wary I never knew him come out except in broad daylight, when there was no danger, and then only to small parties"

"Here, Junglee," said I to a smart young fellow who always attended my person, "you know Perso, the bhutteara"

"Certainly, my lord was with him this afternoon I know his house, for I was in the bazar purchasing some flour, and saw my lord at the shop "

"Good," said I, "then you will have no need to inquire for it Now go to the bhutteara, and take my seal-ring with you mind you don't let it go out of your hand, tell him, with many compliments from me, that as we are so sure by his kindness of the bunij in prospect, and have some money with us, I will pay him what he asks, if he will come here to receive it Say that I do so as our return by this road is uncertain and may be at a distant period, and that I shall have no means of sending him the coin, and add, that I do this favour to him, as I am convinced of his good faith, and have placed implicit reliance in his assertions. Now, can you remember all this? Mind you speak to him in Ramasee,—he understands it "

"Certainly," said the lad, "I know all" And he repeated

what I had told him word for word

"That will do," said I, "and here is the ring Now be off, run, fly, and let us see how soon you will earn two rupees"

"I am gone, Jemadar Sahib," cried he joyfully "I will be back instantly'

"That is a sharp lad," said Peer Khan, "he takes one's meaning so readily But oh, Meer Sahib, Peroo will never come for that message, he is too old a bird to be caught with chaff!"

"Depend on it he will, he will hear the tinkling of the silver, and will run to it as ever lover did to his mistress's signal Besides he has no chaff in prospect, but rupees, man, rupees The fellow would run to Dehli for as much "

"We shall see," said Peer Khan "If it be written in his fate that he is to come, why, Alla help him come he must, there is no avoiding destiny What! Peroo the bhutteara come out of his house at night to visit Thugs! I say the thing is impossible, it has often been tried, and failed uttorly the follow laughed at them, as well he might.

"For all your doubte, Khan, said I, "Inshalla! we will throw earth on his beard to-night and as we may as well be ready call Moteo and two or three legislacos the grave must be dug and that immediately"

Motee came, but was as desponding of success as Peer Khan.

"You will never take him, he said "did not Ganesha offer to divide a large booty here last year and that Perco should have a share if he would come to take it? and he sent word that he harghed at our beards, and we had better leave his share in the hollow of an old tree known to us or he would send the whole police of Saugor after us in the morning

"And so you left the share?"

"We did, and it was a good one too"

"Then Ganesha was an owl, and I will tell him so if I over meet him. Peroo should not have had a course from mee nor will he now unless he comes to take it.

We were silent for some time, and I could hear the dull blows of the pickare, as the sound was borne by the chill night-wird from the place where the grave was preparing. Ho will come, thought I, and his iniquity will be ended shame on the cold blooded coward who can sell men a lives as he does, without striking a blow against them I As I was thus maxing our messenger was seen, in the dusky light, returning at the top of his speed, and alone. We told you so! cred both my associates triumphantly we told you how it would be!

I was vered, and but my hips to conceal my chagrin. Let us hear what he says at any rate, said I.

"Well, what news, Junglee? cried I, as he ran up quite out of breath.

West a moment, Jemadar said ha, "till I can speak I have run hard."

Here, drink some waters it will compose you. What has happened? Is there any alarm?

Ah, no alarm," replied the lad, "but listen. I went as fast as I could without running for I thought if I appeared out of breath when I reached him he might suspect something so when I got to the town gate, I welked alowly till I reached his shop. He was busy frying kabots for some travellers, and told me to go into he private room and wait for him. In a short time he came to me.

"Well, said he, what news? Why have you come? The bung is safe. It was but just now that one of your scents came and said he had heard orders given for his departure to morrow. What do you want P

"So I repeated your message, word for word as you delivered it to me, and he seemed much agitated He walked up and down the 100m for some time, talking to himself, and I could hear the words, 'Ganesha,' 'treachery,' once or twice repeated So at last I grew tired of this, and said to him, 'I cannot wait, I have orders to return immediately will you come or not?' and this stopped him, he turned round and looked at me severely

"'Tell me,' said he, 'young man, was Motee-ram present when this message was delivered?'

"'No, he was not,' I replied

"'Did he know of it?"

"'No, he had not returned from the town when I received it, at any rate, neither I nor the Jemadar Sahib saw him'

"" Was Peer Khan present?"

"'No,' said I stoutly, 'he was not'

"'But he left this place in company with your master'
"He may havedone so,' said I, 'but I did not see him I was preparing the jemadar's bedding when he returned, and the message was delivered to me privately, for after he lay down to rest he called to me and delivered it and I may as well tell you that he counted out the money from a bag which was under his pillow'

"'How much was there set apart for me?'

"'Two hundred and fifty rupees, he was counting more, but he stopped short, put the rest into the bag, and said it would be enough'

"'And how much is in the bag?"

"'Alla knows!' said I, 'how should I know anything about it ?'
"'Who sleep in the tent with the jemadar?' he asked, after another silence and a few more turns about the room

"'No one,' said I 'I sleep across the doorway, but no one is ever allowed to enter'

"'You are a good lad,' he rejoined, 'and a smart fellow should you like to be a bhutteara?'

"'Well enough,' said I, for I wanted to see what he was diving at,

and I suspected no good "

"Did you ever hear of such a rascal?" said Peer Khan if we only had him, I would wring the base neck off his shoulders"
"Let him go on," said I, "don't interrupt him"

"Well," continued Junglee, "he paced to and fro again several times, and at last came and sat by me, and took my hand in his did not like it, so I laid my other on the hilt of my dagger, which was concealed in my waistband

"'Junglee,' said he to me, 'thou art a good lad, and may be to me a son if thou wilt aid me in this matter Young as thou art, this bloody trade can have no chaims for thee, besides I'll warrant your journdar does not make a pot of you as I would, and obliges you to

I nodded.

"'Ay I at 18 even so, said he, 'and thou wouldst be free? Speak, boy and fear not thou shalt be a son to me. Alla help me! I have nother wife nor child.

"I nodded again.

"'That is right, continued he; 'although you are ill used, you do not like to abuse the salt you have eaten and I like you the better for it. Now listen to me I will come but not now You say you lie at the entrance of the tent? Good! You must sleep as sound as if you had taken optum—do you hear? I shall step quietly over you, and I know an old track of ticking with a straw—do you understand?

" I do said I you would have the large bag'

"Exactly so, my son, said he, you have guessed rightly; trust me, I will have it. As I go away I will touch you you need not follow me then, but you can watch your opportunity

"But the scouts, added I you have not thought of them.
Oh, I can easily avoid them; the night is dark and cloudy and no one will see me. I shall strip myself naked, and throw a black blanket over me.

"Then I scree, said I and I will quit these horrid people

"Then I agree, said I and I will quit those horrid people and become an honest man. Now what am I to say to the romadar ?

Say replied he, that the hordsman s flock had often been robbed by the wolf of its fattest sheep and the hardsman said to himself. I will catch the wolf and put him to death. And he drig a hole, and suspended a fat lamb over it in a beaket, and sat and watched. And the wolf came, and saw from sint off that there was something unusual in the generosity of the herdsman. And he said to himself, Wolf, thou art hungry but why should one lamb tempt thee? The tame will come when thou mayout find the herdsman asleep so wait, although thy stomach is empty. Say this to the jemidar and he will understand thee.

By Alla I thou hast done well, Junglee," said I, "and thy faith fulness shall surely be well rewarded. What think you, my friends, of this villain?

"Ah, we are not astumahed," ened both, "it is just like him but Inahalla! he will fall into his own snare."

"Now said I, "call two of the scouts " and they came.

After I had told them of the plot Peeroo had formed, My frends," I continued, "you must allow this rescal to come into the camp. One of you he down close to my tent, and pretend to be saleep but have your eyes open, and directly you see him enter rouse

Peer Khan and Motee, and bring them to the entrance, and do you two then place yourselves one on each side of the door, so that he cannot see you I shall feign to be asleep, and shall let him take the bag, though he should even fall over me in doing so As he comes out you can seize him and hold him fast, do him no harm till I come And as for you, Junglee, if you do not sleep as sound as though a seer of opium was in your stomach, I swear by Alla you shall lie in the same grave with him!"

"Do not fear me," said the lad, "I have eaten your salt, you are my father and my mother, you have treated me kindly, and how could I deceive you? Had I intended it, I had not mentioned a word of what he told me"

"Then we are all prepared," said I "Did he say when he would

"He did," said Junglee, "in the second watch of the night, when he had no more business"

"Good, then mind you are all leady, and we will spit on his beard."

Anxiously to me did the hours pass, till the time came when I might expect him I went out of my little tent repeatedly to see that all were at their proper posts, and returned as often satisfied that they were Peer Khan was lying near my tent apparently in a sound sleep, but I knew he was awake, the scouts were wandering lazily about, above all, the night was so dark that I could not see my hand before me, and the splashing and murmuring of the tiny waves of the lake upon the shore would prevent any noise of his footsteps being heard "Yes," I said, half aloud, as I retired to my carpet for the last time, "he will come, thief as he is, he will not miss such a night as this but the darkness favours us as much as it does him"

"Now, Junglee," said I, "this is the last time I stir out, mind your watch, my good lad, and I will not forget you Peer Khan is close at the back of the tent I care not much about the rest, they will soon be collected when he is caught"

"Do not fear me," said the boy, "my eyes are not heavy with sleep, and when I move from this spot to call Peer Khan, a rat will not hear me "

I went in and lay down, I drew my trusty blade and laid it close to my right hand, so that I could grasp it in a moment, and covering myself up with my quilt, as well to hide it as to assure me when he came (for I knew he would endeavour to pull it off me), I continued to stare steadfastly on the entrance of the tent, and my eyes becoming sensible of the greater darkness of the inside than that of the outside, I was certain that if any one entered, or even passed the door, I should see him Long, long did I he in this position I hardly stirred, lest Peeroo should be outside listening whether I was awake It was now I guessed, considerably past midnight. 'Still no one came, and I should have been inclined to despair did I not feel certain that his fate would lead him to destruction. Why is it sahib that one has these presentiments? I have often felt them during my lifetime, but I nover could account for tham.

At last he came. I saw an object darken the doorway heatate for a moment, and then pass in over the body of Junglee who snored so loudly and naturally that I could have declared he was asleen. had I not known the contrary by having spoken to him a short time before. Alla! Alla! sahib, how my heart beat! I could hear its thought he would hear them too. Another thought flashed across mo-Could he be armed? and would he attempt to destroy me? It might be and I almost trembled as I thought how I was to he m active and in his power while he abstracted the bag I was on the point of leaping up and passing my weapon through his body but I dismused the idea. He is a third, a miserable third, and has not the courage to bring a weapon, much less to use it; and he will want both his hands too he cannot have one So I lay quiet, with my hands on the hilt of my sword. The tent was very low and he was obliged to advance stooping He reached my aide and knelt down. and as I fearned the hard breathing of sleep, I felt his warm breath when he looked over me and into my eyes to see whether I really alept or not. He appeared satisfied that I did, for he instantly thrust his hand under the pillow but so quietly that I could not have felt it had I been askep. But the bag was not on that side, it was under my other car He felt it, but found, I suppose, that he could not abstract it without his awakening me so he felt about on the ground for a mece of straw or a blade of grass, and began ticklmg my ear on the side next to him I obeyed the intention of the action, and turned towards him with a grunt. It startled him, and he was still for a moment but again his hand was groping I felt the bag recede-recede till it was withdrawn from the pillow heard the clink of the money as he placed it on his shoulder and I was content. I saw too, that Junglee was not at the door (though when he had gone I know not-having been too much occurred by my own attraction) and that the bhuttearn was aware of it. He stopped, and murmured in a low tone, Strange that he should be gone but he knows the way and will not disappoint me. Another step, and he was beyond the threshold, and in the rough grasp of Peer Khan Motee, and a dozen others.

"Capitally managed | cried I, as I ran to the door and joined the group Strike a light, one of you let us see the face of this Boostum among thieves—a fellow who dares to rob a Thug's camp and defy him to his beard.

A light was brought, and there stood the trembling wretch with the bag of supees still on his shoulder, and clutching it as though it were his own

"Ha!" said I, "so it is you, Peeroo, and the wolf who was so wary has fallen into the hands of the shepherds at last he would not take the little bait, but the large flock was well watched, and he has fallen into the trap And now, iascal," I continued, "thou wouldst have robbed us, and dost deserve to die, yet upon thy answers to the questions I will put to thee depends thy life or death"

"Name them, oh name them!" said the wretch "Let me live,— I will set off without delay, I will even accompany you, you may turn me out from among you in the jungle, and if ever my face is seen in Saugoi again or on this road, deal with me as ye list"

"Very good," said I, "now answer the following questions the buny you have promised false?"

"As true as that I breathe Ah, Meer Sahib, have not your men seen the preparations, and will not you hear the same to-morrow from them? How could you doubt it?"

"How much money will you give us to let you go? I want two thousand rupees"

"At Méré Sahib! Méré Sahib!" cried the wretch, "two thousand supees! Where am I to get them? I have not a course in the world" "It is a lie," said Motee and several others, "you have thousands of rupees which you have bullied poor Thugs out of, we could name a hundred instances in which you have taken money from us how dare you deny it?"

"Look here," said I, "here is the roomal, and you know the use of it, say whether you will give the money or not"

"I will give it," said he, "I will swear on the pickaxe to do so, and do you come with me and take it"

"Ay," said I, "and be taken too ourselves! No, no, friend Bhutteara, do not try to throw dust on our beards after that fashion Inshalla! the people who could catch you have sharper wits than you seemed to give them credit for No, man, I was but joking with thee—where is all thy wealth concealed?"

"You may kill me if you will," said he, "but I give no answer to that question"

"Ah, well," cried I, "you may think better of it when you are Now you two hold him fast, and take the bag off his shoulders "

They did so I threw the roomal about his neck, and tightened it till he was almost choked. He made several attempts to speak, and at last I relaxed my hold a little, but he could not utter a word —fear of death had paralysed his powers of utterance

"Give him some water said I, ' it will wash down his fright." He took it, and fell at my feet, and implored me to spare him.

I spurned and kicked him.

"Where is the treasure? I said. "You have felt the tightening of the roomal once, beware how you risk it again. Where is the treasure P Promise to let me live, and I will tell," cried the bhuttearn, trumbling in every limb.

"I will promise," said I, "you shall remain here, and I will send people to bring it. You well know we have no time for delay and if you trille with us you know the result-you have already half felt

"Where is Motee-ram? He knows the spot.

"Laar! I know it not," cried Motee, stopping forward you wish to make me out to be a participator in your base gains?"

You know the spot, continued the bhuttenra, "but you do not know that there is aught there You remember the old hollow man go-tree on the other side of the town, where you left the last share I got from Ganesha ?

I do

"Well, then, you must dig in the hollow of the trunk about a cubit deep you will find all I have-gold, silver and ornaments.

"Now and I, "villain, I have kept my word, you shall remain here the grave is dug which shall hold thee, and has been ready for hours. I swore that I would spit on thy board before morning and Bhowance, whose votaries thou hast bulked and threatened, has delivered thee into my hands." And I spat on him all the men who were near me did the same.

Again, cried I, "hold him fast, and bring the tobacco" He knew the fatal "jhurnee," and struggled to be free but he was a child in the power of those who held him—m an instant more he was dead!

Off with you, Moteo! cried I take ten men and go to the spot he mentioned he may have told the truth, and we shall be the richer for it then will many a man cry Wah! Wah! when he hears of this deed." The body was taken away and burned the grave was smoothed over and benton down, the place plastered over some fireplaces made and fires lighted to blacken them, and our work was conocaled.

Now did not that villain deserve his fate, sahib? To my per ception, his cold blooded work was far worse than our legitimate proceedings and as for his teachery he poul the forfest of it.

It was a fearful revenge, and I but you spoil the justice of it by your vile love of plunder. Why should you have promised him his life, and then have murdered him? that was base

I did not promise it to him I said he should remain where he was, and he did remain—ay, he is there now

It was a nice distinction certainly, Ameer Ali, and only shows the more how little you are to be trusted. But how did you get on afterwards? had he told the truth about his money?

He had, replied the Thug Long before morning Motee returned, and rousing me, poured at my feet a heap of gold and silver coins, necklaces, armlets, bracelets, and anklets They were worth nearly three thousand rupees, and not one article of them was there but had been given him by Thugs Motee, Peer Khan, and others recognised most of the property We melted all the ornaments, and divided the whole at our next stage, and it was a good booty, and enriched us for a long time, indeed I may say it lasted till our return home

And the sahoukar, I asked, was the news true about him?

Oh, quite true, said Ameer Ali, I will tell you of him. We left Saugor early, and at a short distance on the road sat down to eat the goor, as is usual with us after any adventure. While we were thus employed, one of the scouts came up, and told us the joyful news that the sahoukar had left the town, and was close behind us, and that the other, whose name was Bhikaree, had taken service with him as far as Jubbulpoor as attendant, to watch at night while the sahoukar slept

"And how does he travel?" I asked

"He is on a tattoo, a good strong beast," said the scout, "and has two others laden with him, and there are four men besides himself and Blukaree" self and Bhikaree"

"Good," said I "Now, my lads, we must push on, the sahoukar must see nothing of us for some days, and till then I shall avoid all others"

We hastened on, and got to the end of our stage Three days we travelled quietly, and from time to time observed the omens, they were all favourable, and cheered us on On the tourth, as if by accident, we contrived to fall in with the sahoukar and his people, our faithful Bhikaree we rejoiced to see in his train. It was in the road that we met with him, or rather allowed him to overtake us, and the usual salutations passed. I was well dressed and well mounted, and looked a soldier. He inquired our destination and business, to which the old story was answered, and we proceeded merrily along. The sahoukar was a fat, jolly fellow, and witty in his way, and stories were interchanged, and we all laughed heartily at his jokes. It is astonishing, salub, how soon these trifles engender good will and friendship among travellers—the loneliness of the road and the weariness of the stage are forgotten in such pleasant conversation, and before we had reached the end of the stage we were as great friends as though we had travelled together for months, or known each other for years. A kind farewell was interchanged as we parted at the village he to put up inside it in the bazar and we to our old plan of encampment.

To morrow said I to the assembled men, is a good day it is Friday we must finish this business. All were agreed upon it and at midnight the bellas and lughaees went on, the former to choose a spot for the affair and the latter to dig the grave.

At daylight, a man (our Bhikaree it was) came to say the sahou kar would wait for us at the other side of the village, and begged we would be quick, as he liked our company and wished for the misty of our escort.

I have been frightening him a little, continued he, and in truth he has been in alarm ever since he left Sauger for he had heard of the disappearance of some parties on the road last year so when we met you yesterday he was highly delighted, and afterwards spoke warmly of you, Jemadar Sahib, and said he could fee! no fear

in your society
Well done," cried I "thou hast played thy part well, and it shall not be forgotten. But, my friends, the schoular waits, and we had better be moving; do you all surround his party as you did yesterday ply them with tales and stories, and keep their minds quet.

"Jey Bhowanco! Jey Ameer Ah! was the shout of the party as we quitted the ground and took our way to the spot where the sahonker awaited as.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

Catesby .- "T is a vile thing to die, my gracious lord, When men are unprepared and look not for it.

Richard III. Act fit., So. 2.

Rau! Ram! Meer Sahib, was the salutation of the sahoukar as we met at the spot whither Bhikaree had guided us. "Ram! Ram! I am glad you have condescended to keep company with your poor servant, for truly the sweet savour of your fluent discourse has left a longing in my heart to hear more of it, and happily I am so far favoured.

I returned the usual compliments, and we set forward on our journey Gradually my band arranged themselves around their new victims. All were at their places, and I engerly looked out for the first scout who should give us intelligence that the bhil was ready A strange feeling it is sahib, that comes over us Thugs at such moments not a feeling of interest or pity for our victim, or compunction for the deed we are about to do, as perhaps you might expect to hear, but an all-absorbing anxiety for the issue of the adventure, an intense longing for its consummation, and a dread of interruption from pissing travellers, and though I had become now callous in a great measure, still my heart was throbbing with anxiety and apprehension, and my replies to the sahoukar's witty and jolly remarks were vague and abstracted, my whole thoughts were concentrated upon the affair in hand, and it was not be wondered at He remarked my altered behaviour, and I rallied myself, and was soon able to amuse him as I had done before

"Ah! that is like yourself, Meer Sahib," said he, as I had just given utterance to a joke which caused his fat sides to shake,—"that is like yourself. Why, man, whose face did your first glance on awaking from sleep rest on? Surely on some melancholy being, and you have partaken of his thoughts ever since"

"I know not, Séthice," I replied, "but you know that a man cannot always command the same evenness of temper, and I confess that my thoughts were for away, at my home"

"Well," said he, "all I wish for you and myself is, a safe return to our homes, for this travelling is poor work, and I have been unlucky enough to start on a very indifferent day after all my waiting I had determined on leaving Saugor nearly a month ago, but on consulting the astrologer, he delayed me from time to time, declaring this day was bad and that day was worse, until I could stay no longer, and it was all to little purpose, and I pray Narayun to protect me from all Thugs, thieves, and dacoos"

"Ameen," said I, "I respond to your prayer most fervently, for I am on my way to my service, where we chance often to get harder knocks than we can bear. But do they say there are Thugs on the road? and who or what are they? the term is new to me"

"Why truly I can hardly tell you, Meer Salub The Thugs, they say, are people who feign one thing or other, till they get unwary travellers into their power, and then destroy them I have heard, too, that they have handsome women with them, who pretend distress on the roads, and decoy travellers who may have soft hearts to help them, then they fasten on them, and they have some charm from the shitan which enables them to keep their hold till their associates come up, despite of all efforts of the person so ensuared to gain his liberty. And that either thieves, or Thugs, or rascals of some kind or other do infest the highways is most true, for many travellers disappear in an unaccountable manner. But I do not fear, I am in the company of honest men, and we are a large party, and they must be stout men or devils who would assail us."

I laughed inwardly at the sahoukar's idea of Thugs, and had no friends as though we had travelled together for mouths, or known each other for years. A kind farowell was interchanged as we parted at the rillage; he to put up inside it in the bazar, and we to our old plan of encampment.

To morrow, said I to the assembled men, "is a good day it is Friday: we must finish this business. All were agreed upon it and at manight the belians and lughaces went on the former to choose a spot for the affair and the latter to dig the grave.

At daylight, a man (our Bhikarco at was) came to say the sahou kar would wait for us at the other side of the village, and begged we would be quick as he liked our company and wished for the infety of our execut.

I have been frightening him a little, continued he, "and in truth he has been in alarm over since he left Saugor for he had heard of the disappearance of some parties on the road last year so when we met you yestarday he was highly delighted, and afterwards spoke warning of you, Jomadar Sahih, and said he could fee! no feer

in your society

"Yell done crowd I "thou hast played thy part well, and it shall not be forgotten. But my friends, the sahoukar wuits, and we had better be moving; do you all surround has party as you did yosterday; ply them with tales and stories, and keep their minds quiet."

"Jey Bhowance! Jey Ameer Ah!" was the shout of the party as we quitted the ground and took our way to the spot where the sa-houker awaited us.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

Caterby — T is a vile thing to die my gracious lord,
When men are unprepared and look not for it.
Rickard III. Act lil., Sc. 2.

Raw! Ram! Meer Sahib, was the salutation of the sahoukar as we not at the spot whither Bhikaree had guided us. "Ram! Ram! I am glad you have condescended to keep company with your poor screams, for truly the sweet savour of your fluent discourse has left a longing in my heart to hear more of it, and happily I am so far favoured.

I returned the usual compluments, and we set forward on our ourney. Gradually my band arranged themselves around their new victims. All were at their places, and I eagenty looked out for the first scout who should give us intelligence that the bhil was ready. A strange feeling it is, sabit, that comes over us Thugs at such moments not a feeling of interest or pity for our victim, or compunction for the deed we are about to do, as perhaps you might expect to hear, but an all-absorbing anxiety for the issue of the adventure, an intense longing for its consummation, and a dread of interruption from passing travellers, and though I had become now callous in a great measure, still my heart was throbbing with anxiety and apprehension, and my replies to the sahoukar's witty and jolly remarks were vague and abstracted, my whole thoughts were concentrated upon the affair in hand, and it was not be wondered at He remarked my altered behaviour, and I rallied myself, and was soon able to amuse him as I had done before

"Ah! that is like yourself, Meer Sahib," said he, as I had just given utterance to a joke which caused his fat sides to shake,—"that is like yourself Why, man, whose face did your first glance on awaking from sleep rest on? Surely on some melancholy being, and you have partaken of his thoughts ever since"

"I know not, Séthjee," I replied, "but you know that a man cannot always command the same evenness of temper, and I confess that my thoughts were far away, at my home"

"Well," said he, "all I wish for you and myself is, a safe return to our homes, for this travelling is poor work, and I have been unlucky enough to start on a very indifferent day after all my waiting I had determined on leaving Saugor nearly a month ago, but on consulting the astrologer, he delayed me from time to time, declaring this day was bad and that day was worse, until I could stay no longer, and it was all to little purpose, and I pray Narayun to protect me from all Thugs, thieves, and dacoos"

"Ameen," said I, "I respond to your prayer most fervently, for I am on my way to my service, where we chance often to get harder knocks than we can bear. But do they say there are Thugs on the road? and who or what are they? the term is new to me

"Why truly I can hardly tell you, Meer Sahib The Thugs, they say, are people who feign one thing or other, till they get unwary travellers into their power, and then destroy them I have heard, too, that they have handsome women with them, who pretend distress on the roads, and decoy travellers who may have soft hearts to help them, then they fasten on them, and they have some charm from the shitan which enables them to keep their hold till their associates come up, despite of all efforts of the person so ensnared to gain his liberty. And that either thieves, or Thugs, or rascals of some kind or other do infest the highways is most true, for many travellers disappear in an unaccountable manner. But I do not fear, I am in the company of honest men, and we are a large party, and they must be stout men or devils who would assail us."

I laughed inwardly at the sahoukar's idea of Thugs, and had no doubt that Ganesha Jemadar was if the truth were known, at the bottom of the disappearance of the travellers. But I answered maily Ah! no fear my friend. These Thugs, as you say may now and then light upon an unsuspecting single traveller and kill him but no one would dare to touch a party like ours and, Inshalla! if any apmenr we will let daylight into some of their skins there is nothing I love better than making keems (mincement) of these ruscals. I have done so once or twice already and I never found them stand when a sword was drawn. But yonder I see, is one of my men sitting wonder how he got on before us. I will ask him. He must have started early to got a rost on the road;" and as we reached him he slowly raised himself from the ground, and made his selutation to me and the sahoukar; he appeared tared, and acted his part well.

How is this. Ameer Singh? said I, how is it that you are so much in advance of us P

"Oh, replied he readily, "a thorn ran into my foot yesterday and as I knew you would not wait for me I started at midnight with a few others, who said they would be my companions, and we travelled on leasurely but I could not proceed farther as my foot was nainful, and I determined to wast for the party here to get a lift on a pony

You shall have it," said L "Mount the one which carries my baggage, and I will see that a barbor examines your foot when we reach the end of the stage. But where are your companions?

They said there was a small river in advance, about half a cose off, and they would proceed thether and wash their hands and faces they bade me tall you that, if I could not follow them, you would find them there.

Good, said I, "and I am glad to hear there is water near we can dismount and refresh ourselves, for the stage is a long one. How say you Seth Sahib? you Hindoos are as particular about your morning ablutions as we Moslems are."

True, true, he rephed "the news is welcome, for my mouth is dry and I have not as yet washed it we will stop for a short time. Bender, my stomach is empty and I have sweetments with me which I will share with you, Meer Sahib it is ill travelling without something in the minde."

A good thought," I replied, and I shall be glad of them I usually bring some myself, but have neglected to do so in this in stance.

The scout was right, the rivulet he mentioned was scarcely as far as he had said, and we reached it after a few minutes riding and, sure enough, there were my men sitting unconcernedly by the edge of the water busily discussing a hasty meal of some cakes they had brought with them.

"Bhill manjeh, have you cleared the hole?" I eagerly inquired of the bélha

"Manjeh," he replied

"What did you ask?" said the sahoukar, "if they have not a clean vessel for you to drink out of, you can have one of mine"

"Thanks for your kindness," I replied, "but my good fellow here tells me that he has brought one, and cleaned it ready for me"

We all dismounted, the men rushed into the water, and were each and all busily employed in washing their mouths and teeth, and drinking of the pure element which murmured over its pebbly bed beneath their feet, but none of them quitted their stations, and only awaited the signal to do then work

"Is the bhil far distant?" I asked of the bella who presented me with a lota of water for the purposes of ablution "About an arrow's flight," said he, "down yonder in that thicket It is a good place, and a well-known one, it was on this spot that Ganesha Jemadar had a rare bunij last year But do not delay, for the sun is high, and travellers may be coming from the stage before us, this is the only running water on the road, and all hasten to it to refresh themselves "

"Then I am ready," said I, "and when you see me close to the sahoukar, I will give the signal, I see the men are all prepared"

And I walked towards him

"Why don't you give the jhinee," said Motee-ram to me as I passed him, "we are all waiting for it"

"Now," said I, "be ready, I go to my station"

The fellow, near whom he was standing, turned round, hearing us converse in a strange language, but he immediately afterwards sat down and resumed the operation of cleaning his teeth with great assiduity there were two men behind him who would shortly save lum the trouble

"Why, Séthjee," said I, "I wonder you do not go up higher, here you have the water muddled by all the fellows above you Come with me, and I will show you a deep place where I have just washed, and where the water is clear"

"Ah, I did not think of it," said he, "I will follow you" had been washing low down, and as I got him into the middle of the party I gave the jhirnee

Sahib, though I had not killed a man with the 100mal for nearly four years, I had not forgotten my old trick, he was dead, I think,

ere he reached my feet

Stupid it was in us to delay, and I prevented the like in future Every man resumed his employment of washing himself as though nothing had happened, and there lay the bodies on the sand We were once again fated to be interrupted Two travellers were seen approaching and the bodies were hastily covered with sheets, as if those who lay beneath them were asleen and I gried to the men for some of them to set and others he down, and all to forga great wears ness. They did so, and the men came up they were poor creatures hardly worth killing and I proposed to Peer Khan to let them co. but he would not hear of it.

Let them go! he cried: "are you mad? Do you not think that these fellows already suspect who we are? Does a man over come into the presence of the dead be they ever so well covered or disguised, without a feeling that they are dead? And, see, some of our men are speaking to them they are true bunn, and Devee has sent them."

"As you will. said I. "but there may be more of them.

Hardly so soon, replied he these fellows must have left in the night to be here so early but come, let us ask them. And we walked up to them

'Salam! said I, where are you from so early? You have tru velled fast if you have come from the stage we hope to reach in the course of the day how far is it?

It is seven long coss," said the man, "and the sun will be high and hot before you reach it but we are in haste and must proceed.

Stay mid I, dero not to move till you are allowed and tell me, how many travellers put up last night in the village from whence you have come?"

"Two beades ourselves, replied the other of the two evidently

... alarm at my question. Why do you ask?

" Are you sure there were no more?

"Certain," he replied we travelled together from Jubbulpoor and put up in the same house "

"And how far are they behind you?"

"They will be here immediately I should think, for we started at the same time but have outstripped them.

"Good, and I; "now at down there and want till they come. Why is this? aried both "by what right do you detain travellers? We will go on.

"Dare to stir at your peril, maid I "you have intruded on us, nd must pay the penalty

"What penalty? Are you thieves? if so take what you will from us and let us go.

We are not thieves, and Peer Khan but stay quest, we are

"Worse then, brother we are lost," cried one to the other; "these villams are Thuge it is even as I whispered to you when you must needs stop among them they have been at their horrid work, and yonder lie those whom they have destroyed

"Yes," said I, "unhappy men, you have guessed right, yonder he the dead, and you will soon be numbered with them, it is useless to strive against your destiny '

I turned away, for I felt, salub—I felt sick at the thought of destroying these mossessed people. They might have passed on, but Peer Khan was right, they had detected the dead, though the bodies had been laid out and covered as if the senseless forms were sleeping—but they lay like lumps of clay. No measured breathing disturbed the folds of the sheets which covered them, and a glauce had been sufficient to tell the tale to the unfortunate people who had seen them. But I shook off the feeling as best I could had I given way to it, or betrayed its existence to my associates, the power I possessed over them, would have been lost—and it was the spirit of my existence.

"They must die," said I to Peer Khan, "you were right, and they had guessed the truth, but I wish it had been otherwise, and the lazy lughaees had done their work quickly, they might have passed on, and we have had a good morning's work without them, they are not worth having "

"I would not exchange places with them for anything you could name, Meer Sahib, and perhaps it were well to put them out of their suspense "

"Do so, Peer Khan, and get the rest with them removed, I will deal with one of the other two coming up. These fellows are half dead already with fear, and the others I will fall on in my own way,

I hate such passive victims as these will be"

Peer Khan and another went to the miserable wretches, who remained sitting on the ground where we had left them. I watched them, they stood up mechanically when they were ordered to do so, and stretched out their necks for the fatal roomal, and were slain as unresistingly as sheep beneath the knife of the butcher. The rest of the travellers were not long coming, and were only two, as the others had said

"Now," said I to Motee, "these fellows must be dealt with at once you take one, I will the other, they must not utter a word" I am ready," said he, and we arose and lounged about the road

The travellers came up One was a young and the other an old man I marked the young one, and as he passed me a Thug laid hold of his arm, he turned round to resent it, and I was ready These two were carried away, and after collecting our dispersed party, we once more pursued our route without interruption

It had been a good morning's work, the sahoukar was as rich as the bhutteara had said, and four thousand three hundred rupees greeted our expectant eyes as the contents of the laden ponies were emmined besides these there were six handsome shawls, worth better than a thousand more, and a few pieces of cotton cloth, which wave torn up and namedated distributed. The other four travellers had upwards of a hundred rupces, a sum not to be despaced, and which I divided equally among the land, reserving the large booty and adding it to the sum we had already gained.

CHAPTER XXIX.

IN WHICH IT IS OLDARLY SHOWE HOW HARD IT IS TO STOP WHEN THE DEVIL DRIVES.

WH reached Jubbalpoor without another adventure of any kind, and rested there for two days. Peer Khan, Motee, and myself per ambulated the beauts during the whole time, but not a traveller could we neet with, nor could we learn that any were expected. It was therefore of no use to romain, and as we had still plenty of time before us, we could travel as lesurely as we pleased; so on the third morning we again proceeded.

The country between Jubbulpoor and Nagpoor is a wild waste. Villages are not mot with for miles and miles, the road is stony and uneven, and the jungle thick and dangerous for nearly the whole way. On this account the tract has always been a favourite report of Tings and more affairs have come off in those few marches than perhaps in any other part of the country frequented by us. We were all regretting that we had not mot with some bunny at Jubbul poor wherewith to beguile the wearness of the road, when, at our second stage, soon after we had arrived, Motee, who had gone to look out for work for us, returned with the glad news that there was a palankeen at the door of a merchant schop, surrounded by bearers and a few soldiers, which looked very much as if it belonged to a traveller

But he must be of rank, said Motee, therefore I humbly suggest that you, Meer Sahih, should undertake to see who he is, and to secure him if possible.

I followed his advice, and changing my travelling attire for a dress which would ensure my ovil reception, I armed myself, and attended by a Thing who carried my hooks, I sunifered mit the village. I soon saw the palankeen and men about it, and in order to gain some intelligence to guide me, I went to a small tumboles a shop directly opposite to it, and sitting down entered into conversation with the vendor of tobacco and par.

This is a wild country you live in, my friend," said L

'Yes, it is indeed as you say " he replied "and were it not for you travellers, a poor man would have little chance of filling his belly by selding pan and tobacco, but, as it is, my trade thrives well."

"There do not seem to be many on the road," said I, "I have come from Jubbulpoor without meeting a soul"

"Why, the roads are hardly much ficquented yet," he rejoined, "but in a month more there will be hundreds, and there," he continued, pointing to the house over the way, "there is almost the only one I have seen for some time"

"Who is it?" I asked, "and where has he come from? he was not with us"

"I know not," replied the tumbólee, "nor do I care, whoever he is, he has bought a quantity of my stuff, and it was the first silver which crossed my hand this morning"

I saw there was nothing to be got out of this man, so I went to a bunnea a little farther off, and after a few preparatory and indifferent questions asked him whether he knew aught of the traveller, but he knew nothing either, except that a slave girl had bought some flour of him "They say," said he, "that it is a gentleman of rank who is travelling privately, and does not wish to be known, at any rate, sahib, I know nothing about him, I suppose, however, he will come out in a short time"

This is very strange, thought I Here is a gay palankeen, eight bearers and some soldiers with it, come into this wretched place, and yet no one's curiosity is aroused, who can it be? I will return to the tumbólee and sit awhile, I may see, though I cannot hear anything of this mysterious person

I sat down in the shop, and calling to my attendant for my hooka remained there smoking in the hope that some one might appear from behind the cloths which were stretched across the verandah. Nor did I stay long in vain, I saw them gently move once or twice, and thought I could perceive the sparkle of a brilliant eye directed to me I riveted my gaze on the envious purdah, and after a long interval it was quickly opened, and afforded me a transient view of a face radiant with beauty, but it was as instantly closed again, and I was left in vain to conjecture as to the beautiful but mysterious person who had thus partially discovered herself to me would not have suited my purpose to have personally interrogated any of the bearers who were lying and sitting about the palankeen, as it would have rendered them suspicious, and would have been impertment after all, it was only a woman,—what had I to do with women now? And had I not made an inward resolution never to seek them as bunij, nay, even to avoid parties in which there might be any?

So I arose, and took my way to our camp, firmly resolving that I would pursue my march the next morning, for, thought I, she must be some lady of rank travelling to her lord, and Alla for bid that I should raise a hand against one so defenceless and unprotedeted! and I thought of my own levely Axeema and shuddered at the idea of her ever being placed within reach of other members of may profesmon, who might not be so scrupulous as I was.

But, sahib, the resolves of men,-what are they? thoughts, which fain would excite the mind to good, only to be driven away by the wild and overpowering infriences of passion. Despite of my resolve my mind was unquiet, and a thousand times fancy brought to my view the look she had cast on me, and whispered that it was one of love. I could not shake it off aid sought in the conversation of my associates wherewith to drive her from my thoughts; but it was in vain : that passionate glance was before me, and the beautoous eyes which throw it seemed to ask for another, a nearer and more loving

In this state I passed the day now determining that I would resast the temptation which was grawing at my heart, and now almost on the point of once more proceeding to the village and seaking out the unknown object of my disquictude and I was irresolute when towards evening I saw a slave girl making towards the camp and I went to meet her but not with the intention of speaking to her should she prove to be only a village girl. We met and I passed her but I saw instantly that she was in search of some one for she turned round heatatingly and spoke to me

Forgive my boldness, sahib, said she, "but I am in search of some one, and your appearance tells me that it must be you.

Speak," said I if I can aid you in anything command me" "I know not, she replied, "whether you are he or not but tell me, did you sit at the tumbolee s shop this morning for some time, amoking a hooka ?

I did, my pretty maiden " said I; "and what of that? there is_ nothing so unusual in it as to attract attention.

Ah, no!" said the girl archly but one saw you who wishes to see you again, and if you will now follow me I will guide you." And who may this person be?" I asked and what can be his or her business with a traveller ?

"Your first question I may not answer" said the girl "and as to the second I am ignorant but, by your soul, follow me, for the matter is urgent, and I have most express commands to bring you if I possibly can.

"I follow you said I lend on.

'Then keep behind me at some distance, she said, "and when you see me enter into the house step boldly in after me, as if you were the master

I followed her But ah! sahib, observe the power of destany might have sat in my tent and denied myself to the girl, who, something told it me, had come to seek me when I first saw her approach I might, when I did advance to meet her, have passed on indifferently, and even when she spoke to me I might have denied that I was the person slive was sent after, or I might have refused to accompany her, but destiny impelled me on, nay, it led me by the nose after a slave-girl, to plunge into an adventure I fain would have avoided, and which my heart told me must end miserably. Salub, there is no opposing fate, by the meanest ends it works out the greatest deeds, and we are its slaves, body and soul, blindly to do as its will works. I say not Thugs only, but the whole human race. Is it not so?

It appears to me, Ameer Ali, said I, that poor Destiny has the blame whenever your own wicked hearts fixed themselves on any object and you followed their suggestions

Nay, but I would have avoided this, cried the Thug, and have I not told you so? Alla knows I would not have entered into this matter, but what could I do? what were my weak resolves compared with His will? and yet you will not believe me Sahib, I do not tell a he

I dare say not, said I, but the beautiful eyes were too much for you, so go on with your story

The Thug laughed They were indeed, said he, and accursed be the hour in which I saw them But I will proceed.

The slave preceded me, at some distance I followed her through the village and its bazars, and saw her enter the house before which I had sat in the morning. I too entered it, leaving my slippers at the door, and with the confident air of a man who goes into his own house. I had just passed the threshold when the slave stopped me "Wait a moment," said she "I go to announce you," and she pulled aside the temporary screen and went in

In a few moments she returned and bade me follow her I obeyed her, and in the next instant was in the presence of the unknown, who was hidden from my sight by an envious sheet, which covered the whole of her person, and her face was turned away from me towards the wall

"Lady," said I, "your slave is come, and aught that he can do for one so lovely he will perform to the utmost of his power Speak! your commands are on my head and eyes"

"Be seated," she said in a low timid voice, "I have somewhat to ask thee"

I obeyed, and seated myself at a respectful distance from her on the carpet

"You will think me bold and shameless, I fear, stranger," said she, "for thus admitting you to my presence, nay, even to my chamber but, ains! I am a widow and need the protection you are able perhaps to afford me. Which way do you travel to "Towards Nagpoor" I replied; I purpose leaving this miserable place early to-morrow and I have come from Jubbulp oor

From whence I have also come," she said and I am going too to Nagpoor Ah, my destiny is good which has sent me one who will protect the lonely and friendless widow !

It is strange, lady " said I, "that we did not meet be ore, hav ing come the same road.

No she replied, it is not, since I was behind you [I heard you were before me, and I travelled fast to overtake you. | We have now met, and as I must proceed the remainder of my journery alone, I implore you to allow me for the stage to join your party with which as I hear it is a large one, I shall be safe, and free from maxiety

Your wish is granted lady I said; and any protection against the dangers of the way which your poor slav; can afford shall be cheerfully given I will send a man carly to dwalen you, and promuse that I will not leave the village without you."

She salamed to me gracefully and in doing so the sheet, as if by accident, partly fell from her face, and disclosed again to my enraptured view the features I had beheld from a distance Sahib, the shock was overpowering and every nerve of my body (ingled. Only that a sense of decency restrained me, I had rison and thrown my self at her feet but while a blush, as though of shame, mantled over her countenance and she hastily withdrew the glance she had for an instant fixed on me, she replaced the sheet and again turned to the wall, bending her head towards the ground.

I thought it had been purely accidental, and the action at the time convinced me that she was really what she represented herself to be and fraring that my longer presence would not be agreeable nor decent, I saked her if she had any further commands and for permission to depart.

"No, said she, I have no further favour to beg more to know the name of him to whom I am indebted for this act of kindness."

"My name is Ameer Ali, said I a poor synd of Hindostan." "Your fluent speech assured me you were of that noble race I could not be mutaken,-tus seldom one hears it. Faxil! bring the pan and utr"

She did so and after taking the complimentary gift of dismissal, and anounting my breast and beard with the fragrant utr I rose and made my obsessance. She saluted me in return, and again bade me not forget my promise. I assured her that she might depend upon me, and departed.

She must be what she says, thought I the very act of presenting pan and atr to me proves her rank no common person, no courtesan would have thought of it I shall only have to bear a little jeering from Motee and Peer Khan, which I will resist and laugh away, and this poor widow will reach Nagpoor in safety, without knowing that she has been in the hands of muiderers. But I said nothing that night to any of them. In reply to their numerous questions as to the fortune I had met with in the village, and whether I had discovered the unknown, I only laughed, and said I believed it was some dancing-girl, for I knew the mention of one would turn their minds from the thoughts of bunil, as it is folbidden to kill those persons by the laws of our profession, and with my supposition they appeared satisfied

Great, however, was their surprise when, in the morning, after having delayed our departure longer than usual, I joined the party of the lady outside the village, and they understood that we were to travel in company

I was overpowered by jokes and wittiesses from Peer Khan and Motee, who declared I was a sly dog thus to secure the lady all to myself, and after protesting vehemently that I cared not about her,

which only made them laugh the more, I became half angry

"Look you, my friends," said I, "this is a matter which has been in a manner forced upon me. Who the lady is I know not. She has begged of me to allow her to accompany us, as she supposes us to be travellers, and I have permitted it, and whether she be old or young, ugly or beautiful, I am alike ignorant. We may hereafter find out her history, but, whoever she be, she has my promise of safe escort, and she is not bunil. You remember my resolution, and you will see I can keep it."

"Nay," said Motee, "be not angry; if a friend is not privileged to crack a joke now and then, who, in Bhugwan's name, is? And as for us, we are your servants, and bound to obey you by our oath, so you may have as many women in your train as you please, and not one shall be bunn "

So we pursued our road Several times I could not resist riding up to the palankeen and making my noble horse curvet and prance beside it. The doors were at first closely shut, but one was gradually opened, and the same sparkling eyes threw me many a smiling and approving look, though the face was still hidden

Alas! sahib, those eyes did me great mischief,-I could not withstand them

About noon, when we had rested from our fatigue, and my men were dispersed in various directions, scarcely any of them remaining in the camp, the slave-girl again came for me, and I followed her to her mistress

We sat a long time in silence, and the lady was muffled up as I had before seen her. Despite of all my conflicting feelings, I own, sahib, that in her presence my home was forgotten, and my burning desire was fixed upon the veiled being before me, of whose counten ance I was even still ignorant.

She spake at last, but it was to the slave.

"Go, said she "and wait without, far out of hearing I have that to say to this gentleman which must not enter even your cars, my Fazil

She departed, and I was alone with the other and again there was a long and to me a painful, silence.

"Meer Sahib, she said at length what will you think of me? what will you think of one who thus exposes herself to the gaze of a man and a stranger? But it matters not now; it has been done, and it is idle to think on the past. I am the widow of a nuwab, whose cetate is near Agra he died a short time age at Nag poor on his way from Hyderabad, whither he had gone to see his brother and I was left friendless, but not destitute. He had abun dance of wealth with him, and I was thus enabled to live at Nag poor after sending news of his death to my estate, in comfort and affluence. The messengers I sent at length returned, and brought me the welcome news that there was no one to dispute my right to my husband s property and that my own family which is as noble and as powerful as his was, had taken possession of the estate and held it on my account; and they wrote to me to return as quickly as I could, and among the respectable men of the land choose a new husband, by whom I might have children to inherit the estate I immediately set off on my return—ah! Ameer Ali, how can I tell the rest! my tongue from shame cleaves to the roof of my mouth and my lips refuse utterance to the words which are at my heart.

Speak, lady" said I, by your soul, speak! I burn with impatience, and you have excited my curiosity now too powerfully for it to rest unsatisfied

Then I must speak," she said, though I die of shame in the effort. I heard at the last village that you had arrived I say you, because my faithful slave, who finds out everything came shortly after your arrival and told me that she had seen the most beautiful cavalier her thoughts had ever pictured to her She recounted your noble air the beauty of your person, the grace with which you managed your flary steed, and, above all, the sweet and amable expression of your countenance. The account inflamed me. I had married an old man, who was jealous of my person, and who never allowed me to see any one but my poor slave but I had heard of manly beauty and I longed for the time when his death should free me from this hated thraldom. Long I deliberated between the uncontrollable degre which possessed me and a sense of shame and womanly dignity; and perhaps the latter might have conquered, but you came and sat opposite to the hovel in which I was resting; my slave told me you were there, and I looked Alla! Alla! once my eyes had fixed themselves on you, I could not withdraw them, and as the hole through which I gazed did not afford me a full view of your person, I partially opened the curtain and feasted my soul with your appearance You went away, and I fell back on my carpet in despair My slave at last restored me to consciousness, but I raved about you, and fearful that my senses would leave me, she went and brought you When you entered, how I longed to throw myself at your feet but shame prevailed, and, after a commonplace conversation, though my soul was on fire and my liver had turned into water, I suffered you to depart I told my people that I must return to Nagpoor, as I had forgotten to redeem some jewels I had left in pledge, which were valuable, and they believed Ameer Ali!" cried she, suddenly throwing off her veil and casting herself at my feet, while she buried her head in my lap, "Ameer Alı this is my tale of shame—I love you! Alla only knows how my soul burns for you! I will be your slave for ever, whither you go, thither will I follow, whoever you are, and whatever you are, I am yours, and yours only, but I shall die without you. Alas! why did you come to me?"

CHAPTER XXX

Yet she must die, or she'll betray more men.

Othello

And where now were all my resolutions? By Alla! sahib, I had forgotten all-home, wife, children, I thought not of them, but I drank deeply of love, wild, passionate, burning love, from her eyes, and I caressed her as though she were mine own There we sat, and though guilt was in my soul, and it accused me of infidelity to my oft-repeated vows, I could not tear myself away from her, and I suffered her caresses in return, though they often struck to my heart like the blows of a sharp knife Hours passed thus-I thought not of them, she seated at my feet, and I with my hands entwined in her long silken hair, and gazing at her face, of such loveliness, that never had my wildest dreams pictured anything like it Zora was beautiful, Azeema was even more so, but Shurfun surpassed them both in as great a degree as they excelled any of their sex I had ever seen Fain would she have had me stay with her, fain would she, the temptress, have then and there separated me from my band, and led me with herself, whither she cared not, so I was with her and she with me Wealth, she said, she had in abundance, and we could fly to some undiscoverable spot, where we should pass years of blus together and where she would by communication with her family procure such money from time to time as would enable us to live in affluence.

"Ameer All, and she, "you are young you are unknown you have to fight your way to fame upon a bare pittance, and for this will you rake your precious life, when I offer you ercrything I possess, and swear that I am your slave? Ah, you will not, you cannot now leave me to pensh in despair and die of unrequited love! Speal, my soul, you will not leave me?

Wretch, and perjured that I was, I swore to obey her wishes

Sahib, it was a sore temptation, and it overcame me.

At last I tore myself away from her but not till I had sworn by her head and eyes to return the following day when being more calm we might arrange our plans for the future.

I returned to my little tent, and there, in the agony of my soul, I rolled on the ground. I raved, I refused to eat, and was as one brorfs of sense I spok or radely to Peer Khan, who having been called by my attendant came to comfort me and I was almost on the point of driving my dagger to my heart to end a life which, though a splendid prospect was open to it, could nover afterwards be aught than one of guilty misory. But the passion reached its height and as a thunder-cloud, which after a burst of internal commotion, after its deep peal has gone forth and it has ejected the lightning from its bosom, gradually pours its pent up flood of waters to soothe and refresh the earth, so did mine oyes now run tears, and they calmed me. I can now ask and take advice, thought I, and Peer Khan, who is fondly attached to me will give it as he would to a brother

I sent for him, and after applograng for my radeness, said he would find the cause of it in the relation I would give of the last few hours. I told him all, and awaited his answer. My heart was relayed of a load of oppressive thought, and I was the better for it.

He pendered long ere he spoke at last he said -

"Meer Saluh, thus is a difficult bunness indeed, and I hardly know what to advise go to her to-morrow; be a man, and give not way to this boyah passon, which ill suits you try to persuade her that you cannot do as she wakes speak to her kindly yet firmly of her home, of her relatives, and of the guilt which much cleave to you both from the connection she proposes. Tell lier you have a wife and two children, and if she is a true woman she will be fired with sealousy and will quarrel with you do you then become unitated in your turn, and leave her to go her own way and find some one who may not be so scrupilous, and may take advantage of her blund passions. And if all this fail, if no words advantage of her blund passions. And if all this fail, if no words of yours can drive these foolish ideas from her brain, we have only to make a long march in some unknown direction and at once be quit of her—I know the paths through the jungles, and by them, difficult as they are, we can easily reach Berar, where she will never again hear of us."

I thanked him cordially for his advice, and that part of it which related to Azeema and my children struck forcibly on my heart. I was as yet, thanks to the protection of the Prophet, pure, and by his aid I would remain so. I determined I would urge my previous ties to her so forcibly, and I would depict my love for my wife in such colours, that she should at once reject me.

Full of these resolutions I once more obeyed her summons, sent me by her slave, and followed the girl, and as we had made a long march of twelve coss, it was now late in the day. I need not again tell you, salub, of all her love for me, which she now poured forth without check or reserve. She had fauly cast away all shame, and would hear of nothing I could represent as to the consequences of our connection with her family. I had only now one resource, and as a man in alarm for his life fires the train of a mine, so did I, hurriedly and perhaps incoherently, mention my wife and children The effect was, as Peer Khan had expected, instantaneous had been sitting at my feet, listening to my objections, and playfully reasoning with me against them, but, at these words, she suddenly started to her feet, and drew her noble figure up to its full height, while her eyes flashed, as she smoothed back her flowing hair from her brow, the veins of her forehead and neck swelled, and she was terrible to look on I confess I quailed beneath the glances of scorn she cast on me

"Man!" she cried at length, "ah, vile and faithless wretch, say, did I hear thee aright? Dare to say again that thou hast a wife and children! What dirt hast thou eaten?"

It was my time, and my good resolutions came to my aid, I rose, and confronted her with a look as proud and unflinching as her own

"Yes, Shurfun," I said, "I have spoken the truth, one as beautiful as thou art believes me faithful, and faithful I will remain to her, long I reasoned with thee, and hadst thou not been carried away, and thy good feelings deadened, by an idle and sudden passion, thou hadst heard my words, and submitted to them, for the sake of thy family and hitherto untarnished honour. For my unfortunate share in this matter, may Alla forgive me! Lady, it was thy maddening beauty which caused me to err, but He has strengthened my heart, and again I implore thee to hear the words of friendship, and be thyself again."

How can I tell you, sahib, of her despair, and the bitterness of her expressions, as she upbraded me with my deceit? I deserved them all, and not a word did I answer in return. I could not, and I dared not approach her lest my heart should again yield to her blandshments, for I felt that a kind word or action would remow them, and cause her to forget the past and it was pituible to see her as she now sat on the ground, meaning and rocking horself to and for while at interrals she tore her hair and beat her broasts in her agony of spirit.

Leave me (" she said at last. 'Ah, Ameer Ah, thou hast broken a heart which could have leved thee for ever I do not complain to site will of Alls that the only man I could ever have leved and honoured should deceive me, and I submit. Shurfun is not yet reduced so low that she could put up with the second place in any man a heart, were he the monarch of Delhi itself. Go! the sucht of you is painful to my soul and may Alla forgive us both!

I left her I hastened to Peer Khan, and related the whole to him, and he was delighted.

"Now said he "to make the matter sure, let us retrace our steps it is not attended with any risk, for we can put up anywhere, and we need not visit the village we before halted at we have no hope of booty at Nagpoor and if you like we can penetrate, as I said before, into Berar and return by Khāndésh which was our original idea.

I agree, said I; this woman must be avoided at every risk. To save appearances she must go on to Nagpoor with her people, and we shall, by following your advice, avoid her altogether

Accordingly the next morning instead of pursuing the road we had taken, we turned back, and after a few hours travel halted at a small village, a few coss distant from the one we had left. But little had I calculated on that woman a love and wild passions. Before the day was half spent, we saw her palankeen attended by her men, advancing towards the village by the way we had come. What was to be done? I was for instant flight into the wild jungles by which we were surrounded, and where she would soon have left all traces of us. But Peer Khan and Motoe would not here of it.

"It would be cowardly" said they there is no occasion thus to run before a woman and why should we expose ourselves to dangura from wild bearts and the unhealthmest of the forest on her account? And," added Motee, "if she follow us now depend upon it it is not on your account, but because she is now determined to go to her home as quickly as possible.

It may be so said I "whatever her plans may be they will not influence my determinations." Yet my mind misgave me that she would again follow us, and a short time proved that my suspicions were right. The slave came by stealth to my tent, disguised as a seller of milk, and I followed her, for I knew not why her mistress had sent for me, and why she now sought me after our last meeting

I reached her presence, and again we were alone. I armed myself against her blandishments, and determined to oppose them with scorn, that she might again quarrel with me, and leave me for ever I cannot relate to you, sahib, all that passed between us at one time she was all love, seeking to throw herself into my arms, and beseeching me to have pity on her, for she felt that her reputation was gone, in words that would have moved a heart of stone, at another, violently upbraiding me for my perfidy, and bidding me begone from her sight, yet, each time as I turned to depart, she would prevent me, and again implore me to listen and agree to her proposals

At last I could bear with her no longer I was provoked with her importunities, and vexed at my own irresolute conduct. I hade her farewell, and was quitting the shed where she had put up for the day, when she screamed to me to come back I returned

"Shurfun," said I, "this is foolishness, and the conduct of children, why should we thus torment each other? You have heard my determination, and could you offer me the throne of Dehli, I might share it with you, but my heart would be hers who now possesses it, and you would live a torment to yourself and me Jealousy even now possesses your heart and what would not that passion become when you were in intercourse with the object you even now hate, and whom you could not separate from me?"

"I care not for your words," said she, "I care not for the consequences I have set my life and my fame on the issue of this,—and refuse me at your peril! As for your wife, I hate her not Does not our law allow you four wives? Is it not so written in the blessed Koran? You cannot deny it Even I, who am a woman, know it I would love Azeema as a sister, and your children for your sake, and can you refuse wealth and a future life of distinction for them? O man, are you bereft of sense? See, I speak to you calmly, and reason with you as I would were I your sister"

"I would to Alla thou wert my sister," I said, "I could love thee fondly as a sister, but never, never can I consent to this unhallowed and disgraceful union. Yes, Shurfun, disgraceful! disguise it with all thy flattering and sweet words, yet it is disgraceful. Do you dream for a moment that your proud family would receive as your husband, as the sharer of your property and wealth, a man unknown to them, one who has no family honours, no worldly distinction to boast of, and with whom you have picked up a casual acquaintance on the road? I tell you they would not. Go, therefore, I besecch you, to your home, and in after years I will send my Azeema to see you, and she shall pray for blessings on the noble woman who preserved her husband to her

She sat silent for some time; but the fire was not quenched within her; it burst forth with increased violence, when I vainly thought that my temperate words had quenched it for ever Again she bade me go but it was sulkenly and I left her

I had not been an hour in my tent when the slave again came to me But perhaps, sabib, you are tired of my minuteness in describing all my interviews with the Moghulnes?

No, said I, Ameer Ali; I suppose you have some object in it, therefore go on.

Well then, resumed the Thug the slave came to me and I was alone.

"For the love of Alla, said she, "Meer Sahib do something for my poor mistress! Ever since you left her she has been in a kind of stupor and has hardly spoken. She just now told me to go and purchase a quantity of opium for her and when I refeach, and fell at her feet, imploring her to recall her words, she spoke angrely to me, and said if I did not go, she would go herself. So I have pur chased it but alas! I know its fatal use and you alone can save her. Come quickly then, and spoak a kind word to her. I have heard all that has passed, and you have behaved like a man of honour but since you cannot pursuade her to forget you and relinquish her intentions, at least for the time fall in with her humour and agree to accompany her, on the promise that she will not seek to see you on the road and say that when you reach her jagheer you will have your marrange duly solemnized. On do thus for her sake! You said you could love her as a sister and this would be the conduct of a brother Well," said I, since the matter has come to this issue, that her life or death is m my hands, I consent; and I arose, and went with her

Oh, with what joy the unhappy girl received me! Long she hing upon my becom, and blessed me as her preserver and kinsed hist slave when she related what she had said to me, and that I had agreed to her wishes. It is to save your presons life, I cried, "that I thus expose myself to the meers and tunits of my friends and your own. Think on the sacrifice I make in losing their love, and you will behave cautiously and decently on the road we need nor meet—may we must not, the temptation would be too strong for us both but I swear by your head and eyes I will not leave you, and you shall travel in our company"

The slave had gone out and she drew towards me. Beware," said she, "how you decore me, for I know your sceret, and it you are unfaithful I will expose it your life is in my hands, and you know rt.

"What secret?" eried I in alarm "What can you mean?"

"I know that you are a Thug," she said in a low and determined voice, "my slave has discovered you, and a thousand encumstances impress the belief that you are one upon my mind—your men, the way you encamp, the ceremonies my slave has seen your men performing, and the freedom with which you go forward or return at your pleasure. All these are conclusive, and I bid you beware! for nothing that you can say will persuade me to the contrary, you have even now the property of those you have killed in your camp—you cannot deny it, your looks confirm my words"

I inwardly cursed the prying curiosity of the slave, and feared she had discovered us through one of our men with whom I had seen her conversing, and I determined to destroy him. But I had now fairly met my match, and though abrished for a moment, I replied to her

"Then, Shurfun, since you have discovered us, I have no alternative, we must be united—I, to save my life and the lives of my men, you, to save your own—It is a fearful tie which binds us, but it cannot be broken."

"I thought so," she said, "fool that I was not to have uiged this before! I might have saved myself the agony which I have endured. Now go, I will hear of you from day to day, and it may be that we shall have an opportunity of conversing unobserved. Now I am sure of you, and my mind is at ease."

I left her, but my thoughts were in a whirl, she had discovered us, and by the rules of our profession I could not conceal it from my associates Alla! Alla! to what would the communication I must make to them lead! Alas, I dreaded to think, yet it must be done

A long time I deliberated with myself whether I should expose the truth to my associates, and fain would I not have done so, but the peril we were in was so imminent, and the lives of my fifty brave fellows were so completely at the mercy of a woman, that I could not overlook the strict rules of my profession. I knew that it could only lead to one alternative, but it was her fate, and it could not be avoided either by her or me

As I expected, the fatal mandate went forth among us My men were astonished and terrified at the information Shurfun possessed, and after very brief consultation her fate was determined on Satisb, you will think the worse of me for this, but what could be done? We could not leave her, she would have alarmed the villagers, and they would have pursued us True, they could have done but little against us there, but they would have dogged us through the jungles, and at last have watched their opportunity and seized us Our next care was to endeavour to find out the person from whom she had gained the information, and I mentioned the name of him with whom I had seen the slave conversing Sahib, as I did it, his face bore the evidence of conscious guilt. He was a young man but httle known to any of us, and was one of the lughaces. He had accompanied Peer Khan in his last expedition and had behaved well, so well as to induce him to allow his accompanying us but by this act he had forfeited everything and it was but too plain that he had been seduced by the wifes of that intriguing and artful slave.

Observing his altered looks, I at once accused him of trenchery;

and my accusation was re-echoed by the voices of the band.

"He must die!" cried one and all "we could never carry on our work with the knowledge that there was one treacherous person with us and it is the rule of our order too. Who ever spared a timitar P

Miserable wretch," said I to him, why hast thou done this? Why hast thou been unfaithful to thine outh and the salt thou hast eaten? Didst thou not know the penalty? Hast thou not heard of hundreds of instances of treachery and was ever one pardoned? Unlappy man! thou sayest nothing for thyself, and the sentence must be passed upon thee Shame that the wiles of a wretched slave should so far have led thee from thy duty and exposed us all to peril!"

"Jemadar and he using "I have sinned, and my hour is come I ask not for mercy for I know too well that it cannot be shown me let me die by the hands of my own people and I am content and if my fate be a warning to them, I am satisfied. I was pure in my honour till I met that slave she told me that you were to marry her mutress, and that you had told her who you were. I thought it true and I conversed with her on the secrets of our band I boasted to her of the deeds we had done, and she consented to be mine whenever we could meet with a fitting opportunity Fool that I was, I was deceived yet I offer this as no pullintion for my offence. Let therefore Goordut kill me; his is a sure hand, and he will not fail in his duty

Goordut, the chief of our lughaces, stepped forward. me your death, said he to the fated wretch against you, but this is my duty and I must do it."

"I forgive you," he replied. "Let your hand be firm I shall offer no resistance, nor struggle; let my death pain be short."

Goordut looked to me for the agnal, I gave it, and in another instant his victim had expisted his crime by death he suffered passively and Goordut's hand never trembled. The body was taken from among us and interred and henceforward we had no treachery among us, nor did I ever meet with another instance save one, and that was successful you shall hear of it hereafter

There but remained to allot to the different members of the band their separate places in the ensuing catastrophe, and this done, I felt that I had acted as a good Thug, and that a misplaced pity had not influenced me during the transactions of the day

Strange was it sahib, that Shurfun, knowing who we were, should not, when she had discovered it, at once have fled from us! How she, a woman unused to and unacquainted with deeds of blood, could have borne to look on, nay, more, to have caressed and loved one a murderer by profession, whose hand was raised against the whole human race, is more than I have ever been able to understand I can only say it was her fate. She might, she ought to have avoided me, in every principle of human conduct her love for me was wicked and without shame, and a virtuous woman would have died before she had ever allowed it to possess her bosom. She might have cast me off when she said she would, and when her resolution was made to see me no more, but her blind passion led her on into the net fate had spread for her, and she was as unable to avoid it, as you or I shall be to die, sahib, when our hour comes

We started in company with her the next morning I was determined I would take no active part in her death, for I could not bear the thought of lifting my hand against one whose caresses I had allowed, and whose kisses were, I may say, still warm upon my lips Motee and Peer Khan were allotted to her, and one of her attendants was my share But hers was a large party, she had eight bearers, four sepoys as her guards, and her slave rode on a pony, which was led by another servant In all therefore they were fifteen individuals, and to make sure, thirty-five of my best men were to fall on them whenever we should meet a fitting place I knew one, a wild spot it was, where the jungle was almost a forest, and where for miles on either side there was no human habitation, and I intended, for greater security, to lead the party by a path which I had discovered on our way down, and which led into the thickest part of the jungle, where I knew our deadly work would be sure of no interruption

We reached the spot where the road diverged, which I intended to take, and after much opposition on the part of her bearers, I succeeded in persuading them to follow me, by telling them, both that the road was a short one, and that there was a stream of water which crossed it, whereas on the main track there was none

We gained the small rivulet, and I dismounted, my band surrounded their unsuspecting victims, and eagerly awaited the signal, but I wished to spare Shurfun the sight of the dead which she would be exposed to were she not the first to fall I went to her palankeen, and asked her to get out and partake of some refreshment I had brought with me, she objected at first, as she would have to expose herself to the rash grace of my men; but I told her I had put up a cloth against a tree, that it was but a few steps off and that veiled as she was, no one would see her "Your slave is there already" and I; "so come, she is proparing our meal, the first we have ever exten together

She stopped out cautiously closely muffled in a sheet, so that she saw not those who were with me, the palankeen too concealed her person, and as she areas from her sitting posture, the roomal of Motee was around her and she died instantly. Peer Khan held her hands, and the moment her breath was gone, be put the body mice

the palankeen and shut the door

"Now thus much is done said he, "we must finish the rest, and that quickly they are all off their guard, and washing and drink ing in the stream the men are at their posts. Burnilla! give the jkirnes!"

I sought my place and gave it. My own share was quickly done, and the rest too but one or two were unskilful, and the shricks of the unfortnate but too guilty share, among the rest, smote on my car and caused a pang to shoot to my heart at the thought that they had all died for the wretohed caprice of a wicked woman. I could not bear to look at Shurfan—the sight of her beautiful features would have overpowered me. I saw the lughness bear her away but I followed not. Her polankeen was broken into pieces and burned with her for one so young and so lovely?

Wrotch! cried L Ah, Ameer Ali, hadst thou no pity no remorse,

I might have fold it, white, but the fate of him who had died the day before was too fresh in my mind to allow me to show it that might have been mine had I done so. Besides, can you deny that it was her fate? and, above all, had I not eaten the goor of the Thoonize?

CHAPTER XXXI

SHOWING HOW AMEED ALL PLATED A DEEP GAME FOR A LARGE STARK, AND WON IT

AFTER all had been completed, we travelled on until we reached a small and wretched rillage some coss from the scene of our late adventure, where, after the customary sacrifice of goor the commider able booty we had gained was produced and distributed. There scene arcses a discussion as to our future proceedings. Some advised that we should return and go on to Nappoor many indeed were for this, and I also inclined to it. But Peer Khan gave better counsel, saying that by our thus going backwards and forwards on the same road, we should certainly be suspected and perhaps attacked, and that to expose ourselves to this, was not to be put in comparison with any chance of booty. He advised that we should make the best of our way towards Ellichpool, avoiding that town, and keeping near the hills, until we got out of the jurisdiction of Sulabat Khan, who, if he heard of us, would assuredly suspect us of the death of the nuwab, Subzee Khan, who had been his guest, and whose fate was generally known over the country, and attributed with justice to Thugs. After some further deliberation, we all agreed to his plan, and the next day, leaving the high road, we struck into a jungle track and pursued it, and I was heartly glad, after some days of weary travel, when, arriving at the pass near the deserted temples of Mookhtagherry, we saw the wide valley of Berar stretched out before us, covered with the still green and luxurious crops of jowaree and cotton

For some days previous I had had shiverings and pains all over my body, and my mind was restless and ill at ease. In spite of my efforts to throw them off, horrible dreams haunted me at night, and the figure of Shurfun constantly presented itself to my fancy—now in the fulness of her beauty, and now changed and distorted as she must have been in death, while at one time she was pouring out her tale of love to me, and at another upbraiding me with her fate. I had mentioned this to my companions, and many were the ceremonies which they performed over me to drive away the evil spirit which Motee declared had possessed me. But they were of no avail, and on the morning we reached the top of the pass I was so ill that I was obliged to be supported on my horse

What was to be done? To go into Ellichpoor was to run into the tiger's mouth, and all seemed to be at a loss whither to proceed.

However, on clearing the mouth of the glen through which the road ran, some of the men discerned a large village a very short way off, and came back with the welcome intelligence. I was sitting, or rather lying, at a miserable Goand hamlet on the road, and when I heard their news I remembered the village they spoke of, which I had passed the morning we left Ellichpoor with Subzee Khan, though I had forgotten its name. Thither, therefore, I begged they would carry me, and placing me upon my good horse, I was soon there, and made as comfortable as circumstances would admit of in the empty shop of a bunnea. But the fever raged within me, my whole frame was first convulsed with violent shiverings, which were succeeded by intense burnings. I remember no more of that day, nor indeed of many days after, for I lay insensible, and my spirit hovered between life and death

The first words I recollect after that terrible time were from my faithful attendant

'Shookr Lhoda! he exclaimed 'at last he has opened his oyes! and he ran and called Poor Khan and others to me. Where am I? I faintly asked, for in the violence of the fever

I had forgotten everything

"Shookr Lhoda! again exclaimed all "he speaks at last!"

I again repeated my question, and it was answered by Poor Khan.
Why do you not remember? said he here you are in the good village of Surragaum, within three coss of Ellichpoor and now that you have spoken all will be right, you will soon recover but we have been sadly anxious about you, for a worthy Mossul man, who is a hukeom, said only yestorday that you would die, and bade us prepare for your burial. He was wrong however and, Inshalla! you will soon see yourself at the head of your brave fellows again.

Alas Khan, I fear not, said I "for I am weak and helpless, and yes taying with me here only delays you to little purpose Leave me to my fate, and if it is the will of Alla that I should recover I will rejoin you at our home. I feel that I should be only a useless elog on your movements; for if I even get over this fover I shall scarcely be able to at on my horse for many a day to come?

"Forsake you, Meer Schib! nover! exclaimed all who were sitting round me. "Who will bury you if you die? or who will tend you if you recover? What words are these? Are you not our brother and more, our leader? and what would become of us if we left you ?"

Well, my friends, said I, deoply affected by their kindness, ance you prefer the bedade of a sick man to rouning in the wide and open country even be it so a few days will end your suspense, and either you will have to bury mehere or if it be the pleasure of Alla, I shall once more lead you to new enterprises.

But you must be silent, 'said Poer Khan, "for the lukeem said so and told us if you roused at all to send him word, as he had prepared some medicine for you which he would administer and hoped it would hasten your recovery. I will go and tell him the good news.

In a short time the khan returned, accompanied by an old and venerable person who, after feeling my head and body turned to the khan and declared that my state was satisfactory "But, said he,

as the fever proceeded from cold, which is still in his stomach, we must give him the medicine I spoke of. I have prepared it, and, being compounded of heating drugs, it will soon expel the cold, in duce perspiration, and, Inshalls! to-morrow he will be a different being though he will be weak for some time to come.

The draught was prepared, and though nausons in the extreme, I swallowed it, and by his directions covered myself with quilts and horse-cloths I was quickly in a profuse perspiration; and when the hukeem, who sat by my side all the time, thought I had been long enough under this treatment, he withdrew the coverings one by one, and taking my wet clothes from me I soon fell into a sound and refreshing sleep, from which I did not awake till the next morning's sun was shining on my eyelids

I felt so much refreshed when I awoke that I arose, but my head swam round and I fell I did not essay to repeat the exertion; but I was well I felt that I had thrown off the disease, and I was thankful Soon I had an inclination to eat, and after a slight meal of kicheree I was indeed a different being

Two days more restored me to convalescence, and I heartly wished to be again on the road towards home, but travelling on horseback was out of the question, as I could only walk a few steps with assistance, so, as Peer Khan voluntered his services, I despatched him to Ellichpoor to endeavour to hire a palankeen or dooly with bearers to carry me a few stages, or as long as I should find them necessary

He returned with them, and the next day, having remunerated the good hukeem, I gladly set out once again in company with my gallant fellows

We took the best road to Boorhanpoor, that through the valley of Berar, and close to the hills, and when we reached the old town of Julgaum, I felt myself so strong that I dismissed the palankeen and once more mounted my good horse

A joyful and inspiriting thing it is, sahib, to mount one's horse after a long and painful illness, and to feel once more the bounds of the generous animal under you, as though he, too, rejoiced at his master's recovery. He was, like myself, in high spirits, and I never enjoyed a ride so much as I did on that morning, the cool breeze fanned my thin cheeks as I rode along, now humouring my horse by allowing him to bound and caracole as he pleased, now exercising him on the plain, and again rejoining my band as they walked merrily along, apparently under the influence of the same joy as myself, and rejoicing to see me once more at their head

We met with no adventure till we reached Boorhanpoor, where we arrived on the tenth day after leaving the village at which I had been so near dying indeed we sought none. We found good quarters in one of the old serais in the town, and I was determined to stay there until we met with something to lead us on. Accordingly, men were daily sent into the different bazars, but seven days passed in idleness, and I began seriously to think that the death of Shurfun, which, though an inevitable deed, was against my faithful promises, had caused me to forfeit the protection of our patroness, in other words, I feared my good fortune had deserted me, and for once I proposed a grand sacrifice to Dôvee, and that omens should be consulted, in order to afford us some clue to our future proceedings.

It was done, and the omens were good- Propitious to a degree!" and Moteo who was our conductor in these matters 'we shall have good bunij soon, or these would never have been vouchsafed to

But another day passed, and still the sothaces reported nothing

The day after however about noon, Motes came to me.

You may know said he, that this place, from its wealth, is frequented by rokurrens, or trensuro-carriers, who bring money from Bombay and take it into Malwa to purchase opium."

I do said I "what of that? I heard as much from my father who hade me return this way in the hope of making up some of them. "Then, said he, I wish you to come with me, you and Peer Khan you have both sharp eyes, and I am much mistaken if I have not discovered eight of them. I have killed others of their tribe before now and I think I am not wrong when I say that these oaln amoa ora "Good," I replied, I will come " and accompanied by Peer Khan and Moteo we set forth to examine the men whom the latter had spoken of.

In an empty shop we found them. Wary as these people are, it was highly necessary that we should not excite their suspicion so we harriedly passed them, concealing our faces in our handkerchiefs yet from the casual glance I threw at them I was certain, from their stordy forms and the one camel they had with them as well as from a kind of restless and suspicious bearing that they were the men we were in search of. This was just the senson too they would be bearing treasure to make advances to the poppy cultivators in Malwa, as the seed of the plant would not be sown for another month at least.

I was satisfied yet how to insure their company I knew not, and many schemes passed through my mind before I could determine on anything At length I formed one, as I sat with my companions on a flight of steps leading down to the river and whither we often resorted to enjoy the fresh breezes and pure air from the noble river which flowed beneath us.

"I have been thinking said I, what we are to do to secure these fellows you know they are proverhally wary Both nodded assent.

"Well, I continued, "what think you of the following scheme? You and I, Peer Khan, will pretend to be travellers we will go now to our serm, throw dust and mud over our horses and durty our clothes, and taking two men and a pony heavily laden with us, we will go round the city, enter by the gate under the old palace, and pretending to be weary, halt close to them, we shall easily be able to worm ourselves into their confidence, and will then accompany them You, Motce, I will leave in charge of the band, and send you word what road we are to take You must be guided by circumstances, and contrive to let the men overtake me by twos and threes, some must go on before, so that we may come up to them, and in this manner, though the band will be scattered, yet, Inshalla! in a few marches we shall muster strong enough to do the work. We can keep up a communication with each other, so that, when the business is done we can assemble, and then hurry forward to our home But on no account must you be more than a stage behind us, and you must contrive to reach our halting-place a short time after we have left it Now say, my friends, will this plan do? or can you advise any other more practicable? if so, speak?"

"It is excellent," cried both, "and had wisdom for its father No time ought to be lost"

We returned to our serm, and towards the afternoon two as travel-stained and weary travellers in appearance as ever came off a long and fatiguing march were seen to enter the south gate of Boorhanpoor and traverse the bazars in search of shelter These were myself and Peer Khan, attended by my good lad Junglee and two other Thugs We passed and re-passed the shed, which was a large one, in which the rokurreas were, and feigning to have been denied room everywhere that we had applied, I at last rode up to them, and addressed myself to the most respectable among them, a fine tall fellow, with huge whiskers and moustachios

"Yaro!" said I, "you seem to be travellers as well as ourselves, and, for the love of Alla, allow us a little room to spread our carpets Here you have seen us pass backwards and forwards for many times, and yet there is not a soul who will say to us, Dismount and refresh yourselves Nay, we have been refused admittance into many empty places May their owners' sisters be defiled!"

"Go to the serai," said the man, "there is room there, and you will be comfortable"

"Indeed," said I, "we have tried it already, and it is full, some forty or fifty fellows were in it, who bade us begone in no measured terms, and in truth we liked not their appearance, having some valuables about us They looked very like thieves or dacoos—did hey not, brother?" said I turning to Peer Khan "Ah, indeed," said he, "who knows, if we had put up among them, whether we should not have had our throats cut? It was the mercy of Alla" continued by looking an electron.

the mercy of Alla," continued he, looking up devoutly, "that the place was full, or weary as we are we should have been right glad to have rested ourselves anywhere, for indeed I can hardly sit on my horse.

"You see," said I, "how we are situated. Hindoos though you be, you will not refuse us. The evening is drawing in, and we have ridden all day; a slight meal is all that we can hope to get, and then sleep will be welcome.

"Well," said the follow, it will be uncaril to turn you away so alight; and," cried he to one of his companions, do you, Doorjun, and some others move the camel's saidles and these bags nearer this way and there will be room for these Bhula Admess. As they were being moved I heard the money chink.

We dismounted, and m a short time our horses were rubbed down, and a meal propared for we had fasted that day on purpose. When we had eaten it, behold us scated in conversation with the rokurreas; and having already possessed ourselves of their intended route we agreed to accompany them for mutual security and in short were on as good terms with them as if we had travelled hitherto together. Our appearance, our good horses and arms assured them that we were soldiers, for I had told them we were in the service of Holkar returning from Poomah, where we had been on a mission to the pealitys, and bearing with us not only despatches, but some hoondess of large amount. In proof of that I pulled forth a bundle of papers from my inner vest, and touching my head and eyes with them, praised the manuficence of Bayee Rae and extelled the friendly terms he was on with Holkar.

This was my master-stroke; the idea had occurred to me when I was at the seral, and I had hastily collected a bundle of waste-papers and accounts, made them up into a packet, directed it to Holkar and scaled it with my own scal, which was as large as that of any prince in the country By Alla! sahib, they believed me to be what I represented, as surely as that they had heads on their shoulders, and forthwith began questioning me on the possibility of the peshwa and Holkar uniting to overthrow the Feringhees but I was mystemously close in my replies, just hinting that it was possible, and turning off the conversation to the marks of favour which had been shown me by Bajee Rao, about which I told enough lies to have choked myself and I pointed to my own noble horse as one of the peahwa's gifts. They all declared that he was worthy of the giver and of the possessor and, after agreeing on our stage for the morrow which was durant eight coss, they went to sleep with the exception of two, who sat guarding the treasure with drawn swords, and all believing that they were in company with an un known great personage.

Before I lay down to rest I despatched Jungles with the informa tion to Motee - I spoke to him openly in Ramasee, and he set off on his errand

"That is a queer language," said the jemadar of the rokuireas,

"The Telongoo," and I carelessly "I picked the lad up at Hyderabal two years ago for a small sum, and he is my slave, he understands our Hindee, but does not speak it"

Perhaps it was missise to have done it, but I spoke in so careless a manner that they concluded I had cont him out on some casual errand. Indeed, I told him to buy some tobacco and pan on his way back and as the serm was not far from where we vere, the time occupied in his going to it would not exceed that of an ordinary craind.

He returned with the p'n and tobacco, and told me they were ready but that the majority would remain the next day, and that seven of the hist, under Goordut, were then about to depart, the sext leaving one of their number as a scout in the village we were to halt at, would push on as far is they could beyond

I was satisfied, and to sure did I feel of the success of this adventure that I would have varied all I possessed that I killed the rokuriers in three days. We stated the next morning, and for two days saw none of our men, however Peri Khan augured well from it, saying the fellows were up to their work, and would appear in good time, and that it they came too soon our companions would take the alarm and be off

On the fourth day one of our companions appeared, we overtook him on the road, and as I larged purposely in the real, I learned from him that Goordut and his remaining men were in advance of us one march, and that some would join us that day and the rest the next

This was as it should be Four men joined us at the village we encamped at, and as we were now nine to eight, I begin to think on the probability of putting them to death by violence—I mean, attacking them with our swords on any opportunity which might offer. But it was dangerous, as they were individually stouter men than we were, good hands at their weapons, and as watchful as cats

The second day Goordut and his party joined us, but it was as much as I could do to persuade the rokurrens to allow them to travel in our company. They declared it was directly against their rules, that we must be aware of this, and that, if it was known by their employers that they even admitted one traveller into their society on the road, they would lose their reputation and means of subsistence

"But you," continued the jemadar, whose name was Bheem Singh, "you are respectable persons, who, for the honour of the government you serve would assist us against thieves or robbers and we travel in your company through these territories of Sindia as safely as though we had a rissala of cavalry to guard us. How over for our sakes, let not the tales of waylarers make any impres sion on your mind; depend on a rokurron s experience, they are not to be trusted; and even when by yourself always avoid associating with any one; no good can come of it, and much harm may ensue.

I promised to take his advice, and as I saw clearly that they would not admit any more of our band into their company and that a quarrel and separation from them would inevitably be the con sequence if I persisted in forcing any more upon them, I determined to finish the matter as I best could with the twelve men I had Junglee was worth but little, at least I counted not upon him, as he was a more stripling; but the rest were the very best of my band, all noted bhuttotes, and fellows who had good swords, and knew right well how to use them.

In the day therefore, we had a consultation; we met in a field of lowarce, which concealed us, and there we discussed the affair Peer Khan proposed to send one of the men back for Motoe and the rest, to tell them to pass us in the night without stopping and to allow us to overtake them early in the morning and as soon as the two parties were mingled together in passing each other that I should give the ikirnes.

The plan was very feasible, and the advice was good, as it placed the usue beyond a doubt I melined to it myself. Still there was no honour to be gained by it it would be large odds against a few and this I did not like, as I had a choice in the matter. At last I said, after musing some time, and listening to Peer Khan as he duscussed the measure, "No, no Peer Khan we are all of us young and fame is dear to us. If we kill these people in the old way and the booty is large, we shall no doubt get prame but think, man, on the honour to be gained, the good name! If we risk ourselves against these fellows, and are victorious, will not every Thug in the land cry Shabash! and Wah, Wah! and is not this worth an effort? I tell you a good name is better than riches and if it is our time to die, we cannot avoid it by calling up Motee and his people. They are, after all, only the refuse; and are we not the picked men of the band, and those on whom the matter would fall, even were the whole now present? Say therefore, will ye risk your lives against these fellows, and fall on them to-morrow morning ?

Sahib they did not hemitate one and all pledged themselves to follow me, and die with me should it be their fate.

"Then see your swords are loose in their scabbards, said I,

"and let each of you plant himself within striking distance of his enemy on his left hand. Peer Khan and myself are mounted, and we cannot ful. I feel assured that there will be no danger, and that we shall succeed."

We dispersed, and repoined our associates. The evening was spent in singing and playing on the siter, on which two of the ro-kurrers and some of my men were idepts, and we retired to rest at a late hour, fully prepared to do our work well and bravely on the morrow.

And the morrow came, and the sun rose in splendour, we set out soon afterwards for the robutions would not travel before it had risen, for fear of surpasse from thickes or dagoos, who generally full on travellers in the dark

Somewhat to my mortification, two of the roburrers mounted the camel they had with them, saving their feet were cracked and sore and they could not walk. This disconcerted me for a moment, for I thought they had suspected us, and I knew that most, if not all the treasure was liden upon it. But I affected no surprise, and was determined, if they showed the least symptoms of flight, to wound the camel and thereby prevent its getting away from us by the great speed I knew it passessed, for they had put it to its utmost the day before, to show me that it could outstrip a horse

We trivelled along until mid-div, and the fatigue and heat made us glad to dismount at a stream which crossed the road. I thought it would be a good opportunity to fall on them, but I was disappointed, they all kept together, and I was then satisfied that they half suspected our intentions, but I could not delay the attack long, and was determined to make it under any circumstances, for the rapid rate at which the rokuriers travelled was exhausting my men, who had much ado to keep up with them

By the merest good luck, about a coss after we left the nulla, we entered on a rough and stony track, which diminished the speed of the camel, whose feet were hart by the stones, and he picked his way cautiously, though I saw the men on his back used every exertion to urge him on. This slowness enabled my men to take their places, and we continued to proceed a short distance, but ready at any moment for the onset. I wished to get as near the camel as I could, in order to prevent its escape, but the road became worse, our pace still slower, and I was satisfied it could not be urged quicker. We were at this time all in a group, and I saw that the time had come. How my heart beat! not with fear, sahib, but with excitement—excitement like that of a gambler who has risked his all on a stake, and who, with clenched hands, set teeth, and half-drawn breath, watches the turn of the courses, which is either to ruin him or better his fortunes.

Peer Khan throw a glance towards me; one of the rokurrens was trudging along at his horse s shoulders, another was at the same place near mine; and the follows on the camel, with their backs turned towards us, were singing merrily one of the wild lays of the rupports, in which from time to time they were joined in chorus by those on foot, and by some of my men who know the words. Junglee was close behind the camel leading my pony and the others in the rear but all in their places. I cast but one look behind to see that they were so, and being satisfied I gave the jairzee—

Junglee, pan lao! I creed with a loud voice.

The swords of my party fashed brightly from their scabbards, and in an instant were buried deeply in the bodies of their victims and erimsoned with gore. As for mysolf I had cloven the scall of the fallow beneath me, and my sword sticking in the wound escaped from my hand as he fell. I threw myself from my horse to recover it, and only them saw the camel prostrate on the ground, monang terribly; the men upon it had fallen with it, but both had gained their legs: one had thrown himself upon Junglee, and the poor lad waged an unequal combat with him the other rushed on me with his sword uplitted. Sahih, I thought my end was come but I had time to disengage my shield from my back, and held it before me in defence, while I tagged in very desperation at my weapon.

Prinse be to Alla! It yielded to my great exection, and we were on equal terms. I have before told you of my skill as a swordsman, but I had met my match in the rokures he, though all his men were lying around him save one,—who having sorely wounded my poor attendant, was now closely pressed by Peer Khan and another was as cool and warr as myself. We fought well, and for a long time the contest was equal we were both out of breath, and our shelds handed with the repeated blows we had each caught on them. At last, as my foot slipped on a stone, he made a stroke at my head the blow was weak from his exhausted state, or it would have ended me: it cut through my turban, and slightly wounded my head.

I did not fall, though I was somewhat atunned by the stroke he might have taken advantage of the moment, yet he neglected it. Maddened by the thought of defent, I rushed on him, and by the violence of my attack forced him backward. At last, he too alipped as he retreated, and lost his balance his rused his sword wildly in the air to recover himself, but I did not lose my opportunity as he had done my blow descended with its full force, increased by a sudden lesp I made towards him, and he fell to the earth cloven through the neck and shoulder—he was dead almost ere he fell A moment I gased on the features of the braye rappoot, and then sought my poor led, from whom the life-blood was fast ching away, his wound was also in the neck, and the blood rushing into his throat was choking him

I tried to staunch it with my waistband, but ineffectually, it relieved him for a moment, and he asked for water. A leathern bag containing some had been tied to the camel by one of the men, and I put the mouth of it to his lips, he drank a little, and sat up, supported by Goordut

"I am killed," said he, "Jemadar, I die—my own blood chokes me—I cannot recover Do not leave my body to be eaten by the beasts, but bury it That fellow," continued he after a short interval, and pointing to one of the dead, "that fellow's sword killed me—I cut the hind sinews of the camel's leg, and it fell, I thought they would both be stunned, but he got up and attacked me, and I was no match for him—All the rest of you were engaged, or you would have helped me. But it was my fate to die, and I felt it yesterday, the bitterness of death then passed over me, but now I am content—the pain will soon be over"

Here he sunk insensible, and we stood around him weeping, for he was an affectionate lad, and we all loved him as a brother But he recovered again slightly, though the rattle was in his throat, and the blood hardly allowed him to speak

"My mother!" he said faintly, "jemadar, my mother! You know her, and my little sister. They will starve now,—but you will protect them for poor Junglee's sake?" And he strove to bend his head on my hand, as though to supplicate my assistance for them

"Fear not," said I, "they shall be well cared for, and while Ameer Alı lives they shall know no want" But I could hardly speak for weeping, for I knew the old woman, and many were the prayers she made for his safe return as she confided him to my care Alas! how should we be able to tell her his fate?

The poor boy was satisfied with my words, he would fain have replied to them, and his lips moved, but a torrent of blood checked his utterance, and raising his dull and glazed eyes to mine, he bowed his head on my hand, and died in the effort "Now," said I to the assembled Thugs, "I here swear to one thing, and ye are none of mine unless ye agree to it. I swear that whatever share would have come to this poor lad, it shall be doubled for his mother, as yet we know not what it is, but whatever it be, it shall be doubled."

"We agree," cried all, "nay, every man of us will add to it what he can Had Junglee not hamstrung the camel, which none of us thought of doing, it might, nay, would, have escaped for we saw its speed yesterday, and the two good rappoots who were on it would have carried it off"

"Ye are my own brothers for this good promise," I said, "and now some of you dig a grave for the poor lad. We must unload that beast and strip the bodies. For myself, I am in some pain and will wash my head and the up the out: so set about your work

aniokly

The camel still lay grouning they tried to raise it up, but in the stroke had divided the sinew above the hock, and it could not raise itself so one of the men cut its throat, and ended its The bags of treasure were transferred to my pony and Peer Khan s horse and mine, and every man also filled his waistband, so that we were enabled to carry it all off. We took the swords of the rappoots but everything else, and their bodies, were dragged into the ungle to some distance and hastily covered with carth and stones. The bloody earth on the scene of the conflict was collected and thrown away and in a very short time nothing remained to mark the spot but the carcass of the camel, which we could not dispose of and leaving the usual marks for the guidance of Motee and his party, we continued our march on the main road.

Ah, how great was our joy when, before we reached the stage we were to encamp at, and as we sat at the edge of a stream wash ing ourselves, we may on the brow of a rising ground we had just passed, our party coming up! They ran towards us in breathless anxioty and hope.

Motee was first, and he threw himself into my arms. "We hastened on, he said, from the last stage, hoping to overtake you in time and when we saw the dead camel, how great was our suspense till we could find you! We saw the traces of the conflict, and some blood which had escaped your notice,-which I have removed,-and that added to our anxiety but, Dévee be praised! we have found you at last, and you are all safe. Is it not so ?

"Not quite," I said "we have lost poor Junglee, who was killed in the fight, and I am wounded but the only a slight out, and a few days will heal it.

Some of the treasure was instantly distributed to the other ponies and encomping outside the village, when we reached it, after the accustomed sacrifice I had my small tent pitched, and all the treasure was conveyed to it. One by one the bags were opened, and glorious indeed was the booty-well worth the risk we had en countered! It commeted of dollars, gold mohurs, and rupees, to the value of sixty thousand rupees in all and there were also six strings of large pearls in a small box, sewn up in wax cloth, which could not be worth less than ten thousand more. I need not describe our 10v we had comfort, may affinence before us for years, and every one sat and gazed at the heap of treasure in allent thankfulness. Finally it was all collected and put into bags, which I scaled with my own seal.

We now hurried to our home, for we sought no adventure, nor needed any only two unfortunate wretches, who insisted on joining us, were killed, and in less than a month we were within three marches of our village. I despatched a man in advance to give notice of our approach, and Alla! how my heart beat with love and fond anxiety to see Azeema, and to press once more my children to my heart, after all the perils I had encountered! How intense was my anxiety to reach my own threshold, when I saw the well-known grove appear in view, the spot from whence I had departed so full of hope, and the walls and white musjid of the village peeping from amidst the trees by which they were surrounded! I urged my horse into a gallop, and I saw my father and Moedeen approaching to meet me, to give me the istulbal, the welcome of return, but, as I neared them, they hung their heads, and advanced with slow and mournful steps. A sudden pang shot through my heart. I threw myself from my horse and ran towards them. My father was weeping

"Speak, for the sake of Alla!" I cried "What can this be? Oh, say the worst at once, and tell me—is Azeema dead? this suspense will kill me"

A few words only the old man spake, as he told me that my child, my beautiful boy, was dead!

And Ameer Alı wept

CHAPTER XXXII

Lear — Dost thou know me, fellow?

Kent—No, sir, but you have that in your countenance which I would fain call master—Lear Act 1, Scene 4

Although the mind would ordinarily reject sympathy with the joys or sorrows of a murderer like Ameer Ali, one so deeply stained with crime of the most revolting nature, yet for the moment I was moved to see, that after the lapse of nearly twenty years by his account, the simple mention of the death of his favourite child could so much affect him, even to tears, and they were genuine. I leave others to speculate on the peculiar frame of the Thug's mind, how this one feeling of tenderness escaped being choked by the rank guilt that had sprung up around it, and will pursue my relation of his adventures.

Salub, he said, why should I now trouble you with an account of my miserable meeting with my loved Azeema? You can picture it to yourself Our souls had been bound up in that boy, and it was long ere we could bring ourselves to submit to the blow which the hand of Alla had inflicted But the poignancy of the grief passed away and our girl growing up in beauty, occupied our thoughts and engaged our care and attention.

Some time after we returned, my father one day come to me, and with concern on his countenance, declared there was a rumour that we were suspected, and that he thought our village was no longer a safe abede for us. We could risk nothing there might or might not be truth in the report, but it was our duty to secure a safe asylum; and accordingly he and I set out to make a tour of the different states as yet independent of the English, and to find out whether any of their rulers would allow us a residence on payment of a fixed tribute, such as our fintermity had used to pay to Sindia a government when our village belonged to that prince. We accordingly departed, and after usiting many rulers in Bandelkund (for we were sverse to going farther from our home) we were received by the rapah of Jihalone, and were introduced to him by Ganesha Jemadar who was under his protection, and who made him hand some returns from the booty he collected for his friendly conduct.

Our negotation was a long one the rajsh was fearful for some time of the consequences of harbouring us, or pretended to be so in order to enhance the favour he was conferring but we distributed bribes plentifully to his attendants and confidential servants, and at last succeeded in our object. We were to pay a tax of three hum dred rupces a year to his government, present him with anything rure or valuable we might pick up and, to preserve appearances, my father agreed to farm three villages situated a short distance from his capital. The whole concluded by our presenting to him one of the strings of pearls we had taken on the last expedition, my own beautiful sword, and other articles valued at hearly five thousand rupces. When we were thus mutually satisfied, my father and some of the men remained behind, while I and the rest returned to our village, to trung away our families.

I confess I left our home with regret many many happy days had been passed there, and we were beloved by the villagers, to whom we had endeared ourselves by our inoffensive conduct. We were now to seek a new country and form new ites and connections—a disagreeable matter under any accumatances. But my fathers awadom had saved us. The information the English officers had obtained—Alls only knows how—was correct. In a very few months after we were settled in our new abode, we heard that the whole Purgunna of Murnes had been attacked, village by village. Many of the best and bravest of the Thugs had died defending their homes; the surrivers had fled, routed and utterly disorganized, and had taken refuge with those who had made previous settlements as we had done.

For my own part, so long as my money lasted I was in no humour to expose myself to fresh risks I had, too, attained the highest rank possible among Thugs, for I had been declared a soobehdar immediately upon my return from the last expedition, and I was content to enjoy my ease, and assist my father in the management of the villages which had been confided to us, and by which we realized a comfortable income For the time, therefore, Thuggee was abandoned; and though often urged by Ganesha, who had a wild and restless spirit, to join him in an expedition, we refrained from doing so, and lived peacefully and respectably

There was something about Ganesha which to me was mysterious, and the instant I saw him at the court of the rajah, a thought flashed into my mind that I had met him before under painful circumstances. In spite of all my endeavours I could hardly ever shake it off sufficiently to be on any terms of cordiality with him, and I viewed with suspicion and distrust his intimacy with my father, and the evident effect his counsels had upon him. In person, Ganesha was tall and strong, but his face was more forbidding than any one I had ever before seen, and there was a savage ferocity about his manner which disgusted me. But let him pass at present, he has now little to do with my story, hereafter I shall be obliged to bring him prominently and disagreeably before you

Mearly three years passed quietly, and unmarked by anything which I can recall to my memory. I had no more children, and my daughter was growing up a model of beauty and grace. I was happy, and never should have dreamed of leaving home, had it not been for the bad faith of the rajah, and one unfortunate season of drought, by the former we were obliged to pay five thousand rupees, which he demanded under threats of discovering us, and by the latter we lost considerably in the villages we farmed, which were now seven in number, and for which he obliged us to pay the full amount of revenue. These sums seriously diminished our resources, and I began to look about me for men, to compose a band to go in search of more plunder. But they were not easily collected, for my own men had dispersed to distant parts of the country, and could not be brought together save at great expense and sacrifice of time

Just at this period it was rumoured through the country that Cheetoo and other Pindhareé chiefs of note would assemble their forces after the rains, at the festival of the Dusera, and had planned an expedition of greater magnitude than any ever before undertaken, an expedition which was sure to enrich all its members, and strike terror into the English Government. The idea suited me exactly I was a soldier by inclination, if not by profession, and I thought, if I could join any of the durras with a few choice men, well mounted we might make as good a thing of it as if we went out on an expedition of our own. The latter scheme, moreover, promised no success, for the roads would be infested by straggling parties of Pindharces, who were well known to spare neither travellers nor Thugs they looked on the last indeed with great enmity

Accordingly I set to work to make my preparations. Peer Khan and Motes still remained near us, and when I disclosed my plans to them they entered into them with great readiness and aborty. They had enough money to mount themselves well, and after a short absence returned fully equipped for the journey. I had told them to look out for a few really line fellows to accompany us, whom they brought; but our united means would not allow of our purchasing horses for them, and on foot they would be of no use. In debeting on our dilemma an idea occurred to me that the raph would perhaps lend or sell the horses on the promise of after and double payment. I had heard of such things, and I determined to try what could be done.

To my great joy the rajah consented, and with less difficulty than I had anticipated, for I had become a great favourite with him. I was allowed to take five horses from his stables, which were valued at three hundred rupees each, with their saddles and accountements, and this sum was to be doubled in case we returned successful. The right indeed thanked me for the hint I had given him, and many others obtained horses on the same terms, on group security for the performance of the conditions under which they took them.

My final arrangements were soon completed. We were all armed and accounted in the handsomest manner we could afford and a better mounted or more gallant-looking little party never set out in quest of adventure than I and my seven associates. Before we started we consulted the omens, which were favourable, and we per formed all the occamence of departure exactly as if we had been going on an expedition of Thugges.

In due time we arrived at Nemawir the residence of Chectoo. Here were collected men from every part of Hindostan, as various in their tribes as they were in their dresses, arms, and accountements. The country round Nemawir was full of them, and the town itself appeared a moving mass of himan beings, attricted by the hope of active service, and above all of plunder. We lost no time in presenting ourselves at the durbar of the chief and were gracoully received by him. I opened our conference in the usual manner by presenting the hill of my sword as a nuxsur and having dressed myself in my riobast clothes, I was instantly welcomed as if I had been a sir dar of roul, and had the command, not of seven men but of as many bundreds.

Observe was a fine-looking man, and a gallant leader He ought to have died on the field of battle, instead of in the miserable manner he did. No man that ever led a lubhur was juster in the division of plunder no one was ever more attentive to the wants and complaints of those under him than was Cheetoo Pindharee It was this which gained him so many followers, while his personal activity and hardihood stimulated his soldiers to exertion and emulation Nothing could the him, often have I seen him after a long and weary march, when it was as much as most of us could do to sit on our horses, dash out to the front and exercise his noble steed, which bore him gallantly, as though he were only returning from a morning's ride of a few miles

Cheetoo was, as I said, struck with my appearance, as I introduced myself as a poor syud of Jhalone, desirous of serving under him in his ensuing campaign

"Oh," said he, "from Jhalone you have travelled far, my friend, but nevertheless you are welcome, as every brave cavalier is who brings a good horse and a willing heart to the service of Cheetoo You know my conditions of service I give no pay, but as much plunder as your own activity can procure, the people will tell you what my share of it is, and I look to your honesty, for your face belies you if you are a rogue"

"I know the conditions," said I, "and will accept them, but I have brought a few friends with me who are desirous of sharing my fortunes, and, if it be the pleasure of the huzoor, I will bring them "

"Surely," he replied, "but now I am engaged, meet me with your men at the place of assembly in the evening, and I will see them and your horses, for the station I shall allot you in the durra depends on their fitness"

I made my obersance and retired I had made the acquaintance of one of Cheetoo's sirdars, a man by name Ghuffoor Khan, a perfect savage in appearance and deportment, a fellow who had Pindharee written on his face, and had served with much distinction in the durras of Dost Mahomed and Kureem Khan He had introduced me to Cheetoo, and now, as he accompanied me from the durbar, he gave me instructions how I was to proceed.

"You will meet us," he said, "on the plain beyond the town, and see that all your horses look well, that your men are well dressed and armed, and I will venture to declare that you are all placed in my division, which has the honour of leading, and is the first for fighting and for plunder I shall be glad to have you, and I will try whether I cannot get you the command of a hundred or two of my own risala We want leaders, and from your appearance I judge that you will do justice to my patronage"

"It is the very thing I have ever wished for," I said, "and if you will but favour me, I will do my utmost to please you It is true I have as yet seen no service, but that is easily learned when the heart is willing"

We separated and I hastened to my men to get them in readiness for the inspection of our new chief. Our horses had now rested from the futgue of the journey and were in high condition our arms were cleaned and sharpened. We provided ourselves with the long spear which is peculiar to the Pindharres, and of which thousands were on sale and at the appointed hour I led my little band to the place, where some hundred horsemen were already assumbled. I had dreased myself in the armour of Subree Khan, which was a magnificent ruit and my noble horse as he bounded and caracoled with me, seemed proud of his rider and glad that he had at last got into a scene suited to his flory spirit. Peer Khan and Motee were also striking figures, and nearly as well mounted as I was and the rest were as good, if not better than the majority of those who were new assembled.

"Keep all together" said I to them; "do not straggle or our party will appear more insignificant than it really is. When you see the chief coming watch my movements and follow me "

Long before sunset Chectoo issued from the town, accompanied by as gallant a company as could well be imagined. The leaders the different durras were all around him each surpassing the other in the richness and martial sir of his dress, his arms, and the trapings of his horse. Before him, making his horse leap and bound in a wonderful manner rode Ghuffoor Khan, clad in chain-armour which glittered in the red rays of the exting sun. No one equality him in appearance, though many were noble-looking cavaliers—and no one appeared to manage his steed with the case and grace that he did.

"That is the man! I cried with enthusiasm to Peer Khan that is the man we are to serve under is he not a gallant fellow? Now follow me. And I creamy my important horse the real and that is the man we are to serve under is he not a guilant fellow? Now follow me. And I gave my impatient horse the rein, and dashing onwards was in an instant at the side of Cheetoo, accoming and by my men. I dropped my spear to the ground, as I threw my horse back on his haunches close to him, and making an obeissnee down to my saddle-bow said that I had brought my men as he had directed, and awaited his orders.

Cheetoo checked his horse, and for a moment surveyed me with delight.

"You are a fine young fellow he said at length, and your men are excellently mounted. I would there were as many hundreds of you as you have companions. However something may be done. What say you, Ghufloor Khan, will the Meer Sahib serre with you? and have you a few hundred men to put under him?"

May I be your sacrifice!" orned the khan, "t is the yeary thing

May I be your sacratice!" orned the khan, "tis the very thing your servant would have proposed. I liked the Meer Sahib from the moment I saw him and now that he is properly dressed, by Alla! he is a very Roostum, and the only fit companion for himself (forgive my insolence) that Ghufloor Khan sees"

"Then be it so," said Cheetoo, "take him with you, and see that you treat him kindly"

"Come," cried the klim to me, "come then, Meet Salub, take a tilting-spear from one of those fellows here is a rare piece of ground, and I must see whether you are master of your weapon"

"I ferr not," said I, "I know little about the spear On foot and with the sword I should not fear the best man of the army, nevertheless, to please you, I will try"

I took the spear, a long light bumboo, with a large stuffed ball of cotton at the end of it, from which depended a number of small streamers of red cloth, and following Ghuffoor Khan, dashed forwards into the plain

We pursued each other alternately, now advancing to the attack, now retreating aimidst the plandits of the assembled horsemen, who looked on with curiosity to see how an utter stranger would behave against the most accomplished cavalier of the army. For a long time neither of us had any advantage over the other, our horses were admirably trained, and neither allowed the other to approach within reach of the spear-thrust. This was the great nicety of the tilt, and cries of "Shabash! Shabash!" resounded at every baffling turn or successful escape from a meditated blow. At last the khan touched me, it was but a graze, which I received on my arm, having delayed for an instant to turn my horse, and he cried out that he had won

"I own it," said I, as our horses stood panting for breath, "for I am, as you know, a novice at the use of the weapon, yet if you will give me another trial, I will again closs spears with you, and see if I have not better luck"

"Good," cried he, laughing, "but look out, for I wain you I shall not be merciful, a sharp blow on the ribs of a young hand teaches him his vulnerable point, and causes him to be careful ever after"

"Come on," cried I, "if I can I will return the compliment"

We again took a large circle, and at a good canter approached each other till we were nearly within spear's length. The Khan was as good as his word, and made several desperate lunges at me I avoided them, however, by the quickness of my horse, and I plainly saw that he could by no endeavour approach near enough to me to strike a decisive blow. His horse, too, being fatter, was more blown than my own, and after allowing him to weary it still more for some time in a vain pursuit of me, I suddenly changed my position and became his assailant. I believe I was more cool and wary than he was, for he appeared veved that a stranger should be on such equal terms with him at his favourite exercise, he did not parry my lunges with the same precision as in the first encounter, when, notwithstanding all my efforts to touch him he avoided and laughed at Still I land not touched him and growing weary of my close nursuit, he endeavoured to turn again and become the assailant but whether his horse was slow in wheeling round or whother I was too near to allow of his avoiding the blow I know not but as he endeavoured to cross behind me I wheeled my horse suddenly struck my heels into his sides, and as he gave his accustomed bound of some yards, struck my spear full on the broad chest of the khan, on some yirts, states my spear that on the other chart of the same who was somewhat stunned by the blow. A loud shout from these around us proclaimed my victory and the khan himself though abashed at his defeat, was one of the loudest in my praises to the chief himself

"By Alla!" said he "thou art no stranger at this work, Meer

Sahib thou hast played me a trick.

"I swone by your beard and the Koran that I have not Khan. I cried at was the result of chance. Alla knows that two days ago I had never had a spear in my hand. I only observed what you did when you list me and to my good horse I owe my fortune. But it was all chance and though I prize the victory yet I regret that such a chance should have hurt you.

Nay I am not hurt Synd, he replied, and I bear these things with good humour but if you are as good a hand with the sword as you promise to be with the spear there will not be a man in the camp to stand before you."

"It would be boustful in me to challenge any one, and I " see ing that I am a stranger among you yet if the noble Cheetoo wishes to try me, I will every what I can do to morrow

Good, good! oried all and Cheetoo himself, vastly pleased with the result of my encounter with Ghuffeor Khan, bade me pre-sent myself carly at his residence, where he would my to a few good awardsmen to attend and see us exercise.

CHAPTER XXXIII.

HOW AMHER ALL COMPUTED HIMSELF IN HIS DEBUT AS A PINCHAREE, AND HOW THE SAMOURARS OF COMPACIES BECEIVED THEIR DAWEL-COME VISITORS

The next afternoon we were all assembled on a small plain outside the town Chestoo had spread his carpet after the manner of a pin dharce, and sat with his chiefs around him, promising by his demeanour to be an eager spectator of the encounter He was remarkably civil to me and asked me to set by him until a few men, who were ready had duplayed their dextenty and prowess. On the signal being given by him, two stout rajpoots leaped into the circle and clattered their sticks on each other's shields for some time without either touching the other

"Does this please you "said Cheetoo to me "Those fellows are good hands, you see, at their weapons neither would have drawn blood had they had swords in their hands"

"They are expert enough," said I, "but methinks they have played together before and know each other's ways, they make a great show, but if I may be pardoned, I think neither has much real skill If my lord wishes, I will try either of them"

"Take care you are not over-matched," said he, "I would not have your fair fame sullied You have already interested me much ın your behalf"

"Do not fear for me," said I, "I will do my best"

I stripped myself to my trousers, and girding a handkerchief tightly about my waist, I stepped into the circle, where one of the men, who had now rested from his first encounter, awaited me—I took a stick and a small shield made of basket-work from Peer Khan, who had brought them, and advanced to the centre—There were murmurs among the assembly that I was over-matched, for they contrasted my slight form with the tall and brawny one of my antagonist; but I was not to be deterred by this—I knew my skill, and that mere personal strength would avail but little against it

"How is it to be?" said I to the rapport "Does the first fair blow decide between us?"

"Certainly," he replied "I shall strike hard, so be on your guard"

"Good," said I "now take your post"

He did He retired to one edge of the circle and advanced on me leisurely, now stooping and leaning his shield-arm on his knee as he rested a moment to survey me, and now circling round me, first rising on one leg and then on the other, and waving his stick in the air

I stood perfectly still and in a careless attitude, but well on my guard, for I knew that I should hazard something in moving after him. It was evident to me that he did not expect this, for he seemed for a moment irresolute, but at last he rushed on me with two or three bounds, and aimed a blow at my head. I was perfectly prepared, for I knew his mode of attack, I received the blow on my shield, caught the stick under it, and rained such a shower of blows on his undefended person as completely astonished him

The assembly rang with plaudits, and the other iajpoot stepped forward and saluted me

"You have had but short work with my friend Bheem Singh," said he, "but now you must try me"

"I am ready I replied; 'so get to your post
I had now an antagonist worthy of me. He knew my system of play and verily I thought myself for the moment engaged with my old instructor but I had used to vanquish him and I did not icar the man before me. We were seen hetly engaged he was as cool and wary as myself and after a long conflict in which norther had the advantage we rested awhile, both out of breath.

Enough enough! eried Cheetoo you have both done brayely; neither has won and you had better let the matter stand

OR 15 18.

Not so Khodawund," said I let us finish it. One of us must win and my friend here desires as much as myself to see which of na is the better man. Is it not so ?

Ay said the fellow laughingly "the Nuwab Sahib knows that no one as yet has overcome me but I have fairly met my match, and whoever taught you was a good master and has had a disciple worthy of him.

"As you will said Cheetoo " only play in good humour let no fend grow out of it

We both saluted him, and assured him we could not quarrel, and that whoever was victor must entertain a high respect for his onponent.

And to it we set again, as we had now recovered our breath Victory for a long time hovered between us, now inclining to the one and now to the other we had both lost our footing once or twice and the spectators would have had us leave off but excited as we were it was impossible—we stopped not for their exclaims tions. I was put to my last shifts to avoid the well-directed blows of the rapport he had better wind than I, and this obliged me to alter my mode of play hitherto I had attacked him; I now only warded off his cuts, but watched my opportunity In his eagerness, thinking by a succession of blows he could beat down my guard, he exposed his side, and my stick descended on his ribs with a sound which was heard by all, and with a force which fairly took away his breath had my weapon been a sword, I think I should have out him in two.

"Fairly won! cried Cheetoo; fairly and bravely won! Ram deen Singh, thou hast lost, but it is no disgrace to thee. Come to me by and I will reward thee "

The rappoot laughed, and I was glad he bore the defeat so good humouredly for I had expected the contrary he allowed that he had been vanquished, and cried out to all that it had been a fair en counter and that he had used the atmost of his skill "So beware," he continued, how any of you engage the Meer Sahib you all know what I am, and I have been fairly beaten

I was delighted with the noble fellow, and addressed Cheetoo numself

"I crave a boon, Khodawund, and if I may hope to have it granted, I will speak "

"Say on," he replied, "I will grant it readily"
"Then," said I, "let this brave fellow be placed under me your favour, a stranger has been entrusted with the command of part of the harawul (advance-guard), and I would have both these impoots with me, and be allowed to entrust fifty men to the one and twenty-five to the other"

"Good," said Cheetoo, "let it be so, and do you, Ghuffoor Khan, look to it that it is done, these are the men who will serve us best in the time of need"

A few days more I was fauly installed into my new charge tune had favoured me far above my expectations, and I saw naught before me but a career of distinction under my new master True, I was no longer a leader on my own responsibility, but the rank I held was honourable, and perhaps far above my deserts I seized an opportunity which presented itself, and wrote a full account of the whole to my father and Azeema, for I knew that they would rejoice at tidings so new and unexpected

Our time passed in the camp in the manner I have related the mornings I was a constant attendant upon Cheetoo, who raiely allowed me to leave his person during his inspections of the constantly arriving new adventurers, and the evenings closed with feats of strength and trials of skill, in which I sustained the reputation I had begun with I never spent a happier time than the month I was at Nemawui, in every way so gratifying to me, and so consonant to my previously formed wishes

At last the festival of the Dusera arrived, and it was held with great pomp and show A grand review of all the assembled adventurers was held, a muster taken, and it was reported that five thousand good horsemen were present, and this number, with their followers, and with those indifferently mounted, was augmented to nearly eight thousand—a gallant band, ready to do the bidding of their chief, and to carry war and devastation into the countries before them

It was planned that we should separate into two bodies soon after passing the Nurbudda, penetrate as far as the Kistna river to the south, and, should we find that fordable, then press on as far south as we could, without exposing ourselves to encounters with the regular armies of the Feringhees, which we were assured, although at present mactive, could speedily be sent in pursuit of us Accordingly, as the morning broke, the whole camp was in motion, and a noble sight it was to see durra after durra defile before their chief and hurry onwards at a rapid pace. Boats had been provided at the Nurbudda, which we crossed the same day and took up our ground near the town of Hindu on its southern lank

At this point the army separated. I remained with my division and Chectoe, and we pushed on the day after taking a direction to the westward so as to come upon the river Taptee, up the valley of which we were to proceed till we should reach the territories of the raigh of Nagpoor with whom a treaty had been previously made to allow us a free and unmolested passage through his dominions on the condition that they were not to be plundered. The other division under Synd Bhockoo, a leader of note and only second to Chectoo, took a direction to the enstward, along the bank of the Nurbudda, until they reached the grand road to Nagpoor by which it was their intention to travel.

Meanwhile we proceeded by mpid marches for we were eager to reach the scene of our operations, as our money was running short, and without plunder we should starve We heard that there was a small detachment of regular troops under Major Fraser watching our movements but our spies told us they were few in number and we were under no apprehension of an attack from them at was reported that they did not exceed three hundred men, and we vainly thought they would not dare to face as many thousands. But we had not sufficiently estimated their bravery. We knew they were upwards of fifteen coss distant from us, and what infantry could make that march and attack a body of horse like ours?

They did, however attack us We had arrived at our ground near a village on the Taptee, and some were cooking their morning meal, others lounging idly about the camp or lying at full length on their saddle-cloths, when the alarm was given that the Feringhees were upon us. The scone of confusion which ensued is indescribable. Men hurried hither and thither anything like organization was past all hope each, as he could gain his horse, threw himself upon it and flod for his life not a man stood In vain I entreated those with me to rally and make a charge on the small body of red-coats which was now drawn up in line close to our comp, and was pouring volley after volley amongst us with destructive precision. Not a man would hear me and though my own Thugs and a few of my division swore they would die if I were to lead them on, I saw no chance of success; and as one or two of my men had fallen near me, we too at length turned our horses heads and fled. We were not pursued, though there were some horsemen with the infantry who had they not been the most arrant cowards, would have charged after and engaged us.

I must say I longed that they should, and I kept my men, nearly a hundred, in a close body while from time to time we faced about and shook our spears in defiance at the body of horse, about our own number, who, however, did not stir We saw the infantry once more put in motion, take possession of our camp, which, with the thousands of temporary screens from the sun standing here and there, and the fires burning under half-cooked victuals, must have been a welcome resting-place to them after their long march. They must have gained a considerable booty, for many a man threw himself on the bare back of his hoise, leaving a well-lined saddle behind him to the victors

Our surprise and rout was complete, and if the enemy had had a larger body of infantry, or any good cavalry with them to have followed us, we might have bidden adieu to all hopes of future plunder, and most likely should have taken our way to our respective homes and abandoned the expedition As it was, however, we found we had not lost more than a hundred men, and three days afterwards

we were again reunited, and in as good spirits as ever

At length we debouched by almost untrodden paths from the hills to the eastward of Ellichpoor, and from among the dense jungles I had before traversed, after the affan with the Moghulnee tered the territories of the Nizam near the liver Wurda, which we crossed, and in one march of nearly twenty-five coss reached Oomraotee, which it appeared had been the object of our leader from the first I have once before described its riches and prosperity, and it was then far richer than it is now

As we rushed along, more like the flood of a mighty river than aught else, every village on our route was instantly deserted by its inhabitants and left to our mercy They were one by one ransacked for treasure, and in some of the largest much booty was obtained I was fortunate in leading the advance-guard on this day, and well do I remember the excitement of the moment, as we passed the last defile in the hills, and rushed in a body into the plain Well do I nemember waving my sword to my companions,—whose numbers were now swelled to nearly five hundred splendid fellows, often increased by parties from the rear,—as I showed them the broad plains of Berar, and told them that we had unlimited power to plunder as we listed!

Ghuffoor Khan envied me that day, he had been detained with Cheetoo, who remained with the main body, while my own harawul was increased, in order that I might advance and surround Oomraotee On we dashed! The few villages we surprised were quickly laid under contribution; and rupees and gold and silver ornaments were tendered, almost without our asking, by their terrified inhabitants As we proceeded, the news that we were coming had spread through every village, and thousands of the people were seen flying from their homes, while a few only remained in each, with an offering to me, accompanied by entreaties not to burn their villages. Nor did I though from the pillars of smoke which not long afterwards arose in every direction behind us I too justly thought the main body had been less mercaful than we had. We reached Comnatee towards evening There were but fow soldiers to guard this important post, and they had fled on the news of our approach we ilierafore entered the town unchecked and unopposed. How different was my present from my former visit!

I directed my course to the main street, where I know I should find the principal sahonkars and, after stationing parties of my men at each end and at the different outlets, I rode into the middle of the chouke or market place, and dismounted among the leading men of the town, who had a carpot spread, and were prepared, as they said, to do us honour

But few words of greeting passed, for ours was no cordial visit, and each party was bent on driving the hardest barrain

Come contlemen, said I after I had listened for some time to their vain protestations of poverty and mability to raise a sum adequate to my desires, "this is mere fooling. You have offered a lakh of rupees do you think the noble Cheetoo will be satusfied with this?' I swear by the Koran he will not, and you had better at once be reasonable and lusten to my words. The whole lubhur will be here before it is dark, and if any of you will take the trouble to ascend one of your tall houses, or one of the bastions, you will see how Pindharees mark their progress. Many a fine village behind me has not now a roof or tree standing and your good town will assuredly share the same fate if you trifle with us and not only will it be burned, but your property will be handed over to the tender merces of my men-sy and your wives and daughters also so I give you fair warning. You have no force to oppose us and if you refuse, I am desired to tell you that we shall stry here for some days and amuse ourselves by inspecting the interior of your houses Go therefore, be wise, consult among yourselves, and before the shadow of this tree has lengthened the measure of my sword (and I had it on the ground) bring me an answer worthy of your name for wisdom and liberal withal beyond that time I give you not a moment your houses are close at hand, and Inshalls | we will help ourselves.

Well spoken! cried all the men who were around me but, Meer Sahib, why not help ourselves at once? These singy merchants can have no idea of the wints of men of honour like ma, who have a long journey before us.

You shall hear what they say ruplied I meanwhile, let us be quiet and orderly and let none of you interrupt their consultations, or offer violence to any of the townsecoile.

The time had nearly elapsed, and the hilt of my sword was all that remained in the sunlight. The council of the merchants was, from all appearances, as far from a decision as ever, if I might judge from their angry debate and the unsettled and anxious expressions of their countenances

Eagerly I watched the increasing shadow, as from time to time I called to them that the period allowed had nearly elapsed, at last the bright hilt of my sword glittered no longer, and I took it up amidst a shout from my men The merchants saw my action, and again advanced in a body towards me

"Sit down, Meer Sahib," said the fattest of them, who appeared to be the chief, "sit down, let us talk over this matter calmly and deliberately That business is always unsatisfactory which is done in a hurry and with heated minds"

"No!" I exclaimed, "I will not standing as I am, I will hear what you have to say Remember, when I draw my sword the plunder begins, and though I have some influence over these brave tellows while they expect a reasonable offer from you, yet the instant they are disappointed my power ends, and I will not answer for any of your lives?

"Come aside with me for a moment," said the chief merchant, "I would speak with you apart you need fear no treachery from a sahoukar !"

We all laughed heartly "No, no," said I, "I fear naught, and will come And do you, my good fellows," I added, turning to my men, "see that none of these worthy persons escape"

"Well," said I, when we had gone a few paces from the group, "what would you say? Be quick my men are impatient, and your houses and shops are provokingly and temptingly near"

"Listen then," replied he "you are a leader, and by your conduct doubtless have the influence you appear to have You have not more than five hundred men with you, we offer you, therefore, ten thousand rupees as your own share, one thousand to each of your sirdars, and one hundred apiece to your men, this will be nearly a lakh of rupees, and we will take our chance with the main body. What do you say? be quick and tell me, for the money is at hand, and can be easily distributed before the main body comes up"

I pondered awhile, I knew Cheetoo would make his own terms, and I did not see any harm in getting as much as I could of the spoil before he came I knew also that he expected ten lakhs, and would get it, or nearly the sum, by fair means or foul again," said the sahoukar, you are in advance, you have naught to do but take your money and push on, and any village before you will shelter you for the night, what will Cheetoo know of it?"

Nay," said I, here we remain after a march of twenty five cost, we are in no humour to proceed. But I will take my men out side the town on the instant payment of one lake of repects re member one third of what we get goes to the chief and our share after all is not much

Agreed, said he; now come to your men and porsuade them to be quiet they will not get so much by violence as by treating us welf.

We returned to the group we had left, and I unfolded to them the proposition which had been made to me it was welcomed with a loud shout which made the air ring and was then succeeded by loud cres for the money

The sum had evidently been collected previously for in a few moments a line of man, heavily laden with legs of rupoes, issued from a line oless to where we were sitting. Duffs by duffs of the Pindharces, each headed by its own duffadar was brought up to the spot; each man received his hundred rupoes, each leader his thou sand, which were stowed away in the capacious legs of their saddles.

You have not cared for yourself, Meer Sahih," said Peer Khau

" you have taken nothing

"Oh, do not fear for me," I replied; I shall get my share; the bog does not look large, but it will hold gold.

His eyes brightened. That is right, he said "the others must not know of it."

Not a syllable it is known only to you and myself. Now we must take care these rateals commit no excesses; they seem half in the humour to run riot in the town.

They seem content," he replied; at least, I for one am. By Alla! Meer Sahib this is rare work a thousand rupees in a morn ing sinds is better than our own profession, though we have been lucky in our time.

Choop! said I, silence! This is no time for our secrets. Away with you! See that the men take up ground before the town. I will remain here with some others, and see what becomes of the place when Cheetoo arrives."

One by one the Pindharces left me, except a few who stayed by my desire and our business at an end, I sat down and awaited Chectoo sarrival.

What do you think he will nak? said my fat friend to me.

I know not, I answered but you had better be liberal at once, or he will sack your town, and you know what Pindharees are they have fow scruples, and some of you may be tortured.

A general shudder ran through the assembly at the thought of the torture, and I saw I had made a lat. Yes, I continued, there are such things as kerlas, and your fat backs would soon be laid open, besides, there are fellows who are rare hands at tying up fingers and hitting them on the ends, which is not agreeable, I should think, also at mixing compositions for those bags to be tied over your I have heard of even still worse contrivances to persuade obstinate sahoukars, but ye are wise men—ye will be warned"
"Say at once, Meer Sahib," said another of the merchants who had not yet spoken, "say what we should offer, and how many Pindharees are there? We have heard there are five thousand"

"Somewhat below the mark, Sethjee," said I, "we are little under ten thousand, I think However, you will see the lubhur, and judge for yourselves As for the sum, I should say, in the first place, a lakh of supees for Cheetoo himself-I know he expects as much, then there are three sirdars, Heeroo, Ghuffoor Khan, and Rajun—fifty thousand apiece, then each minor leader and duffadar a thousand, and every good Pindharee a hundred Say, have I

"Bhugwan protect us!" cried one and all, "we are ruined and dead men Why this would be at least eight lakhs of supees, where are we to get such a sum? We are ruined and better kill us at once"

"No, no, my good friends, not so," said I "All the world knows that Comnactee is the nichest town in the country, ay, nicher than Hyderabad itself, and that the money may be counted, not by lakhs, but by clores, so talk not to Cheetoo of your poverty, for he will presently prove whether you he or not Trust me, your safest plan is to offer him a large sum at once, for he has a long journey before him, the men have got nothing since we left Nemawn, and they are bungry and thirsty"

"I tell you all," said the fat sahoukar, "the worthy Meer Sahib speaks the truth. Bhugwan has sent this gurdee (calamity), and we must be resigned to our fate Better far is it to give the uttermost farthing, than to see our wives and daughters dishonoured before our eyes I have spoken"

"Good!" cried I, "now you speak like wise men, and I will give you further advice Cheetoo is a great man, and loves to be paid honour, as indeed is due to him, so also do the other leaders Now get you pan, uttur, and spices, make up a proper tray of them, bring a few handsome shawls, and as he takes his seat, one of you throw a pair of the best over his shoulders and those of the other chiefs, and lay your nuzzurs before him as you would before Sikundur Jah himself, Inshalla! you will find favour in his sight, and where you would have to pay ten lakhs you will get off with half the sum, and save your town besides"

"By Gunga! 't is well said!" cried several "Meer Sahib, you are a kind friend and give good advice, without you we should not have known what to do"

Again said I 'let none of you have long faces, but all look as you were rejoiced at his coming. Be none of you alarmed be fore you have cause. Pay you must and therefore do it with as good a grace as you can

The assembly drank in my words, as I by turns advised and alarmed them, in order to keep up the spirit I had infused and in this manner the time passed until the dusk of evening when, by the noise of the trend of many horses feet and the firing of matchlocks we were assured of the approach of the main body

"Now stick by us, cried the sahoukars as they crowded round me you are our friend and must present us we will not be afraid. But their words behed them, for the teeth of one and all were chattering with fear and their cheeks blanched at the thought of confronting the renowned Pindharco chief.

Chectoe came and riding into the chonks, surrounded by a crowd of wild looking figures, the effect of whose appearance was materially increased by the dask of the evening his titles were screamed out by a dozen months, each vying with the other in exaggeration of his newers.

The group of sahoukars, headed by me, advanced towards him and the head morehant, rubbing his forehead on the chief's stirrup, amplored him to alight and refresh himself, adding that a zenfut had been propared, and all were desirous of presenting their nuzzurs

I seconded the request, and he exclaimed, Surely I know that voice whose, in the name of Shitan is it?

That of your slave, Ameer Ali, said I.

Oh, then all is right, he cried "and then too hast turned sahoukar How is this, Meer Sahib?"

May I be your sacrifice, Nuvabl" said I I have but mingled with these worthy persons, because they declared they should be annihilated at the night of the splendour of your appearance. I did but console them and keep up their spirits till my lord arrived.

Thou hast done well, said Cheetoo. Is everything prepared?

"All, cried the sahoukers; "if the noble Cheetoo will but alight, we are prepared to do hun honour

He alighted, and led by the hand by the chief merchant, he was conducted into an adjoining house, which belonged to one of the merchants, and where a clean white floor-cloth had been spread, and a missind placed. The room too was well lighted. Cheetoo took his seat, and looked around him with evident gratification savage as his countenance was, it now wore a smile of triumph, yet mixed with an expression of extreme pleasure.

"These are cavilised people," said he to Rajun, his favourite, who was close to him. I little expected this did you?

"Indeed, no," said he, "I thought we should have had to cut our way into the town Depend on it, this is some of Ameer Ali's doing ?

"Likely enough," said Cheetoo, "he is a gentleman, and knows how a gentleman ought to be received But for him it is most probable these swine would have shut themselves up in their houses, and given us the trouble of pulling them out But see,—what are they about ?"

I was nudged by the sahoukar, who, whispering, implored me to ask Cheetoo to accept their nuzzui "Five hundled rupees for you if he takes it," again he whispered as I pretended to hesitate "Agreed," said I, "I will revenge myself if it is not paid"

"By Gunga! by my Junwa!" again said he most earnestly, "nay, I will double it Speak for us, good Meer Sahib, are you not our friend and our brother?"

"What are those sons of asses talking to you about?" cried

Cheetoo "Why don't they speak out?"

"Khodawund!" I said, "the terror of your name has preceded you"—and he smiled grimly,—"and your appearance is in every way so imposing and sui passing the accounts these men have heard, that, by Alla ! they are dumb, and though they would fain lay a nuzzui at youi feet, in every way befitting your high lank, they have not words to express their desires, and have begged your slave to inform my lord of them"

"Kubool, Kubool I agree," cried Cheetoo, "let the trays be brought Verily a nuzzur from the sahoukars of Oomraotee ought to be worth seeing"

Fifteen trays were brought in, covered with 11ch velvet coverings, and set down before the musnud, one by one then covers were nemoved, and indeed it was a goodly sight! Dates, pistachio nuts, sweetmeats, and sugar-candy filled four, the rest contained cloths of various kinds, European and Indian, muslins, chintzes, rich turbans, and Benares brocades It was a nuzzur fit for a prince, and Cheetoo was delighted

"Now," said I to the sahoukar, "this is a happy moment, where are the shawls and the ashruffees? Have a stout heart, and throw the shawls over him, as you would over one of your own tribe at a marriage ''

The sahoukar took the shawls from an attendant, and putting five ashruffees upon them, advanced to the feet of Cheetoo, and having made the tusleemât, or three obeisances, he presented the gold, and unfolding the shawls, which were very splendid, dexterously enveloped the chief's person in them, and then retreating, stood with his hands folded on his breast in an attitude of respectful humility

CHAPTER XXXIV

The sons of Fortune she has sent us forth To thrive by the keen action of our wits, Which backed by fearful dread of our bright swords, Doth fill our purses speedily

CHEETOO was oridently flattered by the distinction with which he had been recurved and as he examined the beautiful shawls which now onvoloped his person, a gram smale of delight lighted up his course features

These men have some said he to Ghuffoor Khan and are oridently accustomed to the visits of persons of quality. We little expected this civility and in truth it is most acceptable after our long ride but they have forgotten you.

"Not so, noble Cheeteo" cried the schoukar advancing with several pairs of slawls over his arm we are not forgotful of our distinguished guests and he threw a pair over each of the chiefs, which they received with complacency

Lot the room be cleared, cried Cheotoo; we have business with these worthy gentlemen, which I have sworn to do before we touch any refreshment."

It was quickly done, and there only remained our leaders and the sahoukars, who huddled together like wild fewl on the approach of a hawk.

Come forward, and Chectoo to them come and at near us we would speak to you.

They all arose, and, as they were directed, sented themselves in respectful attitudes on the edge of the musnud.

Now continued Chectoo you are doubtless aware of our object. We wrat money and money we will have by fair means or foul. If ye are wise, yo will pay me handsomely to be rid of me and my people, who are savage fellows. I desire not to harm you, and on your own heads be it, if any disaster befalls you Say therefore, how much are ye prepared to give?

Truly said the sahoukar my friend, who was the spokesman, we have been duly advised of your Highness a coming and as a proof that we dud not dread you, you see us here, and we have done our poor ability to welcome so distinguished a person. We have also received good conniel from your servant the Meer Sahib and agreeably to his instructions we have drawn up a list of a few trifles and some ready money which we are desirous of laying at the feet of your Highness. And the sahoukar handed to him a paper written in Persan.

This is unmtelligible to me, for I am no moonshee but can any of you read, brothers? asked Cheetoo of the other leaders.

"Not a word, not a letter," cried one and all, "none of us know one letter from another"

"I can send for a moonshee," said the sahoukar, "one is in attendance"

"If I am permitted," said I, "I will read the list I may be able to make it out"

"Ha! thou art a clerk as well as a good soldier," cried Cheetoo, "Well, take the paper, and let us hear our good forlaughing tune"

"First then," said I after I had glanced over the document, "this paper sets forth, that the schoolkars and others of the markettown of Oomraotee, in council assembled, having heard of the near approach of the mighty Cheetoo and his army, and being desnous of approaching his feet with a small tribute of respect, have put down the following articles and sums of ready money, which are prepared and ready for his acceptance,—on no condition save that they may find favour in his sight, and be the humble means of insuring his elemency to others

"Good 1" said Chectoo "Now get thee to the marrow of the matter as speedily as may be, for my stomach craves food, and I doubt not these worthy gentlemen's families have prepared a repast for me"

"It is ready, noble Cheetoo," cried the sahonkar, "and if the order is given, it will be set out, but the food of us poor Hindoos would be tasteless to my lord, and therefore we have had the repast cooked by the best bawurchees of the town"

"Silence!" cried the chief, "speak when you are allowed to do so we are in no humour to be interrupted"

The sahoukar shrank back intimidated, and raising my voice I proceeded

"The first item, Protector of the Poor!" cried I, "is a sum of fifty thousand supees for yourself"

"Is that all ?" cried he, his brow contracting
"Stay," said I, "more follows 'A tray of choice jewels, gold, and silver, valued at fifteen thousand rupees, and three trays of shawls and brocades for my lord's muhal, valued at ten thousand rupees in all, seventy-five thousand rupees Secondly, a sum of ten thousand rupees to each leader of rank, of whom we learn from the worthy syud, Ameer Alı, there are three, a tray of jewels to each, of five thousand rupees, and three trays, each valued at five thousand more in all, twenty thousand rupees each ""

"Go on " cried Cheetoo, "you have not done yet, I suppose ?"

"No," said I, glancing down the paper, "there is more follow-g 'Thirdly, a sum of one thousand tupees to each duffadar, we are uninformed of their number, but we have supposed thirty "

"Good! cried Cheetoo what more?

'Fourthly the sum of fifty rapees to each deserving person, to be given at the discretion of the mighty Cheetoo; by report we hear there are four thousand. Also food, grain, and forage for as many days as the army may remain with us.' This is all," and I what are my lord a orders?

The list is well enough," said Cheetoo but they are wrong in some particulars: first, there are fifty duffedars, are there not, Ghuf foor Khan?

There are he replied "I told them off myself.

"Put that down, Meer Sahib, said Cheetoo Again, there are five thousand good Pindharees am I not right?

True again, cried all the leaders were they not counted at \emawur ?

This was a lie there were hardly four thousand for nearly half the lighter had gone off in a different direction from the Narbudda but it agnified little for Chectoo I know was determined to make the best terms he could with the sahoukars.

"Put down five thousand, said Cheetoo and now see how much you have got

I hastily arranged the amount and read the paper to him.

First, and I, there is your Highness s share seventy five thou sand rapees secondly on account of the leaders, suxty thousand ru pees then the fifty doffadars, each man a thousand, fifty thousand rupees lastly five thousand men, each forty two hundred thousand

And the sum of the whole is three lakes and eighty five thousand

And," said Cheetoo to Ghuffoor Khan, "the horses shoes must be worn out, I think? we require new ones.

Certainly cried the Khan with a merry grin.

"Put down fifteen thousand rupees for the horse-shoes this, Meer Sahib, will make the sum an even four labbs and, gentlemen," con tinued he to the sahoukars. I must trouble you to pay with as lit the delay as possible, or we must help ourselves.

There was a hurned conference for a few moments among the sahoukars, and a few angry words passed among them; but they were wise my fat frand ross, and making a lowly obersance, declared the money was at hand, and should be brought immediately

Good! cred Oheetoo now let me have my dinner and do you all see that the duffadars are present at this house by to-mor rows dawn, to receive their shares and those of their men. The lubhur must move on, for after this kind reception, I would not have my friends the sahoukurs exposed to the chance of being plundered by my lawless bands.

The chiefs separated, and I was preparing to leave the room with them, when Chectoo called me back "Come and take your dinner with me," said he, "I doubt not your friends the sahoukars have prepared enough for us two"

I obeyed the order, and seated myself at the edge of the musnud The dinner was soon brought, and a choice repast it was We did justice to it, for in truth our travel had sharpened our appetites These satisfied, and inhaling the fragrant smoke of our pipes, Cheetoo asked me how I had managed to bring about so advantageous a reception as he had met with

I related the whole to him, suppressing, however, the fact that I had secured for myself so large a sum as ten thousand rupees, for had I disclosed that, he would presently have helped himself to half Peer Khan was the only person who knew of it, and of it at least to him alone was I determined to entrust it.

He was delighted, he had, I knew, determined to raise a large sum, and I had purposely exaggerated his probable demand to the sahoukars, this, and my threats and hints of the place being given up to plunder on the least demur on their parts of paying handsomely, had been successful

"You see, Meer Salub," said he, "by your excellent conduct I have secured, first, seventy-five thousand rupees, and what is over, after every proper Pindharce has got his forty rupees, will make the sum pretty near a lakh which is, you will say, a good beginning"

"May your prosperity increase, noble Cheetoo," said I; "if your slave can help you to a few more sums like the present, he will only feel himself too happy, and too honoured by distinction like the pre-For the men I had with me, I made the same terms as you have accepted for the whole, and they were well satisfied"

"And for yourself, Meer Sahib?"

"I have not got much," said I, "perhaps I might have arrogated to myself the distinction of one of the leaders, but I refrained, they gave me five thousand rupees however, and I am satisfied"

"Nay," said Cheetoo, "it was too little, my friend, and I advise you to get as much as you can-next time And as you have behaved so well in this instance at the head of the advance party, I will give it into your command in future, and must satisfy Ghuffoor Khan as well as I can, he is a good soldier, but a thick-headed fellow, who is always for helping himself, and setting fire to towns and villages, by which we seldom get half as much, especially from these rich places, as we could do by a little management and a few

"May your condescension increase, Nuwab!" cried I, "your servant, Inshalla! will never disappoint you"

I took leave of him soon afterwards, and joined the sahoukars, who were sitting below counting the money which lay in large heaps on the floor

They received me joyfully and expressed in forcible language how much they were indebted to me for my active interference in their bohalf. They would have pressed on me the five hundred rupces they had promised when I presented them to Cheetoo, but I refused it.

"No, said I; 'if I have done you service, and I think I have, I will not sell my good offices. You have dealt as well by me as I have by you so the balance is even; all I pray of you is to let me have my money in gold bars, which I can easily conceal, except a few hundred rupees for present expenses.

It is granted, said the safionar and I had shortly afterwards the gold in my possession; and taking a few of the schoukar's men to guard me, I bent my way to the camp, the bright free of which sparkled through the darkness on the plain beyond the town, revealing many a wild group which huddled round them to warm them solves from the effects of the almost chilling might breeze. I was soon at my little tent, which consisted of a cloth stretched over three spears, two of which were stuck into the ground, and another tied across them as a ridge pole and assisted by Peer Khan, I put the gold into the bags I had had made in the flaps of my saddle and sewed them over I was ten thousand rupees richer in one night!

This is grand work, said Poer Khan here we have had no trouble and if we go on at this rate we shall return far richer than after the toil and risk of a hundred Thuggee expeditions.

"I am to have the advance-guard always, said I and it shall be my own fault if we do not always scours a good share for my own part, I have foresworn Thuggee, as long as there is a Pindharee chief to erect his standard.

And we will all follow you, he replied "Motee and the others are delighted with their success, and are in high spirits there is not one of them but has got a good share of to-day's work, for we sinck near you, and were bribed well to use our influence with you they thought us all duffadars, and you know Motee and myself shared as such."

"It shall not be my fault, said I, "if you are not all duffadars in reality before long. Let the men make themselves active, and dress handsomely: you are all well mounted, and will catch the eye of the chief.

By dawn the next morning I was with Cheetoo The schoukars had collected the whole of the money by subscriptions among themselves and collections from the town and the whole was distributed fairly I must say, among the Pindharees. Each duffsdar bore away the share of his duffa, and they know too well the risk they would run if they defrauded any man of his just due

A few hours elapsed, and after a hurried meal, every man was on his horse, and the lubhar departed to seek fresh plunder in the country before them. Yet before he set out, Cheetoo promised, in consequence of the ready payment of the sum he received, that in every future expedition he might undertake, the town of Oomraotee should be exempted from contributions, and he kept his word. Oomraotee was never again plundered, and a large body of troops, which were stationed there afterwards, effectually deterred small and straggling parties from surprising it as we had done

Onwards we dashed I, at the head of my band, who had now implicit confidence in me, caracoled along on my gallant horse, with a heart as light and happy as the unlimited freedom of action I possessed could make it. No thought of care intiuded, and I was spared the pain of seeing the villages we passed through (from each of which we levied as much as we could, which was instantly laden on the Shootur camels that accompanied us) burned or plundered, and the inoffensive inhabitants subjected to the cruel tortures of the men in the rear, who were often disappointed of booty

We halted at Karınjah, a few soldiers who were in the town made a feeble defence, and wounded a few of my men as we rushed into the place, but they were soon killed or dispersed, and, as a warning to other villages, it was given up to sack and ruin I could never bear the sight of wanton cruelty, and I repaired to my place in the camp, shortly afterwards I could see, from the bright bluze which rose from different parts of the village almost simultaneously against the clear grey evening sky, that it was doomed to destruction Rapidly the fire spread, while the shouts of the Pindhaiees engaged in their horrid work, and the scienns of inhabitants—those of the women were fearfully shrill and distinct-made a fit accompaniment But it was work in which the Pindharees delighted, order, which never existed save when there was no excitement, was completely at an end, and any attempt to have checked the mad riot which was going on would have been attended most likely with death to the My own Thugs, too, sat around me, for a Thug is not savage, and they had no inclination to join in the excesses

We sat in silence, but our attention was soon arrested by the figure of a man dragging along a girl, who resisted to the utmost of her power, but who was evidently nearly exhausted. I rushed forward to her rescue, and my eyes fell on the person of Ghuffoor Khan, his savage features exaggerated in their ferocious expression by lust and the scene he had been engaged in

"Ha!" cried he, "Meer Sahib, is that you? Here have I been working like a true Pindharee, and have brought off something worth having; look at her man! is sho not a peri a hour! Tho fool her mother must needs oppose me when I got into their house but I silenced her with a threat of my sword, and lot here is her fair daughter a worthy mate for a prince. Speak, my pretty one, art not thou honoured at the prospect of the embraces of Ghuf foor Khan?

By Alia! Sahib, I could have killed him, and it would have been an easy matter to have done so, as he stood unprepared. I had half drawn my sword from its scabbard but I returned it! I made an inward determination as to his fate, and I kept it. I vainly onder woured to induce him to give up its girl and lot her go, but he laughed in my face and dragged her off. She would fain have fled from him and attempted to do so, but he pursued and caught her for her tender feet were out by the rough ground, and I lost sight of them both in the quickly dowing darkness. Misserable girl! she was a Brahmin's daughter and was spared the degradation of security the light of another day and the misery of returning to her desolate home polluted and an outeast. Ghuffoor Khan told me in the morning with a hellish laugh, that he had murdered her as she tried to possers herself of his dagger to plunge into her own heart. "I spared her the trouble, he said.

Gradually the fire lessened in its fury as there remaned but faw houses unconsumed, but the Pindhareos were still at their wild and horrible work, as the shricks borne to us on the night wind too well testified. I had heard that these excesses were sometimes committed, but I had formed no idea of their terrible receity. A thousand times I formed the resolution to quit the lubhur and return to my home but again the thought, that a few struggling horsemen, who could give no proper account of themselves, would be immediately taken for Pindhareos, and saorificed by the now infurnated people of the country—this and, I must add, a restless deare for further adventures, caused me to dismuss it from my mind. It began to rain, too, and we all huddled together in my little tent, and passed a weary night till the morning broke. Then we were again in motion, and the ill fated town of Karinjah, now a heap of smouldering ruins, was soon far behind us.

We passed Mungrool and beyond the town, now in the broad daylight, I had an opportunity of seeing the spot where my first victim had fallen. I had thought that the place where he fell was in a large and dense jungle, so at least it appeared that night in the moonlight,—but it was not so the rivilet was the same as when we had passed it, and I stood once more on the very spot where the shou kar had fallen! A thin belt of bushes fringed the stream, and Peer Rhan pointed with a significant gesture a little higher up than the place at which we crossed. It was the bhit where they were buried, and it now seemed a fearfully insecure spot for the concealment of our victims,—so close to the road, and apparently so thinly screened from observation. Yet many years had now passed since they were deposited in their last resting-place, and a succession of rainy seasons had either washed away their remains or covered them still deeper with sand

We passed the spot, too, where our bands had encamped and separated, and before me was now a new country, though it little differed in character from that we had already traversed

We halted at Basim, and I greatly feared a repetition of the scenes of the past night, but the men were, to my astonishment, quiet and orderly, and a handsome contribution levied in the town in all probability saved it. From hence, in five marches, we reached Nandair on the Godavery, a rich town, and one which promised as large a supply to our army as we had got at Oomraotee. We had feared the news of our approach would have reached it, and that the sahoukars and wealthy inhabitants would have fied, but it was not so they were completely surprised and at our mercy, for not a single soldier worth mentioning was there to guard the place. A few there certainly were, who shut themselves up in an old fort which overhangs the river and commands the ford, but they kept within the walls, only firing a matchlock-shot or two whenever any of our marauders approached too near, we did not molest them, but set ourselves to work to levy as large a sum as possible

As before, the advance-guard had been entrusted to me, and I pursued the same system I had done at Oomraotee

I will not weary you with a repetition of almost the same tale, suffice it to say, that one lakh and a half of rupees were collected and paid to the army, and I got for my own share nearly three thousand rupees, some jewels, and a pair of shawls. The town was not destroyed, indeed, that would have been impossible, as the houses were substantial ones, with terraced roofs, but the suburbs suffered, and the huts of the unfortunate weavers were sacked for the fine cloths for which the place is famous,—not in vain, for half the army next day appeared in new turbans and waist-bands

The river was not fordable, and there was but one boat, we therefore pushed along the northern bank till we reached Gunga Khan, where we were told there were boats and a more convenient ferry, nor were we disappointed. We crossed with ease during the day on which we arrived opposite the place, the men swimming their horses across, and the plunder and baggage being brought over by the boats. A few hundred men attempted to defend the town, but it was carried by forcing open the gate, and plundered. We lost some of our men, and I was grazed on the leg by a bullet, and disabled from taking active part in the sack of the place. Peer Khan and Motee were however not idle, and brought a goodly heap of lowels and coin to swell the general stock.

From honce we penetrated southward. Beeder Bhalkee, the fine and flournhing town of Hoomnabad (a second Commotee) were severally plundered or laid under heavy contributions while every villare which lay in our route was sacked, and too often burned and destroyed From Hoomnabad I led three hundred men to Kulli ance, a few coss distant but we found the alarm had been given and that all the rich inhabitants had taken refuge in the fort, which is a very strong one, and to us was impregnable. Such was the dread we inspired, however that the defenders of it remained quietly within it, and allowed us to keep quiet possession of the town till the next morning when we again rejoined the main body

We descended by a pass in the bills to the village of Chincholee which was of course plundered, and we followed a direct southwardly route, burning and plundering every place in our way till the broad and deep stream of the Krishna effectually opposed our farther progress. Here the lubhur halted for some days; forage was plentiful overy one was loaded with money and we enjoyed curselves in our encampment as true Pindharees. Danoing girls were seized from all parts of the surrounding country though no violence was ever offered to them, and they amused us with their songs and perform ances, and left us when we were again put in motion well satisfied and well rewarded, and regretting that they could not accompany us

Cheetoo was wrong to have halted, for the alarm that Pindharces were out had flown through the country and in our march towards Koolburgah we got no plunder worth mentioning Koolburgah we found garrisoned and prepared for our reception so relinquishing our designs upon Sholapoor and the rich towns of Barsee and Wyrag we struck off in the direction of Bheer Pyetun and Aurungabad, hoping to surprise the latter though we feared it would be well garrisoned.

But I was determined to surprise Barsee and Wyrag if I could, and I laid my proposals for the expedition before Cheetoo readily acceeded to my request, at which Ghuffoor Khan was ex tremely savage and taking with me three hundred men, the best I could select, and dividing them into duffas under my own Thugs, I left the main body at the town of Allund, and dashed on towards

Tohapoor from whence there is a pass into the low country Tolianoor has little to recommend it but the temple of Bhowance which is a place of pilgrimage and though I knew there were hoards of jewels in the possession of the Brahmins, yet, as many of my men were Hindoos, they would not hear of the temples being sacked, and I was forced to content myself with levying a few thousand rupees from the mhabitanta.

Wyrng was our next aim, and we were successful. Our force was supposed to be a 11-ala of Malnatta horse who were known to be in the district and we were allowed to enter the town unopposed We sacked it and got a large booty, for there was no time for a proposal of contribution, indeed I thought not of that alternative. not could I restrain my men after their long match. Yet they were not cruel, nor did I hear of any of them having tortured any one and the inhabitants gave up enough of their valuables to satisfy them easily. Here we heard that the risala we had been mistaken for was at Barsee, and as that place lay in our direct road to Bheei, where we were to join the main body. I was obliged to give up my intention of proceeding through it, there was also a large body of the Nizam's horse at Punindah, and I feared that we might be cut An instant return by the road we had come was our only alternative and after a few hours' rest we were again in our saddles, and travelling as fast as we could urge our horses towards Toljapoor Nobly did my gallant horse carry me that day, most of the men dosed theirs with opium to insure their bottom, but my good charger needed it not and he was almost as fresh when we again reached Toljapoor, as when he had left it

Here we rested a day to refresh ourselves, and after that, pushing on, we overtook the main body at Bheer, where they were encamped. I had been baffled in part of my design, yet Cheetoo received with great complacency ten thousand rupees in money, and nearly the same amount in jewels, which I presented to him in full durbar as the results of my enterprise, for this he invested me with a dress of honour, and presented me with a good horse from among lus own.

CHAPTER XXXV

RELATES HOW, ENCOURAGED BY HIS SUCCESS, CHEETOO PLANS ANOTHER EXPEDITION ON A LARGER SCALE, AND HOW AMEER ALI JOINED IT

BHEER was sacked and given up to rapine and excess for two whole days, and when we left it scarcely a rag remained to the miserable inhabitants. It was piteous to see them raking together a few posts of wood, many of them half burned, and erecting wretched hovels, which they covered with green boughs, to screen themselves from the cold winds of the night. They suffered the ravage of their town passively, for there were no soldiers to protect it, and what could they have done against a well-armed and savage horde like ours?

Pyetun, on the Godavery, shared the same fate, and though many of the rich inhabitants had fled for refuge to Aurungabad, yet enough remained for our purpose. You know perhaps, that this place is celebrated for a manufacture of brocaded muslims, only inferior to those of Bonares; and at that time there was an active demand for them, to supply the courts of Poona and Hydershad you may judge, therefore, of the value of the plander we get. Chectoo s causels and elephants were laden to the utmost none of us fared hally and our own stock was now so large of one valuable or another that I hardly thought we should have been enabled to carry it with us. I need not follow our track much farther with manuteness suffice it therefore to say that we passed the Adjuntah Ghat, not however without being closely pressed by some troops of the Fernghees but we cluded them by a rapid march or two and after a vain attempt on Boorhampoor we struck off to the right by the valley of the Taptee, and in a few days were safely returned to the cann a Nomawur.

In little more than three months we had traversed the richest part of the broad territory of the Nizam we had eluded his troops and those of the Ferughees, and laughed at their beards we had plundered his richest towns with impunity and we had returned, with scarcely the loss of a man, ladon with plunder of enormous value. So rich was it, that the schoulars of Nomawur after purchanne all they could from us, were unable to find further funds to buy up the whole and merchants from Oogen, and Indoor and all the neighbouring large cities, were sent for to our rich market

In due time all had been purchased, and every man prepared to return as quickly as he could to his home, with the proceeds of his booty I need not say how my heart bounded at the prospect of again seeing mine, and laying at my Azeema a feet the wealth I had acquired, nor the pleasure she would experience in hearing me recount the wild adventures I had gone through. I accordingly purchased all the gold I could, as also did my men, and hiring two swift camela, I leaded them with it and the valuable doths we had received for our own use, and was reedy for a rapid march to Jhalone when I could receive my dismissal from Cheetoos durtar. This it was not an easy matter to satum, for I had served the chief faithfully he had confidence in my address and activity and was least to part with me, fearing I would not return to his standard.

The day I went to take leave he would not receive my parting gift, nor give me the usual occamonal return of uit and pin on my departure and I sat in the durber in gloomy thought, that perhaps treachery was intended towards me—a poor return for my carctions. But I was wrong he called me towards him when but few remained, and appointing a late hour in the night for an interview and private conversation, desired me to be punctual, for that he had matters of importance to reveal to me.

I returned to my abode in better hope, yet still suspecting, and almost inclined to follow the advice of Peer Khan and the rest, who would fain have had me fly, as the only means of preserving our money I did not however entirely mistrust Cheetoo, but I determined, if he put me off with further words, and caused me more delay, that I would at once leave him in the best way I could I accordingly attended at the hour appointed, which was past midnight I found the chief alone I had never before been so honoured as to be admitted to an entirely private conference, though I had been allowed a seat in his councils, and my suggestions had been followed on more than one occasion I could not divine what was to ensue

"Be seated, Syud," said Cheetoo, "I have much to say to thee"
"Speak on, Nuwab," I replied, "your words are sweet to your servant, and they will fall on ears which will convey their meaning to a heart devoted to your service"

"Listen then," said he "But first I will ask you what you thought the object of the last expedition to be?"

"Its object!" cied I "Why, I suppose, only to get as much money as you could for yourself and your men, so as to be ready to take advantage of the war which sooner or later must ensue between the Mahrattas and the Feringhees—may their race be accursed! I never could divine a deeper object, though I have thought upon the subject myself, and heard many opinions expressed by others"
"You are partly right," said he, "but not entirely, now you shall hear the whole, and what my further projects are"

I settled myself into an attitude of profound attention, and drank in his words as he proceeded

"You have had a watchful eye upon the times, Meer Sahib, and I expected it from you You may have heard that Tippoo Sultan—on whose memory be peace!—would fain have enlisted the Nizam and the whole of the Mahrattas in one confederacy to overthrow and extirpate the Feringhees Had his plans been successful he would have done it, but, a curse on his avairce! he had an underplot to divide the Nizam's territories with the Mahrattas, which was discovered, Alla only knows how, and a curse on the luck of the Feringhees, who overthrew the only power which, while it lasted, upheld the dignity of the Moslem's faith! Tippoo is gone, and his Perhaps you are not aware that at this moment, though Holkar is sorely disabled from what he was, and Sindia has made a base league of passiveness with the Feringhees, a deep confederacy exists among the Mahratta states, and particularly between those of Poona and Nagpoor, to rise simultaneously and declare war against the usurping and never-satisfied Europeans Sikundur Jah will join with the Fermghees—not that he can do much, for his army is muserable, and his leaders have neither skill nor bravery but still he will befriend them to the utmot, and his dominions are open to the passage and subsistence of their troops, and in them positions can be taken up which will serely harms the fature operations of the Mahratta leaders. My last expedition was therefore intended (and by the favour of Alla it has succeeded) to improvement Sikmedar Jalis country to keep the people in a constant state of alarm, and need I add, to fill our own pures.

Now listen again To effect my purpose thoroughly and to distract the attention of the Europeans from the preparations of the Mahrattas, these expeditions must be rapid in succession to have their due effect. One half of the Huzoer's dominions have been sacked, and the other half remains Inshalla! it shall share the same fate. The Feringhees will be kept in a perpetual state of alarm they will follow us vainly from place to place, but I fear them not. I have laughed at their beards once, and will do so again. They shall know who Cheetoo Pindharee is, and to their cost. Not only shall the cowardly Nixam suffer but the rich provinces of the Feringhees shall be wasted. I will cross the Krishna the river will be fordable, or nearly so and the whole of the provinces which are not overrun by their troops shall be prestrated before my power This will exhaust their resources and paralyse their efforts. The Mahrattas will then rise to a man. I will join them for I have been promised a high command in their armies, and territories after their conquest and we will rise, Meer Sahib-yes. we, I say for these starring times are the fit ones for such as myself and you-Inshalla! we will take advantage of them, and win fame for ourselves which posterity shall wonder at.

"It is a rare plan said I, "and a deep one, while the game seems casy to play I can find no fault with it but will not the Fernghess be prepared for us, and meet us wherever we show our faces?

No! cred he vehemently they will not! cunning as they are, I will be before them in the field. They now think that, glutted with plunder we shall remain quetly here, and be fools enough to wait for another Dusers before we are again on the move; but they are wrong to a man and here has lain the cause of my apparent secrecy with you. I could not proclaim it in my durbur that I had planned another expedition some prating fool would have blabbed of it at his home, and the news would have flown over the country in a week. No I have kept it secret, except from a few and they are my chief leaders, every one of whom has a thousand men at his back. Hear me I am determined, by the favour of Alla, to move heanes at the head of a larger army than the last has been, in a space of time under two months. Say will you come? I will give you the command of a thousand horse, for I love you and depend upon you. Can you return from Jhalone in that time? I have no wish you. Can you return from shatone in that time? I have no wish to detain you here a man's home is dear to him wherever it is, and you are light to return to it. Yet tell me that you will join me within two months, and what I have promised I will perform."

"I will," cried I, "may your condescension increase, your slave will take advantage of your bounty. In less than two months, though I travel night and day, I will come, and bring more men with me"

"The more the better," said Cheetoo "Take the best horse from my stable if you wish it, he cannot be in better hands than your own, and as you will want camels, take, too, as many as you require from my own fleet ones Load them lightly and they will keep up with you. And now go I am weary in mind and body, and need repose; you, I doubt not, will start with the morning's dawn Go, and may peace be with you!"

I left him, and joyfully rejoined my associates I knew the secret was safe with them, and as I unfolded the deep plan to them, they were lost in wonder and admiration at Cheetoo's sagacity and forethought To a man they swore to join me, and to follow my for-tunes through good or ill Merrily we set off the next morning, and quickly miles and miles of road disappeared under the hoofs of our fleet and hardy steeds In far less time than it had taken us to come, we had reached Jhalone, unlooked-for and unexpected, and with a joyful bound I crossed my own threshold, and was again clasped in the embrace of my Azeema. What words can paint our joy? I cannot describe it, my heart was too full for utterance, as I was again seated in my own zenana, and beheld the frolics and gambols of my beauteous child. My father, too, rejoiced with me, but there was an eye of evil upon us our cup of joy was fated to be no sooner filled to the brim than to be dashed from our lips. That eye was the rajah's But more of that hereafter Not that I neglected him the prices of his horses were duly paid, and I presented to him a valuable string of pearls, with some beautiful cloths, the plunder of Pyetun, and a tray of fifty-one gold pieces. One would have thought he would have been satisfied, but it was not so, yet he was all smiles and congratulations I was invested with a dress of honour, and encouraged privately (for he secretly knew of the new enterprise), to further exertions, and cheered on by him to win distinction and renown Base har and murderer! he deceived me, but who could have guessed his

As soon as I could, I despatched Peer Khan and Motee with two of the others in various directions, to offer terms of employment and the prospect of booty to as many Thugs as they knew to be good men and good horsemen—the latter was a qualification in which but fow Thugs excelled; novertheless, in the space of ten days they returned with twelve others, some of whom I knew and all were stated to be resolute men well acquainted with the use of their weapons. They were easily provided with horses from the rajah's stables as the first had been for he had received more than double their value, and would now have risked his whole stud on the same terms. I examined their arms, and rejected such as were defective supplying them with others. Our saddles were nowly staffed, and every preparation which our experience could suggest was made for even a longer and more arduous enterprise than that from which we had inter returned.

But little time now remained to me to enjoy the quiet penceful ness of my home and now that I was there, I would fain have never again left it. Wealth I had in abundance, enough for many years and I was in a situation from which I could have risen to a high civil employment, in the management of revenue in the minh s Still, the desire for adventure was not blunted, and above all, the promise I had given to Cheetoo could not be evaded or neglected and had he not promised me the command of a thousand men? This had many charms in my sight; and should his plans succeed, to what rank might I not rise by my exertions, when the Mahratins overthrew the Europeans and the Nisam, and their broad dominions were portioned out to the government of their faithful loaders! These thoughts urged me to a speedy departure and tear ing myself from my wife I left the town, with the blessings of my father and the apparent good will of the rajah, who wished me every success, and presented me with a valuable sword as a mark of his especial favour

I was soon again with Cheetoo, who received me with great joy I found him busied with the large preparations he was making for his intended expedition. By this time the news of the immense booty he had collected in his first expedition had spread through all lends far and near; thousands had flocked to Nemawur to offer themselves to his service, in the hope that they might particle in the next; and handreds were arriving daily to swell the number of the shready assembled multitude. A difficult task it was to allot the various tribes and individuals to the command of the different leaders; and my aid was saked by Cheetoo, and as readily given, to organize as far as we could the heterogeneous mass.

It was no easy teak, for the men would have preferred acting independently and on their own account but this did not sur-Cheetoo s intentions, as his irruption, though for the sole purpose of ravage and plunder was to be of a more regular kind than the preeding Chinflor Khan was there in all his savgennes, looking for ward to the burning of towns and the torture of inoffensive persons, with a desire which had received additional zest from his previous experience. We were on civil terms, but I had never forgotten that night at Karinjah, and the memory of the wretched Hindoo girl, and her sufferings and murder. In this expedition I felt assured that he would give no check to his passions, and I only waited a favourable opportunity to arrest his career of crime by a stroke of retributive justice, until this airived, I was determined to cultivate his acquaintance as closely as possible, in order that he might be the more surely my own

Our preparations were now made, upwards of ten thousand good horse were already enrolled, and the number of their followers was beyond computation How they existed on their own resources I know not, but they did so, and right merrily too, for our camp was one scene of revelry and enjoyment As a final ceremony, Cheetoo held a general durbar, at which all the chiefs and leaders were present he disclosed his plan of operations, which was, to penetrate through the territories of the rajah of Nagpoor to the south-eastward, and passing through the forests and jungles of Gondwana, to pour his forces on the almost unprotected provinces north of Masulipatam, from thence to cross the Krishna, to ravage the country as far as Kurnool, and to return from thence in the best way we could to Nemawur This plan of operations was received with glad shouts by the assembly, the army outside the tent took them up, and the air was rent with cries of exultation It was a spirit-stirring moment, all partook of the joy, and the chiefs eagerly besought Cheetoo to lose no time in his departure. Nor did he Prepared as the whole were to move at a moment's warning, the order was given that the army should cross the Nurbudda the next day.

CHAPTER XXXVI.

Duke.—I am sorry for thee, thou art come to answer
A stormy adversary, an inhuman wretch Incapable of pity, void and empty
From any show of mercy

Merchant of Venuce Act 1v, Sc 1

At the head of the advance, which consisted of my thousand splendid horsemen, I was the first to cross the river, now fordable, and we encamped on its farther bank, in the same spot we had occupied scarcely five months before, almost doubled in numbers, and with the prospect of a brilliant foray before us. I shall not speak of how we traversed the rajah of Nagpoor's territories, or penetrated through jungles and forests which till now had hardly ever been traversed by armics. We suffered often sad straits for the want of water but all bore up nobly and at last our horde rashed upon the fertile plains of the northern Circars, and overything fell before it. Mercy was shown to none, our army spread itself over a tract of country many miles in breadth, and overy village in its route was sacked and reduced to ashes

On we rushed at the rate of ten and fifteen coss daily; nother mountains nor rivers impeded us; in the language of hyperbole, we devoured the former and drank up the latter. Troops there were none to oppose us and if there had been any they would have been trampled under the feet of our rictorious squadrous. Yet we had no disposition to fight it was no part of our plan. If we heard of re-austance likely to be offered, we diverged from the spot, for what would have been the use of exposing ourselves to encounters, in which, though sure of victory we should have lost many of our men and crippled our future operations P

After some days we reached Guntoor where we knew there was a large treasure collected the revenue of the province we had desolated. To gain this was an object on which Cheetoo had set his heart, as he had heard it amounted to many lakhs of rupees, and it belonged to the detested Europeans. My men rushed with yells more like those of demons than men upon the devoted town. To restrain them would have been vain, and I did not attempt it. It was thoroughly sacked in the presence of the British officers, who confined them solves to a building in which was the treasure; and I must say they defended their charge nobly. No Pindharee could show himself near the spot without being a target for a volley of mustery and though I importuned Cheetoo to allow me to storm the building at the head of my rasis, he would not hear of it. He had been deceived, he said, about there being troops to defend it and though I siways thought there were but few yet he exaggierated their numbers, and relinquished his determination.

In revenge, however for our disappointment, we plundered the houses of the officers, broke all their furniture, and set fire to many of them afterwards, in the hope that this would draw them from their post, and expose them to the charge of the house. They were too wise however to venture forth, and reluctantly we left the place from which we had promised ourselves so large a booty not, how ever that what we did get was inconsiderable, though many were disappointed.

I was not so. I had, with my own Thugs, sexed upon a respectable looking house, which we defended against the Pindharces who attempted to enter and we despoiled its immates, a large family of rob Hindoos, of all their wealth and ornaments, to the amount of nearly thirty thousand rupees. We did it too without torture, for I never permitted that, though we were obliged to use threats in abundance

Laden with our spoil we left the town in the afternoon, and by eight the straggling aimy was again encamped at a distance of nearly ten coss from it, seeme against any puisuit

We crossed the Kiishna, and penetrated nearly as far as Kurpah, where we heard there was more treasure belonging to the English Government. But we were disappointed in this also. The officers who guarded it were on the alert, and the station was guarded by troops, we therefore avoided any collision with them, and directed our course towards Kurnool. Here, also, we were besten off, but we crossed the river, and again entered the Nizam's territory, closely pursued by a body of English cavalry, who, however, did not cross after us. A consultation was now held, and it was determined that our lubhur should separate into three bodies, both for the sake of destroying and ravaging a larger tract of country than we could do united, and of more easily evading the troops which now watched our movements in every direction. One body therefore took a western course along the banks of the river, another an eastern one, and a third a middle course.

That which took the eastern road was the one with which Cheetoo remained, and with it were Ghuffoor Khan and myself. We were to pass through the country to the eastward of Hyderabad, and regain the Nagpoor territories by the great north road through Nirmul. I was now the sole companion of Ghuffoor Khan, so long as the other leaders remained, he was mostly in their company, but now their absence drew us together, and I may almost say that we lived in the same tent, if tent it could be called, which served to shelter us from the excessive heat of the weather. Need I mention that I was a constant witness to his cruelties? They were of every-day's occurrence, and to show you the man's nature, I shall relate one as a specimen of thousands of a similar kind that he committed

We reached a town, the name of which I forget, not does it signify now, as usual, it was entered pell-mell by the horde, and the work of destruction commenced. Why should I conceal it ? I was as busy as the rest, and not a house or hut of any description escaped my followers and myself. Ghuffoor Khan was busy too. I had completed my work, I had torn ornaments from the females, terrified their husbands and fathers into giving up their small hoards of money, and having got all I could I was preparing to leave the town in company with my Thugs, who never separated from me. We were passing through the main street on our return, when our attention was attracted to a good-looking house, from which issued the most piercing screams of terror and agony

I instantly dismounted, and bidding my men follow me, we rushed

arto the house. Nover shall I forget the scene which met my eyes, when we reached the place from whence the screams proceeded. There was Ghuffoor Khan, with seven or eight of his men engaged in a horrid work. Three dead bodies lay on the floor weltering in their blood, which poured from the still warm corpses. Two were fine young men, the other an elderly woman.

Before Ghuffoor Khan stood a venerable man suffering under the torture of having a horse's nose-bag full of hot ashes tied over his month while one of the khan's followers struck him incessantly on the lack with the hilt of his sword. The miserable wretch was half choked and it was beyond his power to have uttered a word in reply to the interrogations which were thundered in his car by the khan himself as to where his treasure was concealed Three young women of great boauty were engaged in a fruitless scuffle with the others of Ghuffoor Khan a party and their disordered appearance and heart-rending shrieks too well told what had been their fate previous to my entrance.

What could I do? I dared not openly have attacked the Lhan, though I half drew my sword from the scabbard, and would have rashed on him but he was my superior and had I then put him and his men to death, it could not have been concealed from Cheetoo, -and what would have been my fate ? So checking the momentary impulse, which I had so nearly followed, I approached him and endeavoured to withdraw his attention from the horrible work in which he was engaged

Come, Khan Sahib "I creed, "Lear us is a house which has remated my utmost efforts to enter I want you to aid me and, Inshalla I it will repay the trouble for I have heard that it is full of money and jewels, as the family is rich." I did not tell a lie, for I had endeavoured to break open the gate of a large house, but de-sisted when I was informed that it was uninhabited,

Wait awhile, said he; I have had rare sport here. These fools must needs oppose our entrance with drawn weapons, and I got a scratch on the arm from one of them myself. But what could they do-the kafirs! against a true believer? They fell in this room, and their old mother too by my own sword. My men have been smusing themselves with their wives whilst I, you see am trying to get what I can out of this obstinate old villam but he will not listen to reason, and I have been obliged to make him taste hot ashes."

"Perhaps he has naught to give," said I at any rate he cannot speak while that beg is over his mouth let it be removed, and we will hear what he has to say

Try it, said the khan but we shall make nothing of him, you will see.

"Remove the log, ' end I to the Pudheree who was behind him 'let him speak and bring some water, his thront is full of ashes?"

The bag was removed, and a vessel full of vater, which was in a corner of the room was brought and put talks hips, but he rejected

it with leathing for he was a Hindeo and a Brahmin

"Drink!" cried the infurnited khan at beholding his gestine, "drink or by All) I will force it down thy throat Knfir, to whom the urme of a caw is a deleacy, dure thou refuse water from the hands of a Moslem "

Blood-thirsty nevil," and the old man in a hasky voice, "water from thy hands or any of thy accur ed race would poison me. I would rather drink ray own consible id, which is flowing youder, thin such pollution "

'Ha! sixest thou sa? then, in the name of the blessed Prophet thou shift taste it. Here, Summed Khan get come up from the floor, yonder is a cup-fill it to the brim, the old man shall drink it, as he would the wine of paridise."

"Hold" cried I to Ghuffeor Khan, "you would not do so m-human an act "

"Nay interfere nor" said the I han, setting his teeth, "you and I Meci Silmb are friends—let us remain so, but we shall quarrel if I am hindered in my purpose, and has he not said he preferred that to pure witer?"

Sumund Khan had collected the blood and the cup was half filled with the warm red liquid-a horrible drought which he now presented to the miscrible fither "Drink!' said he, offering the cup with a mock polite gesture, "think it Ginges water, and it will open thy heart to tell us where thy treasures are"

Ghuffoor Khan laughed loudly "By Alla! thou hast a rare wit, Sumund Khan, the idea should be written in a book, I will tell Cheetoo of it"

But the old man turned from them with loathing, and his chest heaved as though he were about to be sick

"There's no use wasting time," cried Ghuffooi Khan, "open his mouth with your dagger and pour the dringlit into it"

It was done, by Alla! salub, the two did it before my eyes,fiends that they were! Not only did they pour the blood down tho old man's throat, but in forcing open his mouth they cut his hips in a ghastly manner, and his cheek was laid open

"Now tell us where the gold is!" cried Ghuffooi Khan what use is this obstinacy? Knowest thou not that thy life is in my power, and that one blow of my sword will send thee to Jehanum, where those fools are gone before thee?" and he pointed to the dead Strike!" cried the sufferer "strike! your blow will be well come I am old and fit for death. Why do ye delay?"

"But the gold, the treasures I roared the Linn, stamping on the ground. 'Why, are you a fool ?"

Gold, I have told yo I have none," he replied "I told you so at first, but yo would not listen. We gave you all we had, and yo were not satisfied. Yo have mardered my sons and my wife, and dishonoured my daughters. Kill us all, and we will be thankful."

"Hoar him cried the khan savagely; he mocks us. Oh the wilful wickedness of age is it not proverbual? One of you bring some oil and a light we will see whether this humour can stand my final test, which has nover yet failed.

By this time the house was full of Pindharces and, if I had wished it, I had not dared to interfere further. I stood looking on, determined to let him have his course he was only histoning his own fate, and why should I prevent it?

The oil was brought, and a quantity of rags were tern from the dhotees or wast-cloths of the murdered men. They were dipped in the oil, and wound round the fingers of the old man to as great a thickness as was possible.

"Now bring a light, cried the khan, "and hold him fast.

A light was kindled, and the man held it in his hand.

I give you a last chance said the khan, speaking from between his closed tooth "you know I dare say the use your fingers will be put to. Be quick and answer or I will make torches of them, and they shall light me to your treasures, which, I warrant, are indeen in some dark hole.

"To your worst, answered the old man in a desparate tone.
"Ye will not kill me and if my suffarings will in any way gratify you, even let it be so—for hanyun has given me into your power and it is his will and not yours which does this. You will not hear me cry out, though my arms were burnt off to the sockets. I spit at you

"Inght the rags! reared Ghuffoor Khan "thus is not to be endured.

They were ht one by one they blazed up, while his hands were forcibly held down to his addes to accelerate the effect of the fire. Alls, Alls! it was a successing sight. The warm fissh of the fin gers based under the blaze of the oiled rags, which were fed from time to time with fresh oil, as men pour it upon a torch.

The old man had overrated his strength. What nerves could bear such exquinte torture? His shricks were pricous, and would have melted a heart of stone but Ghuffeor Khan heeded them not he stood glutting his savage soul with the sufferings of the wretched creature before him, and asking him from time to time, with the grin of a devil, whether he would disclose his treasures But the person he addressed was speechless, and after nature was fairly exhausted he sank down in utter insensibility

"You have killed him," I exclaimed "For the love of Alla, let him alone, and let us depart, what more would you have? Either he has no money, or he will not give it up"

"Where be those daughters of a defiled mother?" cried he to his followers, not heeding what I said to him "Where are they? bring them forward, that I may ask them about the money, for money there must be"

But they too were dead! Ay, they had been murdered also, by whom I know not, but their bodies were found in the next room

weltering in their blood

The news was brought to the khan, and he was more savage than ever he gnashed his teeth like a wild beast, he was fearful to look on

The old man had revived, for water had been poured on his face and on his fingers. He raised himself up, looked wildly about him, and then gazed piteously on his mutilated hands. Were they men or devils by whom he was surrounded? By Alla! sahib, they were not men, for they laughed at him and his almost unconscious actions

"Speak!" cried the khan, striking him with his sword, "speak, kafir or more tortures are in store for thee"

But he spoke not-he was more than half dead, misery and torture had done their utmost

The khan drew 'his sword Again he cried "Speak!" as he laised the weapon above his head. I fancied I saw the old man's lips smile, and move as though he would have spoken, he cast his eyes upwards, but no word escaped him

The sword was quiveling above his head in the nervous grasp of the khan, and seeing he got no answer, it descended with its full force on the old man's forehead, almost dividing the head in two

Need I say he was instantly dead?

I was satisfied Ghuffoor Khan's cup too was full, for my own determination was made on that spot,—I swore it to myself as I looked at the dead and rushed from the house.

OHAPTER XXXVII

They plied him well with wine
And he roared wild song; in glee Hurrah! eried the devil, he'll soon be mine
And he chuckled right merrifye.—Old Dallad

From that hour I made a determination to destroy him. No sooner had I reached the camp than I assembled all my Things, and laid hefore them a scheme I had long been revolving in my mind. I moke to them as follows -

You have seen, my brothren, that Ghuffoor Khan is a devil seen he person can hardly be called a man. Bad as these Pindharees are he is the worst among them and is unfit to live. You, Motec and Peer Khan, remember the fate of the Brahmin girl at Karnighlyon may remember my ill suppressed indignation, which then almost impelled me to destroy this fiend and I would have done it, but that I felt his fate was not in my hands. I felt that Alla would scorer or later urge me on to be the humble means of a retributive justice overtaking him. I have hitherto refrained, though I have some times fancied his hour was come I thought that some crime blacker than any previous one would at last be committed by him, and it has been done. You all saw what it was. Can he ever do worse?"

He cannot !" cried my men with one voice he has reached the mark, and he is ours.

He shall be so said I "now listen. You know I have still throe bottles of the sweet wins of the Fernighees, which I brought with me from Gantoor he is very fond of it, and will easily be per suaded to come here and drink it with us. I will dose his share with opinin, and after a few cups he will become stupified, and will fall an easy prey to us."

"Good!" cried Peer Khan, it is an excellent plan. What my you to putting it into execution this very night?

"Not to might, I said we must be cautious in this immense camp To-morrow let my tent be pitched on the utmost verge of it may a short distance beyond it and in the dead of the might,

when all are overpowered by sleep, he can be despatched.

"I beg to represent, said Peer Khan, that Ghuffoor Khans saddle is well lined could we not get possession of it?"

I have been thinking about that, replied I, but I do not see how we are to get it without much risk and fear of discovery

Peer Khan pondered for a moment he then said -

"I have a plan, Jemadar which you may perhaps be able to im prove upon and, Inshalla! we will have the saddle. What I say is this when the khan is pretty well intoxicated, do you propose to him to sleep in your tent, and to send for his horse and saddle, so as to be near him to mount in the morning. If the saddle is brought, we can empty it of its contents and bury it with him, if not, we can only rejoice at having done a good action in having destroyed him"

"I am not suie," observed Motee, "that the omens will be good,

we had better try them."

"Do so," said I, "I will think over Peer Khan's plan, and see what can be done"

We then separated for the night

During the next morning's travel, when we were not separated by the confusion which ensued on a village or town being plundered, I purposely threw myself as much in Ghuffoor Khan's way as I could, and we conversed on the success of our expedition, and the adventures which had befallen us

"Do you remember, Khan Sahib," said I, "the attack on the houses at Guntoor, and how we ravaged the Feringhees' storehouses in a vain search for valuables? my curses on them! They are as rich as nuwabs, and yet not one of them has a gold or silver dish in his possession, nor a jewel or valuable of any kind, -nothing but china-ware And do you remember how we smashed it all?"

"Ay, I remember," growled the khan, "and but for our chief's cowardice,—between you and me I say it,—we might have attacked and carried the place where the treasure was, and enriched ourselves not a little, whereas, as it was, we got nothing for our trouble. We destroyed their houses, however, and that was some satisfaction."

"Tiue," said I, "it was, Khan, how their hearts must have burned as they saw the bright flames devouring their abodes! Do you remember, too, the precious stuff I got hold of and recommended to your notice,—the wine in the small bottles with printed papers upon them? It was rare good stuff"

"Mashalla! it was indeed," cried the khan, "the flavour of it did not leave my lips for some days. These infidels know what good wine is, that is certain Would that I had brought some with me 'a few bottles would have been easily carried, and one would have enjoyed it after a day's toil"

"I was more careful than you were, Khan, such wine is not always to be got I brought away some bottles, and I have them still I believe, if they be not broken"

"Some with you? Nay, then, be not niggardly of your treasure, let me taste it again, for I swear to you I believe there will be no such nectar in paradise"

"It is at your service, Khan, but to escape scandal, what do you say to coming to my tent to-night when it is dusk? that is, if any remains, of which I will give you notice One of my fellows shall cook a good pilao, and after it we will enjoy the wine quietly '

Your words are sweet as the wine itself good Moor Sahib rally I will be with thee. I will tell my saces to bring my horse and picket him among yours no one will see me, and I will bring no one with me I might exceed, you know and I would not be an open scandal to the faith

My heart leaped to my mouth as he uttered the words. The saddle, then would be ours without any trouble or risk of detection how I blessed him for accoding so readily to my plans!

"True Khan," said I "it will not do to be observed; we must be secret. I will have no one in my tent but Peer Khan, whom you know he is my foster brother and a rare companion we will have a pleasant carouse. I will send him to you when the pileo is ready

No no! cried he, do not, there is no need of it I will stroll to your tent after dush. And hark yo! and he to his saces who was tretting after him, mind, you are to bring my horse and saddle to the Meer Sahib s tent as soon as you see me going towards it. Remember you are to lead it after me as though I were going to ride and when you arrive there you are to picket it among his horses.

Jo hookum, replied the follow your orders shall be obeyed.

And mind, continued the khan, you are not to tell any one where I am going nor to answer any questions, if any are put to you, as you lead the horse along

"Certainly not since such is my lord a pleasure, I dare not disobey"

"You had better not, cried the khan, or I will try and find a Lorla for you.

The fellow dropped behind again, and we resumed our desultory conversation, chatting as we rode along on the merits of the different leaders, and how they had behaved. Ghuffoor Khan was a pleasant companion, and his remarks were full of wit and satire. I had put him in good humour by the prospect of a deep carouse and we rode on cheerfully

We reached our halting place for the day after a long and in tensely hot march and glad were we to get under the cover of our tents to screen ourselves from the noon-day heat. I had several messages from the khan in the course of the day to know whether the repast was ready but it would not have answered my purpose to have allowed that it was, or to have had it prepared one moment before the time fixed.

You have been riding with the khan, sahih, all the morning" said Motee to me, and have not, I suppose, observed the omena.

I have not, said I anxiously but surely you have done so ?" for I knew how much they would influence my men may that without favourable ones they would have absolutely refused any participation in the matter

"I have not been negligent," replied Motee "Last night, after I parted with you, Peer Khan, myself, and the others, made an offering of goor to the nishān, and, blessed be Bhowanee! she has vouchsafed us the thibao and pilhao, you need, therefore, be under no apprehensions, for she is favourable"

"I was sure she would be, Motee, for I observe the hand of Alla guiding me, and I verily believe I should have followed the influence of my own desires in this matter even had they been unfavourable "

"Nay, say not so, Jemadar," said he laughing, "you are too good a Thug for that, but there is now no fear, for the omens were indeed cheering "

"If we succeed," said I, "I have some thoughts of further work in our own way, but of this more hereafter. There will be a still when his disappearance is known, and we must be quiet for a time."

"Ay, that is like you, Jemadar We have been consulting among ourselves, and had come to the determination of proposing some adventures to you, for here these dogs of Pindhaiees lie, night after night, and each fellow is worth some hundreds of rupees. Yet we have been content to remain inactive, and I, for one, say shame on us! We need not pass a night without some work."

"Wart, good Mootee, let us secure the khan first And now to arrange matters, we must be our own lughaees"

"For that we are prepared, Meer Sahib, a Thug must do his duty in any grade when occasion calls for his services We are all ready for work"

"Then we must lose no time You must join your own pall to mine, and put some screen or other between them, in the empty space the grave must be piepared. It had better be ready before he comes—but no, he will perhaps suspect us, it can soon be made afterwards"

"You are right, Jemadar, he would suspect He need not be buried deep, and there are three of our men who are old lughaees, they will prepare it in a few minutes"

"And his saees,—he must die also, Motee"

"Certainly," he replied "Do you and Peer Khan deal with the khan, and leave the saees to us—we will manage him"

"Good, our arrangements are then complete Remember that Peer Khan alone eats with us, you must be all outside, and see that the horses are kept saddled, for we must fly instantly if we are discovered or suspected I have no fears, however, on either score"

"Nor have I," said Motee, "the matter will create a stir, as he is a leader of note, but it will be supposed, either that he has gone off with his plunder or that some one has murdered him. I tell you, Meer Sahib that many a Pindharee has died by the hand of his fellow sunce we left Nemawur

I do not doubt it, Motec. I have heard of many brawls, and mon of this kind have but few scruples. They are a wicked set, and far worse than those who formed the first expedition. But now go, got the pall ready, and send Peer Khan to me.

The evening came the calls of the faithful to evening prayers resonated through the camp with the last red streak of day. Mon were assembled in knots, kneeling on their carpots, addressing their prayers to Alla,—men whose hands were scarcely cleansed from the blood they had that day shed! The ecrement over each separated from his fellow to he beside his faithful horse, and to enjoy a night of repose to fit him for the toil, the rapine, and plunder of the ensuing day.

The time approached; and as I sat in my tent, awaiting the khan s arrival, my leart exulted within me, that for once in my life I should do a good action, in revenging the murdered. Peer Khan was with me we scarcely spoke our minds were too full of what was to follow to speak much

Have you drugged the bottle? he asked.

"I have. I have put two tolas of opium into it. I have tasted it, and the flavour of the drug is perceptible but it will be the second bottle, and he will not discover it and if he does, we cannot help it, we must take our chance. Do you think we can manage him between us, without any noise?

Shame on us if we do not, Meor Schib; I am as strong a man as he is, and your roomal never fails. But to prevent any noise being heard, suppose we propose to admit Mote and two or three others to ang and play—I mean when the khan has swallowed his first bottle. Motes has a siter and a small drum with him, and its noise will drown all others.

No, no! said I others might be attracted by the singing and come to hear it it will not do. We must do our best, and leave the rest to Alla. However we will see when the time comes.

The evening was far advanced, and everything around us was quet. A few fires, here and there throughout the camp, marked where, at each, a solitary l'midharee cooked his last meel of the day the rest were already buried in profound slumber and all nearest to us were still. I stood at the door of my humble tent looking any tously for the khan a coming and at length I observed a figure stealing along in the dusk, carefully avoiding the prostrate forms which lay in his path. Was it the khan! Yee. By Alla he comes! said I to Peer Khan I see him now and there is his horse behind him, and the saces leading it."

"Shookur Khoda!" exclaimed my companion, "he has not deceived us I feared he had, since it is so late"

"Is that you, Meer Sahib?" cired the voice of Ghuffoor Khan "I feared I should have missed your tent in this cursed darkness"

"Here am I, Khan Welcome to the poor tent of your servant" "So you have found the wine, eh?" said the khan, rubbing his hands in glee "You have not cheated me?"

"By your soul, no! Khan, I have not; there it is, you see, and Peer Khan is gone for the pilao"

"Khoob, by Alla! Meer Salub, I have fasted all day on purpose to do justice to it, and I should have been here an hour sooner, but I was summoned to the durbar about some trifle or other, and I have kept you waiting"

"And your horse, Khan?"

"Oh, he is here, my saces has picketed him among yours have deceived my other servants. I swore I had a headache and could not eat, and pretended to lie down to sleep, having given them all strict orders not to disturb me The knaves knew better than to do so, and so, after lying quiet awhile, I stole out of my tent behind, and have fairly given them the slip I suppose your people can throw some fodder before the animal?"

"Surely, I have cared for that aheady"

Peer Khan now entered with the pilao, and seating ourselves, our fingers were soon buried in the midst of it

"Now for the wine, Meer Sahib, the pilao is dry without it, and my throat lacks moisture"

"Here it is," said I, pouring it out into a cup, "see how it sparkles, like the fire of a ruby "

"Ay," said the khan, after he had drained it to the bottom, "this is wine for the homis, how one enjoys it! Think, Meer Sahib, how we true believers will quaff in paradise (if what we get there will be as good), surrounded by twenty houris, and each vying with the other to please us! But drink, man,-I would not take the whole"

"Nay, that bottle is your own share, Khan, and there is besides another for you, Peer Khan and I will divide this one between us "T is a pity there is not more, or that the bottle were not larger"

"Ay, it is to be regretted certainly, Meer Sahib, but what there is, we must make the most of," and he took another draught "Only think," continued he, "of those infidels the Feringhees drinking such stuff as this every day I now scarcely marvel at their doing great deeds when they are drunk And is it not the case, Meer Sahib, that they all sit round a table, and drink and loar out songs till they fall down intoxicated?"*

^{*} The khan probably referred to proceedings of a very antiquated character.

So I have been credibly informed, Khan. By Alla! they are tolly dogs

"I wish I was in their service, said Ghaffoor Khan, after a short silence Do you think they would give one wine to drink when one wanted at P

I have not a doubt of it, I replied.

"Then I will take employ with them, Meer Sahib this stuff would tempt many a better Moosulman than I am to serve an infidel. But they say Sikundur Jah drinks it also"

"So I heard when I was at Hyderabad, said I "indeed it was there I first tasted this liquor; and I know the bottles again when I saw them in the Feringhees houses at Guntoor" "It is fit drink for a prince, sighed the khan, when he had finished the bottle, and looking at it with a most rucful countenance

"That is finished Meer Sahib thou saidst thou hadst another?

Ay Khan I but only this one I replied handing him the other I feel happy now Meer Sahib. By Alla! I could sing—I could dance I think, though it would be a scandal to do so. The Prophet, however has not forbidden a Moslem to sing. May his name be honoured! Have any of you a sitar? People say that I have a good hand."

"Go and fetch Moteo-ram s " said I to Peer Khan It is a good one. Shall the owner of it come also. Khan ?

Nay I care not, Meer Sahib; though the devil came, I would pluck him by the beard let him come. Can he ming?"

Like a bulbul, Khan I have rarely heard a better voice from a man.

Oh for some women! sighed the khan "one misses the glances of their antelope-eyes, and the tinkle of their anklets, in moments like these. Ah, Meer Sahib, we were happy dogs when we were encamped in the Krishna. There was one charmer—but why speak of them Meer Sahib, why speak of them?

We shall enjoy their company the more when we get to Nema

war" said I. "But here is Motee with his pitar

Motee made his salam and sat down,

"Is the instrument tuned, Motee-thou pearl of singers?" oried the khan, bursting into a laugh at his play upon Motee s name. "Hast thou tuned it?

I have, noble Khan, though it is not worthy the touch of so exalted a person."

Nay tis a good attar and a sweet one," said the khan, as he ran his fingers over the frets in a manner which showed him to be a proflomat.

"Wah! creed all of us as once "play noble Khan! the hand which could execute such a prelude as that can do wonders.

"Give me some more drink," cried he, "and I will try Knowest thou any ghuzuls, Motee?"

"I am indifferently skilled in them, Khan Sahib, nevertheless, if my loid will mention one, I will try The tuppas of my own country I know most of"

"Pah!" cried the khan, "who would sing tuppas? I will name a ghuzul which is in every one's mouth—sing 'Mah-1—Alum, Sóz-1-mun,' I wantant me thou knowest it But the wine, Meen Sahib, pour it out for me, thou ait my saqee, thou knowest I will sing an ode to thee, as Hafiz has written and sung many a one to his, peace be to his memory! Ah! that was good, but oh, Meer Sahib, it bath a different flavour from the last"

"Very likely," said I, "the bottle you see hath a different paper on it, perhaps it is a better kind"

"It is good, and that is all I care for, Meei Sahib Now proceed, good Motee"

Motee did as he was ordered, and his voice and the khan's accompaniment were worthy of a better audience than that which heard them

"Wah, wah! Shabash!" cried Peer Khan and I, when it was ended, "this is rare fortune, to hear two such skilful musicians in this unsainted jungle Now it is your tuin, Khan Sahib"

"More wine, Meer Sahib, 'saqee meia' more wine, for the sake of the Twelve Imams Oh that there were a thousand bottles, that we could meet as we have done now every night! Good wine and good companions—have they not been ever the burthen of the songs of the poets?"

"Is there much left?" he continued, when he had drained the

"About half the bottle," said I

"Then give Motee a cup, Meer Sahib, he deserves it"

"Excuse me," said Motee, "but I am a Hindoo and a Brahmin" "Thou shouldst have been a true believer, Motee, Khan would sound as well after thy name as Ram Why, man, our blessed Prophet would have had thee to sing to him when thou hadst reached paradise!"

Ghuffoor Khan's voice was now rather thick, and he made but a poor hand of the ghuzul he attempted, but it was very laughable to see him roll his eyes from side to side like a dancing-girl, and to hear him trying to imitate their quavers and shakes

"Pah!" cried he, when he had sung a verse, "my throat is dry—I want more wine, I think, Meer Sahib, but the truth is, I caught a cold some days ago, and am still hoarse"

He tried again after a fresh draught, but with no better success. In vain he coughed and hemmed to clear his throat, the wine, and "So I have been credibly informed, Khan. By Alla! they are tolly dogs.

I wish I was in their service" said Ghuffoor Khan, after a short silence. "Do you think they would give one wine to drink

when one wanted at P

I have not a doubt of it, I replied.

Then I will take employ with them, Meer Sahib this stuff would tempt many a better Moosulman than I am to serve an infidel. But they say Sikundur Jah drinks it also

"So I heard when I was at Hyderabad, said I "indeed, it was there I first tasted this liquor and I knew the bottles again when I saw them in the Feringhees houses at Guntoor"

"It is fit drink for a prince, sighed the khan, when he had finished the bottle, and looking at it with a most rueful countenance "That is finished, Meer Sahib thou saidst thou hadst another?

"Ay Khan! but only this one" I replied handing him the other I feel happy now Meer Salub By Alla I I could sing-I could dance I think, though it would be a scandal to do so The Prophet however has not forbidden a Moslem to sing. May his name be honoured! Have any of you a mtar? People say that I have a good hand.

"Go and fetch Motee-ram s, and I to Peer Khan it is a good one. Shall the owner of it come also Khan?

Nay I care not, Meer Sahib though the devil came, I would pluck him by the beard let him come Can he sing ?"

Lake a bulbul, Khan I have rarely heard a better voice from a man.

"Oh for some women! sighed the khan "one misses the glances of their antelope-eyes, and the tinkle of their anklets, in moments like these. Ah, Meer Sahih, we were happy dogs when we were encamped in the Krishna. There was one charmer but why speak of them, Meer Sahib, why speak of them?"

"We shall enjoy their company the more when we get to Nema-

wur." mad L "But here is Motee with his mtar"

Motee made his salam and sat down.

Is the instrument tuned, Motee-thou pearl of mngors? oried the khan, bursting into a laugh at his play upon Motoes name. "Heat thou tuned at?"

I have, noble Khan though it is not worthy the touch of so exalted a person."

"Nay tis a good sitar and a sweet one, said the khan, as he ran his fingers over the frets in a manner which showed him to be a proficient.

"Wah! cred all of us at once 'play noble Khan! the hand which could execute such a prelude as that can do wonders "

```
315
                                                           CONFESSIONS OF A THUG
                                                                                                                                                                                              Knowest
              "Give me some more dunk," cued he, "and I will try on any gravers, more exilled in them, Khan Salub, nevertheless, a I am indifferently exilled T will tree them one of my own
                                                                                                                                                   The tuppes of my own thou any gluruls, Motec,
                                                                                                           " "ho would cing tubbes I will if my lord will mention one, I will try
                "Pah!" cued the kinn, who would sing happing. Alum, mame a ghuzul which is in every one's month. But the wine, Tani Soz-1-min, I wairant me thou knowest it.
                    Salub, pour it out for me, then are more and come ment on the street of the services and come ment of the services are the services and come ment of the services are the s country I know most of"
                      Soz-1-min, I wairant me thou knowest it sing an one to thee, as it may many many a one to his memory! Ah! that was good, but oh, Meei his, peace be to his memory! From the last?"
                                  ino, it note a amerent revour from the first hoth a different paper "Very likely," and I, "the bottle you see hoth a different paper "Very likely," and it is a botton lend."
                          Salub, it light a different flavour from the last,
                                                                                                                                                                                                      Now Proceed,
                                     "It is good, and that is all I care for, Meet Salub Motee did as he was ordered, and his voice and the khan's acampaniment, were worthy of a hotter and concern than that which on it, perhaps it is a befter kind" companient were worthy of a better audience than that which Wah, wah! Shabash!" cried Peer Khan and I, when it was "Wah, wah! Shabash!" cried Peer Khan and I, when it was a war fortune to hear to each elalful musicione in ended, "this is rare fortune, to hear two such skilful musicians in this research and the r good Molec"
                                         this unsainted jungle galub (coace more), more was for as unsanted jungle from 16 18 your turn, what same for the sake "More wine, Meer Salub, sageo mera" nethousand hotales, that there were a thousand hotales, that the Twelve Imams of the Trelve Imams Oh that there were a thousand bottles, that heard them
                                              We could meet as We have done now every might I Good wine and good companions—have they not been every higher of the songs of the noets?" the poers! he continued, when he had drained the
                                                               "About nair the bottle," said I Salub, he deserves it" Meer Salub, he deserves it " Indoo and a Brahmin," a Then give Motee a cup, "but I am a Hindoo and Khan would "Excuse me," said Motee, a true believer. Motee, Khan would "Thou shouldst have been a true believer.
bl_{\mathcal{L}} of the Poets?"
                                                                  "PACUSE Me, Said Motee, "put I am a Linuou and a Khan Would." Khan Would a Thou shouldst have been a true believer, man on blessed Program well often the name of Rom. Why man on blessed Program well often the name of Rom. cup About half the bottle," said I w_{v} sound as well after thy name as Ram then would have had those to sport to him when then hadet reached phet would have had thee to sing to him when thou hadst reached paradise!"
       £4.6
      z^{-1}
                                                                         Ghuffoor Khan's voice was now rather thick, and he made but a Ghuffoor Khan's voice was now rather thick, and he made but a ghuffoor hand of the ghurni he attempted hut it was very laughable.
      '.te1
                                                                    poor hand of the ghuzul he attempted, but it was very laughable to see him roll his ever from order to ende like a dancing-our and to _bat to see him roll his eyes from side to side like a dancing girl, and to hear him trying to imitate their gravers and choles ear nim vrying to imitate their quavers and snakes throat is dry—
"Pah!" cried he, when he had sung a verse, the truth is, I caught want more wine. I think. Meer Solith but the truth < CIII 2 paradise!"
                                                                      hear him trying to imitate their quavers and shakes
                                                                          I want more wine, I think, Meer Sahib, but the truth is, I caught a cold some days ago, and am still house, 7CT= 511
                                                                                    He tried again after a fresh draught, but the vine. and a vain he couched and hemmed to clear his throat.
               "Tofco,"
                                                                              In vain he coughed and hemmed to clear his throat, the wine, and a cold some days ago, and am still hoarse
                 n of eo
                    10, 25 ha im to be he hand
```

1/

 $^{\prime 0}I_{i}^{\prime i}$

the still better opium, were doing their work as quickly as we could desire.

"Do you sing again, Motee -merce Motee I merce goweve? soid the khan insinuatingly A curse on the water of this country which speils a man's singing Sing man, and I will play at cannot spoil that, at any rate and the Moor Sahib hath provided no antidoto for this night at least.

Motor sang again; but the accompaniment was wild and irregular.

and the khan at last threw down the sitar

It will not do, Meer Sahib, after the fatigue (a luccup) and the trouble I have had (hiccup) all day shouting and bullying these rascally Pindharces (hiccup) How can it be expected, Meer Sahib that I. Ghuffoor Khan, the leader of three thousand horse should play and ang like a goweya? By Alla I will not (heccup)! these hiccups, Mear Sahib, what is to cure them ?"

Some more wing Khan Sahib nothing but liquer can cure them. And there is more there is still another can.

"Then give me all crood the khan I will drmk it standing like a kafir Feringhee-may their sisters be defiled, ay and their mothers too! Novertheless as I said, I will serve them and drink among them, and none shall drink more than Ghuffoor Khan. Thou saidst they drink standing and what do they say?

Hip, hip, hip! said I I learned them from a vagabond who had been a khidmutgar among them, and had seen their wild orgies.

What, hip, hip hip! those are the words, ch? I wonder what they monn." They are an invocation to their Prophet, I believe much as we say Bumilla ir ruhman ir ruheem! " "I do not doubt it, Meer Sahib Now help me to rise, for the stuff is in my brain and the tent goeth round about help me to rise, I say and I will quaff the last drop both as a true Moslem and as a Feringhee. Ha! said I not well?" Excellently well, great Khan, said I as I helped him to his feet "now here is the wine.

"Burnilla! shouted the Khan, hip! hip! hip! and he drained the cup to the bottom. His head sank on his breast his eyes rolled wildly he made a desperate attempt to rush forward, and fell at his full length upon the ground.

Bus! cried Peer Khan, as he got out of the way enough, great Khan! noble Khan, thou art a dead man now Feringhee and

Moslem, thou hast made rare fun for us

Rance him up, said I to them seat him on his end. I am ready and do one of ye give the jhunce.

They raised him up, and as he was seated, his head mark again on this shoulder and some froth came from his mouth.

"He is dying," said Motee; "we ought not to touch him, it is forbidden"

"Not a bit of it," said I, "all drunken men are in this way, I have seen hundreds in the same state, so hold his head up, and give the phymee," for I had taken my post behind him

They did so. Peter Khan uttered the fatal words, and Ghuffoor

Khan wrestled out his last agony under my never-failing gripe "Enough, Meer Sahib," said Peer Khan, who was holding his feet, "enough! he is dead"

"Ul-humd-ul-illa!" I exclaimed, "it is finished, blessed be the Prophet and Bhowanee! Go for the lughaces, he must be put underground immediately Now for the saees"

We left the khan's body and went out, the others were waiting rus "Where does he he?" I asked

"There," said one of the men, "he is fast asleep, and has been so for an hour"

"So much the better." said Peer Khan, "leave him to me"

I watched him and Motee as they approached the sleeper Khan touched him with his foot, he started up to a sitting position and rubbed his eyes, but Peer Khan threw himself upon him, and he was dead in an instant, ere he had become conscious Nothing now remained but the disposal of the bodies and the saddle The grave, a shallow one, was quickly dug, and while the lughaees were preparing it, myself, Peer Khan, and Motee unripped the lining and pockets of the saddle, and took out the gold There was naught else It was in coin, and in small lumps, as the jewels he had gotten in plunders had been melted down from time to time lessure then to speculate on its value, but we cut the saddle to pieces with our knives to make sure that none remained in it, and the fragments were buried with the bodies

"What shall we do with the horse, Meer Sahib?" asked Motee "We cannot take him with us, for there is not a man in the camp who does not know Ghuffoor Khan's horse; and we have no time to stain him"

I was puzzled for a while, to have retained the noble animal would have ensured our detection, and I scarcely knew what to do At last I hit upon an expedient "He must be destroyed," said I, "it is a splendid beast, certainly, yet our lives are worth more than Beyond the camp, about an arrow's flight, is a deep ravine Do any of you know it?"

"None of us have seen it," said all at once

"Then I must go myself, and do you, Ghous Khan (he was one of my men), accompany me, we will throw him into it Go and loosen him from his pickets"

I followed him, and we conducted the animal to the edge of the ravino it was deep, and just suited our purpose, as the banks were precipitous

"That will do, said I, when he had brought the horse to the now rem his head to one side; we must kill him before he folls in "

He did so I had prepared my sword and drow it sharply across the poor brute s threat the blood gashed out, he recled backwards, fell into the dark rayme, and we heard his carcase reach the bottom with a heavy fall. I looked over but all I saw was an indistinct mass at the bottom, while a few greans of its death agony reached my ours.

"Enough! said I; come away the jackals will have a glorious feast ere morning and no one will over think of looking here. But it was a pity to kill the brute"

He was worth a good thousand rupees, and would have fetched that price at Hyderabad. Why did you not send him there? I would have taken him.

I did not think of that, said I but no matter now we will earn more than that before we reach Nemawar

How Meer Schib? We get but little in this poor country. Trust me, Ghous Khan, ' said I ; "we have begun, and, Inshalls!

we will go on with the work.

I reached the tent, and the lughaces had done their business well our carpets had been spread over the spot where the I han lay in his last resting place, and we all lay down and slept soundly

Ghuffoor Khan was mused at his accustomed post the next morn ning a thousand conjectures were hazarded as to his fate, but no one could account for his disappearance. Some said the devil had taken him for his wickedness others, that he had amossed an immense plunder and was fearful of its being wrested from him, and he had therefore escaped with it, as it was known to be sewed up in his eaddle.

When we reached our next encampment, Cheetoo sent for me I went, and found him sented in full durbar and the khan a servants. as prisoners, before him. I made my usual salam, and he requested me to be seated near him

This is a most mysterious affair Meer Sahib, said he "Ghuffoor Khan is gone and Alla or the Shitan only knows whither! If he has fled, it is as extraordinary a thing as I ever heard of; for he has been attached to me from his youth, and I have ever been kind to him. What think you?

"I am at a loss, also said I your servant knows not what to say there are a thousand conjectures affort, but no one can give any probable solution to the mystery But have you examined the ser vants? Surely they must know something

"I have not, Meer Salub, as yet, but here they are, and I want von to help me to question them. You may think of some things which may escape me"

"I will do my best Nuwah, but you had better begin—they will be afined of you and speak the truth"
"Call one of them," and Cheetoo to an attendant

The man came, frembling in every joint, and prostrated himself before our leader

"What is thy name?" he asked "Synd Ebrahim," said the fellow

"And what service didst thou perform to Ghuffoor Khan?"

"I am a khidmitgar, O Asylum of the World!" said the man; "I used to keep the khan's clothes, assist him to bathe, and attend him at might I was always about his person"

"Now speak the truth, Ebrahim, and fear not But I swear by the beard of the Prophet, if I detect thee lying, I will have thee cut to pieces before my face, as a warning to thy comrades"

"May I be your sacrifice!" cried the man, "I will not be should I? What I know is easily told, and 't is but little"

"Proceed," cried Cheetoo, "and remember what I have said "

"Alla is my wriness," said the man, "I know but little My noble master came from your highness's durbar late in the afternoon, we had prepared dinner for him, but he said he was ill, and would not eat, and that we ourselves might eat what we had cooked for him He then went into his tent, took off his duibar-dress, put away his arms, and then lay down. I was with him till this time, and sat down to shampoo him, but he bade me begone, and I left I was weary with running all day by his side, and I also lay down, and did not wake till the people roused me for the march went into the tent to arouse him and give him his clothes, but I found him not The bedding was just as when he had laid down, but his sword was not there, nor a stick he always walked with This is all I know, but Shekh Qadir knows something more, if you will call him he saw the khan after I did"

Shekh Qadir was accordingly sent for, and after being cautioned and threatened as the other had been, he spoke as follows,-

"I am also a khidmutgar, but my office was not about the khan's person, I used to give him his hooka, and prepare the opium he ate Soon after dusk I heard him moving in the tent, and I watched him, he lifted up the back part of it, and came out, I saw him walk towards the middle of the camp, and followed him; he observed me, and turned round sharp upon me 'What' said he, 'cannot I walk out for a few yards to breathe the air without some of you rascals following me? Begone!' Nuwab, I was frightened lest he should order me the korla, and I went away to the tent of a friend. I heard in the morning that he had not returned

"This is very unsatisfactory" said I 'we have as yet no clue to his disappearance If he has gone away he must have ridden where is his horse ?"

"Ay whore is it?" cried Cheetoo. Who can tell us?
May I be your sacrifice! said Shekh Qadar the horse is not here, nor his saces. The khan had two horses, but the saddle of the one missing is that in which all the gold was sowed up

Ha! said Cheotoo is it so? Where is the other saces?"

"Pear-o-Moorshid?" cried an attendant; be is waiting with out.

"Let him too be called. The man entered.

What knowest thou? asked Chectoo

I only know said the fellow that the grey horse was kept saidled all the afternoon. This was contrary to custom for its saidle was always placed in the tent, near the khan s head when he slept I asked my fellow saces the reason of its being so but he was angry with me and said it was no business of mine, that the khan had ordered it, and it was his pleasure. I saw him take the horse from his picket after dark, but I asked no questions

"There remains but one conclusion to be drawn, Nuwab Sahib, sand I. "Ghuffoor Khan has fled, and made off with the booty he had got. By all accounts he had been very fortunate and every one and his saddle was stuffed with gold.

So I have also heard, said Cheetoo "but yet, it is hard to think of that man's ingratitude. Here have I been associated with him from boyhood. I have raised him from obscurity to be a leader of three thousand horse and this has been a squrry ending to my kindness. Go, said he to the servants, I find no fault with any of you take the horse to my pagah, and let him be tied up among my own."

Thus ended this adventure no suspicion fell upon us nor on any one. The khan was known to have friends at Hydershad, and thither it was supposed he had fied. We alone knew his fate, and it was one he had deserved by a thousand orimes too horrible to mention.

But after this we were not idle. Having begin our work, we had constant employment scarcely a night passed that one or two Pin dharces did not fall by our hands. They were missed, too, as the khan had been, but we were favoured by the constant describing which took place from the labhur for as we approached Nemawur men daily made off in every direction to their houses, little reliabing the fatigues of the camp and the constant alarms we had from reports of the vicinity of the Feringhee troops, by whom we were several times nearly surprised.

Yet I was not fated to have the uniform success which had hitherto attended me Treachery was at work, and the blow we least feared fell with a heavy hand at last, and dispersed us I will tell you how it happened, and what befel us

CHAPTER XXXVIII

Pistol —Trust none, For oaths are straws, men's faiths are wafer-cakes, And Hold-fast is the only dog, my duck, Therefore, Caveto be thy counsellor.

King Henry V Act 11, Scene 2

Among the men whom I had brought with me from Jhalone was one by name Hidayut Khan I had never seen him before, but he was slightly known to Peer Khan, as having served with him, and was represented to be an able Thug Of the extent of his accomplishments I was ignorant, as he never had any hand in the destruction of those who died in the Pindharee camp, for I preferred allowing my own men, upon whom I could depend, to do the work But Hidayut Khan was certainly a capital horseman, a good hand with his sword and spear, and an active, enterprising fellow as a Pin-I have said we never employed him as a bhuttote, nor even as a shumshea, why, I can hardly say, yet so it was he acted always as a scout, and kept watch at the door of the tent while our work went on within Many days after the death of Ghuffoor Khan, indeed, when we had again leached the Nagpoor territory, and when a few days' march would have brought us to Nemawur, Peer Khan, Motee, and one or two others came to me one evening after it was dark, with faces full of concern and alarm

"For the sake of Bhowanee," cried I, "what is the matter? why are ye thus agitated? Speak, brothers, and say the worst, are we discovered?"

"Alas, I fear treachery," said Motee "For some time past we have suspected Hidayut Khan, who has absented himself from us of late in an extraordinary manner, to have disclosed what we are to a person in Cheetoo's confidence. We have dogged them several times about the camp, have detected them in earnest conversation, and this night we too greatly fear he is even now in the durbar. What can be done?"

"We must fly at once," said I "Now that you mention the name of Hidayut Khan, I, too, have my suspicions, are the horses saddled?"

"They are," said Peer Khan, "they are always so"

"Good," said I, "then there is no fear Yet I should like much to satisfy mysolf of the fact of our being suspected,—ay and by Alla! I will ascertain it at once.

"Ah, do not! cried they for the sale of Bhowance do not throw yourself into peril what can be gained by it? Our horseare rendy let us mount them, leave the tent where it is, and fly

Would to Alla that I had followed this wise course!! matters would not have turned out as they did but I was possessed by the dide, a headstrong man is never to be restrained, and I would hear nothing they had to say Is there not one among you, and I who will accompany no? The night is dark, and we can reach Chectoe's text mosberred we will be down with our cars to the kanat, and hear what passes. If the worst comes, if we really are denounced, we shall have ample time to fly before they can get from the made

I will, cried Peer Khan; but no one else stirred they were all paralysed by fear, and were meapable of action.

That is spoken like yourself, brother "cried I; "thou hast a gallant soul. Now do yo all prepare the horses for instant flight let their tother ropes be loosened, and the bridles put in their mouths; do not move them from their places, and no one will suspect us and come, cried I to Poer Khan, 'there is not a moment to be lost.'

We stele out of the tent, and stealthily cropt along towards Cheetoos, which was fortunately at no great distance. No one was about it but we could see from the outside that, by the aide of a dim lamp, three persons were engaged in carnest conversation. We lay down at the edge of the kindle, and my cars engerly drank in the words which fell on them.

'Ajaib! mids voice, which I knew at once to be Chectoos, and so he murdered the khan? you said he did it.

"May I be your tearnine, said Hidayut Khan (I knew his voice too, immediately) he did I caunot say I saw him die with my own eyes, but they made him drunk, and they burned him, and Ameer All himself destroyed the noble horse."

'I do not doubt it, said Cheetoo, with a sigh 'I have done his memory foul wrong in thinking him ungrateful. And the others?

They were men of secreely any note," said the informer "nor do I know the names of all; one only I remember for they had hard work to despatch hum he was a strong man, by name Hubeeb Oola, and belonged to my lord s own pageh."

"I know him well, said Cheetoo; "he was a worthy man and a brave one: and Ameer Ah slew him?

"He did, Nuwab with his own hands and Motee and Peer Khan held him, or he could not have done it. This was only three nights ago, when I would fain have denounced them, but I feared no one would believe me, and as I knew Ameer Ah was in your favour, I thought no one would have listened to an accusation against him."

"Nor would I, by Alla!" cried Chectoo, rising up, and striking his forehead in extreme agitation (I had made a holo in the cloth with the point of my dagger, and could see all distinctly) "I would never have believed your tale, but that encumstances so strongly bear out what you have said Who could have believed that Ameer Ali, the kind, the benevolent,—one who opposed every scheme of violence, and protested against our ravages till I was ashamed of them myself,—who could have thought him a Thug?"

"But it is the truth, Nuwab," said the vile wretch, "when you have seized them, you will find ample evidence of what I tell you. the sword of Ghuffoor Khan is at this moment guided to the side of Peer Khan, who threw away his own "

"That will be conclusive, indeed," said Cheetoo "But how came you to join them?"

"I was at my village near Jhalone," said Hidayut Khan, "I had formerly known Pceroo (as we call Pcer Khan), and he asked me to join him and his jemadai, and to follow the Pindhaices I never suspected them to be Thugs,—who could, when Ameer Ah and his father were high in favour with the rajah? and it was not till the khan's death that they began their horrible work "

"Well," said Cheetoo, 'you have laid the plan, the sooner you put it into execution the better You have prepared the horsemen, have you not " said he to the other man, whose face I knew

"I have," he replied, "they are standing by then horses, all ready for the signal to set on—fifty good fellows, none of the Thugs will escape us "

"Ya Alla!" cried Cheetoo, "how will he look on me? and how can I bring myself to order the punishment he deserves? Ah, Ameer Ali, how thou hast deceived me! how could any one read deceit in that honest face of thine!"

"Go," said he to Hidayut Khan and the others, "bring them to me without delay I will not forget thy reward, thou hast asked for the saddle of Peer Khan"

"No more ' no more '" cried the villain, "'t is all I want"

"Ay," said Peer Khan to me in a whisper, but he has not got it yet, and he is a cunning fellow if he does get it Come, Meei Sahib, we must be off-they are moving"

I was almost fascinated to the spot I could have lain there and listened to the discourse, but the peril was too imminent, too deadly for a moment's delay I got up, and sneaking along, we saw the two figures cross the threshold of the tent, and with hurried steps direct their course to a part of the camp where the pagah was, and which was close to our tent

Fear lent us speed we flow to our tent and for a few moments were engaged in tring up some valuables we had brought out for division having done this, we harried to our horses Some of the men were already in their saddles. I leaped on my spirited animal, and drow my sword ready for the worst. I wished all to move off in a body for as yet there was no alarm but I was decrived-we were surrounded ! The instant we were in motion a body of horse dashed at us, and we were at once engaged in a conflict for life or donth What happened I know not I cut down the only man who was opposed to me Peer Khan was equally fortunate I received a slight wound from another which I little heeded we urged our horses to their utmost speed, and the darkness favoured our escape

I soon found, as I slack ened my pace a little, that some of my men were with me. We had agreed to take a northerly direction, and rendervous near a small village which could be seen from the camp and by this precaution those who had escaped were soon collected together We were not pursued, though we heard the shouts of the Pindharces, as they hallooed to each other in and about their camp. and the shots from their matchlocks and we afterwards heard they had grievously wounded many of each other in mistake I almost dreaded to call over the names of those who stood around me, for I could not see their faces, and no one spoke a word to his companion

We wanted for a considerable time, for an hour or more. Gradu ally the noise and shouting in the Pindharce camp died away and by the strangling watch fires alone could one have told that a mighty army was encamped there. Now and then the shrill neigh of a horse was borne to us upon the night-wind, and when it ceased there was again a melancholy silence. The little village too was deserted part of it had been burned, and the embers of the houses still emitted sparks, now and then sanding up a flame, as portions of dry grass of the thatched huts which had escaped became ignited. Further delay was useless I therefore broke the silence, which was painful to all.

How many are there of us, Peer Khan?" I asked, in a low tone.

Rieven, said he; "the rest I fear have fallen.

I pray Alla they have: better for to fall by a sword-cut or a spear thrust, than to be exposed to terture But who are absent? 15 Motes here?"

"Alas i no, Meer Sahib Motee I saw struck down. I made a cut at the Pindhares who wounded him, but the darkness deceived me—I missed him."

And who else are absent? maid I, stifling my grief, for Motee had been as a brother to me let those who are here tell their names.

They did so Ghous Khan was away, and Nuzzur Ali and Ramdeen Singh, three of our best men, Motee was a fourth, Hidayut Khan the traiter, was a fifth, and all our attendants and grooms

"Tis no use staying here," said I, "we must make the best of our way to Jhalone, there we will wait the usual time, and if none return, the ceremonies for the dead must be performed for them None of ye will grudge your share of the booty we have (blessed be Bhowance!) brought away with us to their wives and families, swear this unto me, ye that are willing"

"We swear?" cried the whole, almost with one voice

"I am satisfied," said I, "now let us proceed. We must turn off the main road when it is light, we all know the paths through the jungles, and by them we will travel till we are safely beyond Hooshungabad, beyond that I fear not."

"Proceed," cried Peer Khan, "we follow you"

And we node on in silence with heavy hearts. We travelled thus for many days. Through the country we passed, we represented ourselves, as long as the Nagpoor territory lasted, to be servants of the government on a secret mission, and though we were often suspected and questioned, yet by my address I brought my band clear out of all the difficulties, and our hearts bounded with joy when at length we arrived on the banks of the noble Nurbudda, and dashing our steeds into the ford soon left its waters between us and our enemies

Inured as we were to the fatigues of long and severe marches, and our horses also, not a day passed but fifteen or twenty coss were travelled, and at this rate we were not long in reaching our home Blessed be Alla! we did reach it, and glad was my heart once again to see the groves of Jhalone after my weary pilgrimage. No notice had we been able to give of our approach, and I alighted at the door of my own house unattended and alone, covered with dust, and worn by fatigue and exposure to the fierce heat of the sun, and as much changed by anxiety for the fate of my poor comrades as though ten additional years had gone over my head, instead of only a few weeks. My servants scarcely knew me, but when I was recognized, the glad tidings of my return flew from mouth to mouth. I waited not even to quench my raging thirst before I was again in the embrace of Azeema, my own loved one, and peril was once more forgotten.

We assembled in the evening, and as the pockets of our saddles were one by one unripped and their contents heaped on the floor before us, a glorious pile indeed met our view of lumps of gold and silver, the produce of the jewels we had seized, which we had melted down as we got them. There were a few strings of pearls, one of which I laid aside for the rajah, and the whole was then weighed, valued, and distributed. Those whom we supposed to be dead were not forgotten; their shares were laid aside and afterwards delivered to their families.

I now again enjoyed peace and rest all idea of joining Chectoo or any other of the Pindharee leaders was out of the question for though I might have done so under an assumed name, yet the chance of being recognised would have been too great and I was rich enough for the present. Cheetoo, too, had reached the summit of his fame and his prosperity his plans were all frustrated by the rash and sudden rise of the Mahratta powers. All they could do was of no avail against the skill and bravery of the Europeans one by one they were conquered and Cheetoo, though he might have profited by the generouty of his enemies and accepted a large estate which he was offered by them, could not curb his restless spirit. A few of his men followed his fortunes, but his standard was in vain raised for fresh adherents. These even deserted him one by one his prospects were blasted he became a miserable fuctive; and pursued from haunt to haunt from fastness to fast ness, he at last perished miserably by a tiger in the dense jungles about the fort of Asseer Ghur Peace be to his memory! he was a great man, and a skilful and brave leader and whatever armes he may have committed in his wild career as a Pindharce chieftini, his dreadful death has been some atmement for them.

I pass over two more years. Why should I fatigue you, sahib with a relation of daily occurrences, monotonous in themselves, and presenting to my memory not one incident worthy of remark? I will again lead you to the road, and to further adventures. But, Ameer Alt, said I, did you never hear aught of Motoe and your other companions who were sersed by Cheetoo? I had forgotten them, sahib theirs was a sad fate, as you shall hear

One evening about three months after my return home, as I was artting in the dewan khann of my house, surrounded by some friends an attendant brought me word that a man was without, closely wrapped in a sheet, who desired to speak with me. "He will not enter" said he and says that you will know him when you see him."

I took up my sword and followed him. It was dusk, and I did not recognise the features of the person who had sent for me in deed he was so closely muffled that I could hardly see them.

What is your purpose, friend? I asked, as the man did not speak, but motioned with his arms under his cloth for my attendant to go away I had him begone.

Jemadar cried the figure when we were alone, do you not know me ?"

The voice," said I, "is familiar to mine ears; step into the light that I may see your face.

the two others, Nuxur Al: and Ramdeen Singh, who were untonched Hidayat Khan was there—the vilkam and traiter !—and his trumphant glance qualled under mine when I fixed my eyes on him and would not withdraw them.

Silence was ordered, and Cheetoo demanded with a lond voice of Hidayut Khan whether he knew any of the persons before him.

" I do Nuwab, said the wrotch and he named us one by one, and pointed us out.

" And what have you to say against them? asked the chief

"I accuse them of being Thugs, said he I accuse them of murder,—of the murder of Ghuffeor Khan and of fourteen other good Pindharces they dare not deny it.

"Let their jemadar as he is called, said Chectoo, if he can speak answer to this. But poor Motee's spirit was fast departing lie was senseless, and never spoke afterwards.

"I will reply said I; I say it is a he, a base he I defy that man to bring proofs. Have we not served well in your camp, O Nuwab? have we not ever been forement in danger and more moraful than all the rest of these murdening villains?

Strike him on the mouth with a shoe! cut him down for his maolonce! cried several.

Silence I again exclaimed Chectoo the first man who disturbs this inquiry by Alla I will behead him.

Go on, he continued, addressing me; what more have you to may?

" Nothing Nuwab I rely on your justice.

" Justice you shall have; but tell me why your chief has fled

This confused me a little, but after a moment a thought I replied stoutly --

Look you, Nawab I am a plans soldier and cannot please your car with fine words. My leader has flod it is true, but not from guilt. That black hearted villam, Hidsyut Khan, wanied more than his share of plander on many cocasions, and was refused it. He separated from us we dogged him about the camp, and detected him in close conversation with a man who is known to be in your favour. This exemted our supparation This evening we watched him to your tent. I gave the information to our jemadar he and Peer Khan stole towards it they laid down outside and heard his ville accusations of murder and had only time to fly and mount their horses. We were not all prepared, and have fallen into your hands. Of what use would it have been for him to have braved your presence? the disgrace alone, to such a man as he is, would have been mapportable—he would have destroyed himself. I know no more; do with use as you blease

"Cheetoo seemed struck with what I had said, and mused for a your command, but why should that vile wretch live? he who. for a greedy demand of more than his share, which he knew he could not receive according to our laws, has denounced us has broken his onth, and been unfaithful to the sult he has caten? Is he not a Thug P has he not joined me and a hundred others in our work over since he was a boy ? He cannot deny it look at him. look at his cowardly features convulsed by terror -they show that what I say is true. If he had been, as he says he is, an hones man, why did he not cause us to be serred when we were in the act of murder-upon the very bodies? He might have done so for the deeds, except that of Ghuffoor Khan, were committed in the first watch of the night, when the camp was awake and every one engaged in his own business. Why did he not then denounce us? he would have been behoved. But no he wanted half of the plun der of that man's brother it was denied him, as similar requests had been before and he has become a thing for men to spit at. If we die, he should not be spared, because he is a Thug as we are because he is a traiter and a coward!

'Laar! cried Hidayut Khan, scarcely able to speak between rage and fear har! I defy thee to say I over strangled a person "'No, said I to Cheetoo he was too great a coward, he dared not! and my lord may have remarked that he used the slang term to express his meaning in the last words he uttered.

"Vile wretch! cried Cheetoo to him, thou art worse than they :
they are brave and undaunted, thou art a coward thy head shall be struck from thy body

His cross for pardon, for life, were horrible he besought, he threatened but of what avail was it? He was dragged to the doorway of the tent, a Pindharee stopped behind him, and, while he still pleaded for mercy his head was struck from his shoulders and rolled forwards.

Are you not dismayed? and Cheetoo to us yours will follow

"No! cred we, one and all death must come sooner or later and ours is now—we fear not.

They fear it not, said he to another chieftain 'death would be welcome to them but their pumehment shall be worse—they shall linger out a muserable existence. Ho I cried he to his fur ashes, cut off these villains nows and hands, and bring them to me.

"It was done, Meer Sahib! I alone have lived to tell it our noses were out off—next our hands. The bleeding stumps were thrust into boiling oil, and we were driven from the camp, there and then to perish, as they thought we should, in the wild jungles. And the other two did perish we had no one to hand up our

Tis true I had gained the highest rank. I possessed fame not a jemadar or soobelidar of Thugs could compare his actions with mine; but I vainly thought there was more to be gained, and that I had only to propose an expedition, to be joined by a larger number of Thugs than had collected together for many years. In this I was not dumppointed, as you shall hear

I have before mentioned to you the name of Gancaha Jemadar he was always with us when not on the road, envying our quiet and respectable mode of life, which he could not attain by any means, though he left none untried. He bribed all the rajah's court, may the rajah himself to procure employment; but there was comothing so harsh and forbidding in his aspect, and so un couth were his manners, that he did not succeed in what he so much longed for

He came in demair to us, and after rating in no measured terms the conduct of the much and his officers, said that he was deter mined again to take to the road, for there alone he found occupation and amusement. He pressed me to accompany and join him, pictured in strong terms the booty we should gain and the glory we should win and after many demurs and objections on my part, I finally agreed. Notice was given out to all the Thugs of that part of the country that an expedition of great magnitude would be undertaken after the ensuing Dusors.

Accustomed as Assema had become to my temporary absences, after the periods of quiet I had passed with her she did not now oppose my leaving her as she had done before. She thought it was some mercantile speculation which led me from home, and, as you may believe, I did not undecerve her

Rejoiced at the prospect of again serving under me, all my old band, and many more, flocked to the place of rendervous, which was at some distance from Jhalone. Ganesha had apwards of a hundred followers; and, finally on the day of the Dusers, the usual cere momes were concluded in the presence of upwards of three hundred Thuga, than whom a finer or more experienced band had never gathered under any leader I was justly proud of my charge and my father who had accompanied me to the rendervous, felt all his former fire kindle within him. I pressed him to accompany us, and the old man consented.

Some were for trying a new line of road, and for penetrating into Guserat through Rajpootana. This question was fairly discussed in a general assembly and opinions being much belanced between that route and our old one by Sanger and Jubbulpoor to Nagpoor the matter was referred to the decision of the omens. They were con sulted as I have before described and as they decidedly pointed to the south, no further doubt could be entertained upon the subject.

Again, therefore, we moved on in our old direction, to us familiar, for there was not a man among us who did not know every step of the road, and the best places for the destruction of any persons whom chance might throw in our way

We had proceeded nearly as far as Saugor, with but indifferent success considering our large body, having only killed fourteen travellers, and got but little booty, when, one night, as my father and myself, with a few others, sat in our little tent, we heard the charea—that most dreadful of all omens to a Thug—The ekarea is the short sharp bark or call of the jackal, uttered in the first watch of the night, in itself there is something peculiarly melancholy and appalling, but to a Thug the sound is one of horror—In an instant all conversation was at an end, and we gazed on each other in consternation and alarm—No one spoke, we all listened intently, it deliberation. all started to their feet

"We must return instantly," said my father "Bhowanee is unpropitious, or danger threatens, at any late, to go on is impossible, for marked you not that the sound came from the very direction of to-morrow's march?"

might be repeated, which would be worse than ever It was, the sharp short bark was again heard, and there was but little time for

All agreed that it did, and were unanimous in their desire to return. Still I could not divine why the bark of a jackal should change the determination of three hundred men, and I ventured to say that I was sure it was some mistake, and that, even if it was not, we ought to proceed, since the omens had been so propitious at the commencement. "Why!" said I to my father, "were they not so? Have we not worshipped the pickaxe every seventh day according to the law? Have we not performed all the necessary ceremonies on the death of every traveller?"

"That is all true," said my father, "but it is madness to think of proceeding Foolish boy you have never known a reverse, thanks to your good fortune, and the excellent advice by which you have been guided, but beware how you disregard omens—it will one day lead you to destruction. As to this matter, the designs of Bhowanee are inscrutable, and she must be obeyed!"

Other Thugs too had heard the ekarea, and many came in a clamorous body to the tent, begging either to be allowed to disperse, or to be led back to Jhalone

Any words of mine would have been useless, for the whole band seemed infected by superstitious fear, I therefore held my peace Our encampment was broken up instantly, and, late as it was, we that night retrograded a few coss on the road by which we had come, no fresh omen of favour was vouchsafed to us, and we retraced our steps to Jhalone, disappointed, wearied and dispirited.

A month passed in idloness but having formed my determination urain to take to the read I was not to be put off, and again I assombled my men and sought for omens. They were favourable, and I heartily prayed to Bhowance that they might not deceive us again into a fruitless expedition. They pointed, too to a different direction. than of the west and we knew that between Bombay and Indoor and indeed through all parts of Malwa, large treasures were con-We had before, as you have heard, reaped the largest booty I had ever got in that quarter and I hoped to secure a like one again. We accordingly left our home, one hundred and twenty Thurs under myself and Poer Khan, who still stuck to me. Ganesha had gone off in a different direction-whither I knew not his prosonce was always hateful to me why I could not tell, and I could but ill disguise the feelings I entertained towards him.

It was too long an expedition for my father to undertake, and se cordingly he stayed at our village. We met with no adventures worth recording sahib, on our road to Bombay, for thither we were determined to proceed in quest of plunder; besides, I had heard much of its importance, and I felt a currenty to behold the see and the ships of the Feringhees, which came over trackless waters from their far country But when I say that we met with no particular adventures or any worth recording you must not think that we were idle. Thirty one travellers died by our hands several escaped us, the omens being against their destruction and finally we reached Bombay with about four thousand rupees worth of plunder -enough to enable us to live respectably In Bombay we put up in the large barar which is without the fort and although from the danger of detection, we could not keep together yet a constant communication was kept up among us, and every man held himself in readmess to start in any direction on a moment swarning. I had appointed too a rendervous the town of Tannah, which, being close to the continent, is a place where travellers congregate in large numbers previous to passing over

I saw the see! Day after day I went down to its edge, and gazed on its magnificence. I used to be on the grass of the plant before the fort, and pass hours of a sort of dreamy eastery looking on its varying aspect, -like that of a beautiful woman, now all smiles, ngain agritated by the passions of love,—or listening to its monotonous and sullen roar as wave after wave bowed its creet, and broke anto sparkling foam on the white sand.

I was lying thus one day about the seventh after our arrival, meditating on our mactive life, and had almost determined to depart the next day when a respectable-looking man came up to ma. "Salam Aliekoom! said he you are syidently a stranger for your dress and carriage bespeak you to be an inhibiting of Hin dostan I have watched you for two days coming to this spot and gazing on the sea, have you never seen it before?"

"Never," replied I, "my home is, as you say, far inland, and in Hindostan, you have thus guessed rightly, and to me, a stranger, can it be otherwise than that I should be struck with a sight so novel and so overpowering as this expanse of water is, which seems to melt into the sky?"

"The tones of your voice are music in my ears," said the stranger "I have heard many from my country (for that is also Hindostan), but never any which reminded me so strongly of my own home as May I ask your village?"

"I lived formerly in Murnac, in the Sindousee Pergunna," said

I, "but now reside in Jhalone"

"Murnae!" cried the man in astonishment; but he lowered his voice as he said, "Ah, I remember now, 'tis on the borders of Sindia's country, and belongs to him."

"Not now," said I; "the Feringhees have had it ceded to them, and they possess it"

"But," said the man, changing the topic, "you love to look on the sea, have you ever been on its surface? have you visited the ships you may have seen moored before the town?"

"I have not," replied I, "I several times determined to go, but my heart failed me when I saw the frail boat which should take me Besides, I am a stranger, no one would have admitted me were I to have gone to them"

"Will you accompany me?" said the man "I have an idle day before me, and shall be glad to pass it in your company."

I gladly assented, and we took our way to a stone pier which ran into the sea on the outside of the fort.

I could not divine with whom I had thus scraped an acquaintance, all the peons on the bunder (for so the pier was called) paid the greatest respect to my new friend, all made low obeisances to him, and a scramble ensued among the owners of the small boats which were tied to the landing-place, for the honour of conveying us to the shipping

He selected one, however, and pushing off, we were on the bosom of the ocean. I confess I was afraid, though Jhalone was not far from the Jumna, I had never seen that river, nor had I ever seen a boat before my arrival at Bombay Now each succeeding wave, as we descended from the top of the last one, appeared as though it would roll over us, but the men were fearless and experienced, and after a few qualms I was reconciled to our situation We rowed, for the wind was against us, close round several of the ships which lay at anchor; and at last ascended, with the permission of a Feringhee officer who was on board, the side of an immense ship, which my friend told me was one of war and belonged to the king of England After looking over the upper part a small gratuity of two rupces to a sailor enabled us to proceed below to see the guns. was astomshed at their size and at the exactness with which every thing was fitted; the ropes even were twisted down into coils, like hugo snakes sleeping and the whole was a picture of neatness and cleanliness which I little expected to have seen. But these matters. salib, are doubtless familiar to you, so I will pass them over Wo returned to the shore with a fair wind, and as the bootmen spread a small sail, we denced merrily along over the heaving waters.

I was about to separate from my companion, and again protested

my sense of his kindness, when he stopped me

No Meer Sahib, said he I must have further converse with you. I am much mistaken if you are not what I was once, and am still whenever I can sense an opportunity

I stared at him. Could he be a Thug? If he was not, he would not understand our words of recognition; if he was, I should be right. I did not heatate.

"Ah Khan Bhaco Salam! * said I, gazing intently at him.

"Salam Aliakoom!" cried he. It was enough-he also was a Thing "Those words I have not heard for many a year said he; "they round me of my early days, and the goor of the Tupounce.

Then you have eaten it? said L

I have," replied the man.

"Enough, cried I; I have met with a friend but who you are I am as yet ignorant.

Have you not ever heard of Sooblan Khan Jemadar?" he asked You say you came from Murane surely I must be remembered there?"

"I have, answered I; "those who knew you have behaved you dead. How is it that you are here, and a person of anthority?

I will tell you hereafter of my situation, but at present I have many questions to ask of you and first, is my good friend Ismail Jemadar alive?

"My father! said I, surely he is the good old man has attamed a fine age, and is well.

"Shookur Khoda! creed he but you said he was your father surely he had no children—he was not even married when I left."

"Ah, said I, so it might have been then, but here am I to speak for myself.

"And Hoosen, his and my friend, does he too live?

Literally Salutation to All Khan, my brother " This is the phrase of recognition by which Thugs are able to make themselves known to each other in all parts of India. "Alas, no, he died two years ago, full of age and honour" (I have not mentioned this event to you, sahib, but it had taken place soon after I returned from my Pindharce expedition)

He continued to ask after many of his old friends, and at last inquired how many men I had with me

I told him, and he was somewhat astonished at their number

"Well," said he, "you are here, and it will be hard if I cannot find some work for you I have told you I am a Thug, and have been so from my youth, my father and ancestors were Thugs before But, many years ago, I came here as the servant to a sahoukar of Indoor I liked the place, and not long after got employment as a government peon, in the service of the English They have been kind and generous masters to me, I have served them well, and have risen by degrees to the rank I now hold, which is that of jemadar Why I left my station as a jemadar of Thugs is perhaps unknown to you?"

I replied that I did not know

"It was in consequence of a foolish quarrel with your father," "We were on an expedition, and I thought he assumed too much We were both young men, of fiery blood, we had a sharp altercation, and both drew our swords, he was my superior, and I feared that he would condemn me to death I fled, entered the service of the sahoukar as one of his escort from Indoor, and you see what I am Yet I have never forsaken the Thugs whenever I have met with them I am too old to seek adventures myself, but I put the young and active in the way of them, and thus have kept up my connection with them, not, it is true, with those of Hindostan, for a feeling of shame has hitherto prevented my doing so, but since Bhowanee has thrown you in my way, you shall not regret it acquaintance has been with the Thugs of the Dukhun, and I have headed one or two expeditions towards Poona, when I could get leave of absence for a while from my duties But when I could not do this, I have secured bands of travellers for my associates, and they have been successful I have, too, by the share of the booty I was entitled to, been able to purchase the goodwill of those who could be friend me, and your servant Soobhan Khan enjoys a high character among the Sahib-logue for honesty and fidelity "

"I do not doubt it," said I "your appearance insures respect, your manners are courtly, and how could it be otherwise?"

Thus conversing we reached his homes at most for from where

Thus conversing, we reached his house, it was not far from where I was residing, and, as he told me afterwards, he had discovered who we were, and had followed me from place to place, until he got an opportunity of speaking with me unobserved From this time, as you may believe, sahib, we were sworn friends I listened to his details of roguery (for rogue he was in his heart) with great interest, and I accompanied him several times to the durbar of the gentleman with whom his duties were connected. He was oridently a person well thought of, and as far as his office was concerned, that of keeping the peace, was zealous and active. Still there was something forbidding to me in the way he now followed his profession of a Thing and as we became more intimately acquainted he unfolded to me his plans and operations. I cannot tell you, sahib, of their extent. He introduced me to the jemadars of Dukhun Things, who scented the reads to Poons, to Nassak, to Shelapoor and Hydershad to others from Guserat, who were engaged in that part of the country—but all under his control, and from all of whom he exacted a high rate of tribute as the price of the information he was able to give them, as to the despatch of treasure in various directions by the schoulars and merchants of Bombay

I had remained with him a week, and our stock of money was sensibly diminishing. What was to be done? He had promised assistance in giving me information of the despatch of treasure in our direction, and I had hitherto waited in expectation that he would falfil his promise. I was tired to of Bombay; the scane was advancing and I hardly thought we should reach Jhalone before the setting in of the rains. I therefore went to him, and frankly told him our money was running short, and that in a place like Bombay where my men were exposed to so many temptations, they could not be expected to keep what they had I was therefore autious to depart, and, if he could give me no hope of any speedy booty that I should set off in two dars, and take my claime on the read.

"My plans are not quite matured in your direction, said he. I have heard that one of the greatest traders to Indoor and Malwa is about to send not less than two lakins of rupees thither. I know that the rokurreas are hired but as yet I cannot say whether they carry hoondess or money. Three days ought to determine this and in the meantime, as you want money a thousand rupees are at your service, which you can repay me, with interest, at three per cent. per month, on your arrival at Jhalone. I will trust to your good faith as the son of my old friend.

I am obliged to you, replied I "but the money is not quite so necessary as I said. I believe every man has some twenty or thirty rapses in his possession but it was to prevent their spending this that I spoke to you as I did. Only say that within a week we may start, and my men will be careful.

"Certainly said he, before a week's time. Come to me to-mor row evening after prayer time, and you shall have further news about your bunij

The interest-eating rescal! said I, as I left him. He a true believer! Strange I have never heard of him from my father but I will ask him about the fellow on my return home, and doubt not I shall hear some evil or inscality of him. Not a super of his money will I touch, the kafir? A Thug to take interest from a Thug, who ever heard of it? I dare say he is as bad as the villamous bhutteara we killed at Sangoi Nor was I wrong, sahib I became intimate with a Dukhun jemadar who was waiting for bunij, who told me that he ground the Thugs unmercifully, threatened to denounce them if they ever demured, and got from them double the share he would have been entitled to had he shared the risk and the danger on the road

"But," said the jemadar, "there is no doing without him, much as he oppresses us he throws the most valuable booty into our hands, which we could never get scent of by ourselves, he has a number of Thugs who are his servants, and whom he pays liberally to get him information, he possesses the confidence of the sahoukars, as he assists them to smuggle, they pay him too for a kind word now and then with the Sahib-logue. In fine, he is paid both by them and us, and he contrives to sell all our valuable plunder"

"Then his receipts must be enormous," said I

"They are," said the jemadar, "and we all grudge them to him, but still he protects us, and we could not do without him"

"Has he ever been treacherous?" I asked, for, by Alla! I was inclined to mistrust the rascal

"There are some stories of the kind," he replied, "but in the main he is to be trusted Still, as I said, if he were not, we could do nothing without him, he knows every jemadar of the Dukhun, and could, if he chose, blow up the whole system to-morrow, but it does not suit his interest to do so, and we are all his slaves"

"Long may ye continue to be so!" cried I to Peer Khan when he had left me, "but as for us, brother, 't is the last time he will catch us here What say you?"

"Certainly," said Peer Khan, "these fellows are never to be trusted, they exist everywhere, in all shapes they are zemindars and patels of villages, and they are fakeers and bhuttearas, they are goosaens, sahoukars, servants, and mutsuddees, nay, the rajah of Jhalone is one himself They are an evil 't is true, but we could not do without them"

"I have done so as yet," said I, "and, by Alla! I will never trust one of them."

"May you never have occasion, Meer Sahib" And the conversation dropped

I went as I had promised, and found Soobhan Khan in high glee I have secured the bunij," said he "Are you ready?" "I have secured the bunij," said he

"I am What are your orders?"

"Listen," he replied "I was right in saying the sum was two lakhs. Contrary to my expectations the sum is in gold and silver and jowels there are about ten thousand rupees in hoondees (bills) but that is all. Now before I tell you more, we must make our bargain.

"Speak, cried I; "I am ready to give anything in reason."

"Ay you are my old friend s son, so I must not treat you as I do the others I associate with, said he from them I get a third of the whole but from you I ask only a fifth. A fifth will be twenty thousand rupees. Will you give it?

With pleasure, said I. "You may trust to my word directly
I get the money and reach Jhalone, I will purchase a hoondee on Bombay and send it you."

Capital | cried he "you are a man I like to deal with no unnecessary talk, no hagging like a bunner, but you speak like a soldier as you are. Now give me a promise under your seal that I shall have the money and I will detail the plan to you. The paper is a mere matter of form, and I am methodical.

I objected to thus, and his brow darkened. I saw it, and instantly altered what I had expressed. Get me writing materials, and I will write it out.

"What you write? a Thug write? But, never mind, since you are able to do it, so much the better there will be no need of a third person.

I wrote the paper and handed it to him, having scaled it with my seal he folded it carefully up, and tucked it into a fold of his

turban

"Now we are all right, Meer Sahib. This treasure goes under the ecort of fifteen rokurrous they have three camels, and will be disguised as soldiers, going from Pooms to Indoor They left this place yesterday with part of the treasure the rest is at Pooms. From Pooms they will go to Nassuk, where you will fall in with them trust me, my information is correct to the minutest particular I know the suboukars who send it I have spoken with the rokur reas and to insure your being unsuspected by them, here is a pass written in Persana and Mahratita, signed and scaled by the English officers of customs here. It represents you as persons who have some from Benares in charge of goods for a shoukar by name Hur ree-das, and directs that no one shall molest you on your return. The men who brought the goods are still here, and likely to ruman till the end of the rums. Then leader's name is Futih Mahomed you must be, if you please he too is about your own see and appearance, and thus you will be better able to person ato him. You see I have laid a good plan, and I leave all the rest to your own judgment. Make the best of your way to Nassuk was there four days, and on the fifth you will see your bunij if you keep a proper look-out Now go, make your preparations, and may Bhowanee send you success Remember Soobhan Khan, and return as speedily as you like, I have no doubt I shall have found fresh work for you"

"You may depend on me, Khan Sahib," said I, "I will not be long away from you Your plan is an admirable one, and, Inshalla! your twenty thousand rupees are as safe to you as though you even now had them in your possession"

"Remember me with many kind words to your father, Ameer Ali," continued he, "would he come thus far to see an old friend, and forgive him for the past?"

"Of that I have but little hope," said I, "he is old and infirm, and never leaves his village, but he shall write to you"

"Enough, enough," said the khan, "I have much to accuse myself of in the past, but 'tis a long time ago, and he has most likely forgotten my foolish conduct"

I left him, but made an inward determination to be guided entirely by my father's counsel as to whether one course of the twenty thousand rupees should be paid or not "And," said Peer Khan afterwards, "twenty thousand rupees—the old villain! He get it! Ah, Meer Sahib, we shall be the brothers of owls and jackasses if he ever sees one rupee!"

The next morning we were on our return to Jhalone, and we halted between Bombay and Tannah for the day Our pass was of much use, for it was respected and obeyed, and the day after we passed Tannah and the different revenue guard-houses without interruption.

CHAPTER XL

1st Murd —I am strong framed, he cannot prevail with me 2nd Murd -Spoken like a tall fellow that respects his reputation, come, shall we fall to work?

Richard III Actu, Sc 4.

"SHOOKUR Khoda!" cried Peer Khan, as he rushed into my presence on the fourth day after we had arrived at Nassuk, "Soobhan Khan was right—they are come!"

"Are you sure, Khan?"

"Certain," he replied, "the description we had of them tallies with what I have seen in every point. Come and see yourself, there are the camels, and the men are disguised. But I could have sworn, had I met them anywhere, that they were rokurreas, they have the air and bearing of the tribe"

"Enough," said I, "you cannot be deceived They do not know we are here, and we will do the same as we did at Boerhanpoor Get the men ready; we will go round the town travel a coss or two, and enter by the same gate they did we will then put up in the bazar with them."

We were all shortly in motion, and, as I had planned after going round the outside of the town, we entered it on the other side, and were soon in our new quarters in the basar

Travellers soon get acquainted. The sliop I chose adjoined the one they occupied, and I had quickly scraped an acquaintance with the jemadar of the rokurrens.

Narrayun Das, for that was his name, was a tell and very power ful man he had small twinkling eyes, and long straight cyclrows which, by binding his turben tightly over his temples, he had drawn up in diagonal lines to either side, and this imparted to them a very peculiar expression long mustachies, which were twisted out to each side, and thick bushy whiskers and his whole appearance proved him to be an experienced rokurrea, and one to whom deceit and strategem were familiar. I shall have a cunning hand to deal with here, thought I, as I scanned his feetures no common pretences will go down with him but have him I must and will, ay and his two lakis too. Two lakis! it is worth an effort, were he Roestum himself. Yet he was not slow in forming an acquanitance with me. Our salutations passed in due form, and after we had all cooked our morning meal, and sat on our carpets, we soon entered into familiar conversation.

"A pretty business Bajoe Rao has made of it, said he as I had asked him the news from Poona. "The coward! had he but put himself at the head of his army when the fight took place at Kirkee, he might have annihilated the Fernances.

Aind do you wish that he had?" said I "Certainly what do we know of them? While they confined thomselves to the fort of Bombay it was all very well,—and I remember the time when they had hardly a foot of ground beyond it, but now thitle by little, they have advanced, until they have upset the Mahratta empire, and are in a fair way to take it."

"But," said I "Bajee Rao has a good army all the country is his swn, and surely he will do something. The Mahrattas are good soldiers, and he has leaders of renown with him.

"He will do nothing Meer Sahib he will run from place to place, and his army may fight if they can or will he will never draw a sword. The cowardly wretch has not the soul of a fier."

Well, Jemadar to me it matters little I have forsworn soldier ing and find that I can get a good livelihood by escorting treature and goods. I am just come from Benarce, and the sahoukar who employed me has sent for more, which I am to bring down to him "Ah!" cried he, "so you are in that line. Well, it is a good one if you have plenty of men, but a sorely troublesome and difficult one if you have few I speak from experience, for I am in the same business myself I have been lucky, but my poor brother was otherwise he fell by the hands of thieves between here and Indoor, we heard of him from Boorhanpoor, but beyond that we could get no tidings of him "

"Strange!" said I, "I never heard of thieves on the road, though my kafila would have been worth plundering. But now I am under the protection of the Sahib-logue, I care not, they will soon have all the country, and there will be no danger in another year"

"Under the protection of the Feringhees! how do you mean? thought you said you served a sahoukar"

"So I do," I replied, "but to insure my safe return his friend Soobhan Khan got me this pass, which he said would be respected throughout the country," and I pulled out the document, which I had carefully folded up in wax-cloth, and showed it to him

"You are fortunate, Meer Sahib, and particularly in knowing Soobhan Khan, who is a worthy man and one deservedly respected. I have known him for many years, he has always been a good friend to me, and has got me employment when I most required it, by becoming security for me to a large amount. But you said that you had given up soldiering in this you have been wise, far preferable is it to gain an honourable livelihood than be marched in all duections, with but little pay, and hard fighting for that With whom have you served?"

"You must not tell any one," said I, "for every man who has served the man I have would desire it to be a secret, and perhaps the knowledge of my former life might be against my present interests. I served under Cheetoo Pindharee, and led three thousand of his best horse"

"Under Cheetoo!" cried the jemadar, "this is most strange, and you are not joking?"

"I am not, I swear by your head, I dare say I could find some papers to convince you of the fact if you doubt it. But, as I said, I do not like to tell any one"

"You need not fear me," said he, "I am as close as a rokurrea, and you know the saying is proverbial. But you must have seen strange adventures and strange lands, for they say he got nearly to Madras, and left the Feringhees' country a desert behind him."

"I shall be glad to tell you some of my adventures, Jemadar Sahib, and perhaps they may interest you, though it hardly befits a man to speak of his own deeds."

"Nay, there is nothing to be ashamed of, Meer Sahib, and as for being a Pindharce, the best in the land were with him and a gallant army they were when the first lubhur assembled at Nema-WILL

"Then you were there?"

"I was. I brought some treasure from Indoor and Corem to the sahoukars at Nemawar and saw the whole of the preparations for the campaign and Bhugwan knows I was so taken with the appogrance of the whole, that could I have got a horse, I verily behove I should have turned Pindharce myself. They my every man filled his saddle with gold and pearls."

"We were lucky enough said I, especially in the first expedi tion. Had you come to Nemawar before the second had set out, you would have heard of me I had a good name and a high rank. In the first I was nobody and gained Chectoos favour solely be-cause I was a better swordsman than any in his camp'

"Then I have heard of you, said the man but surely you cannot be that Synd Ameer Ali who was only second to Ghuffoor Khan ?

I am the very person and no other "I replied true, my rank 18 fallen, but whose has not? Chectoo is dead Ghuffoor Khan has duappeared, and is supposed to have gone to Hyderabad Syud Bheekoo is, God knows where and Shekh Dalla still roams about the hills between Boorhanpoor and Ellichpoor with a price set on his head. No one knew much of me, and I suspect, so long as I behave peacefully and follow my present calling no one will ask after me I had enough of being a Pindharee after the second foray and got to my home at Jhalone as soon as I could. If the others had been wise, they would have sought their safety as I did.

'You, said the jemadar Cheetoos was a sad fate-he deserved a better; but they say the Sahib-logue offered him a jagheer; is this true?"

"So I have heard," said I fool that he was, he would not accept it; but no wonder his whole soul was bound up in his plans for driving out the Feringhees. He thought the Mahrattas would beat them and when they had gained the first victory he was to have joined them with fifteen thousand horse, and become a great commander I should have followed him too had they been suc cessful but they were not, nor ever will be, and I am what you 800 MA.

"A strange history" said the man, and you have told me more than I ever knew before. Had the Peahwa and the Rajah of Nag poor played their parts as well as Oheetoo, all would have gone right but it is useless to think of them, and I suppose we must make up our minds to our new masters. Now however you and I Meer Schib, must not separate. I am going to Indoor for some treasure, and your best way lies through it I will keep with you for your party is a large one, and, to tell you the truth, I don't like passing those jungles by the Sindwah Ghat with my own. The Bheels are taking advantage of the present disturbances to be all in arms. Bands of deserters from the Peshwa traverse the country in all directions, helping themselves to what they can, and they are not over scrupulous either. So we will keep together, if you like, for mutual protection."

"I shall be glad to do so," said I, "though I have nothing to lose, except two or three thousand rupces, and whoever comes to take them will get more blows than money"

"And I have still less," said he, "I have only enough to pay my expenses and feed my camels But I am no great hand at fighting, and am not mounted as you are, to run from danger"

But the heavily laden pack-saddles belied his words. I was not to be deceived, and felt as sure that the coveted treasure was there as that the rokuriea who guarded it was before me

We shortly afterwards separated, and when I was alone with Peer Khan I told him what I had said, and how I had deceived the rokurrea A long and hearty laugh we had over it

"But I fear for you, Meer Salub," said he "Compare his power and your own slight frame You must risk nothing now"

I laughed "His power, Khan!" I said, "what is it to that of many who have fallen under my hand before now? Besides, he is the brother of the rokurrea we killed beyond Boorhanpoor, and he must be mine at all hazards. I would not miss this adventure for thousands"

"I will tell you what," said Peer Khan, "it will never do to kill them so far from Indoor, let us get them as near to the city as possible, and we shall be the nearer our own home. This matter will cause a stir, and we had better not lisk anything."

"Well, be it as you will I had intended to have killed them near Boorhanpoor, and then to have turned off directly into the hills, we should never be followed"

"Ay, and risk Shekh Dulla and his party, who are out?" said Peer Khan, "that would never do He would plunder us, and as he knows us, would most likely serve us as Cheetoo did the poor fellows who were caught"

"Astaffur Alla!" cried I, shuddering "God forbid! no, your plan is the best We will entice them out of the towns before we have gone many marches, and then they are our own when and wherever we please"

I pass over our journey, sahib, all journeys are alike devoid of interest, and only one routine of dusty roads, parching sun (for the rokurreas would not travel by night), bad food, and discomfort of all kinds. We met with no adventure, except being robbed of trifing articles at different places and we fully succeeded in persuading the rokurreas to encamp with us, as we adhered to our old custom of preferring the outside of the villages to entering them where, besides the additional fear of thieres, there was more dust more dirt, more heat, and continual squabbles with the villagers. My men had behaved admirably. No one could have told, from the bread patous they spoke, that they were aught but what they represented themselves to be —Benaries-wallas, and Bhoipporrees they looked as stupid a set of owls as could well be collected together but they played their parts, to a man, with the extreme cantion and cunning on which rested the success of our enterprise.

After all sahib, cannot you now understand the excitement which possesses the soul of a Thug in his pursuit of men? Cannot you feel with us, as you hear my story and follow us in my recital? Here had we kept company with these rekurreas for twenty days; we had become intimate they told their adventures, we told ours, the cremings passed in singing or telling tales, until one by one we sank down wearied upon our carpets. Cannot you approximate the intense interest with which we watched their every movement, may every word which fell from them, and our terrible alarms, as sometimes our minds misgave us that we were suspected? Yet still we stuck to them through everything they were never lost aight of for a moment and, above all, their minds were kept lappy

As to their leader he was delighted with me My accounts of my adventures as a Pindharee, the plunder we had got, the towns we had burned and sacked, all were to him interesting and day by day I told him of new exploits. He used to sit, and the rest of his men too, listening with unfergred pleasure to the accounts which I and Peer Khan gave. Cunning as they were, at heart they were honest and simple, and they readily believed all we told them

But their time had drawn near Indoor was five marches farther and delay was now impracticable and useless besides, to insure their safe arrival, I knew they had determined on going thirty coss in one march, and my men could not keep up with these hardy fellows.

"Come what will, said I to Peer Khan, "they die to-morrow night.

The time came. We were sitting as usual, under some noble tamannd-trees one by one we had sung our songs or related our adventures and who could have guessed, had he seen us time engaged, that a work of death was to case ? Every tongue was employed, and the hearty laugh which broke at times from one or other of the eastenbly showed how light and merry were our hearts,—we, at the certainty of our success, the rokurress, at the thought that the peril of the road was past, and that their large amount of treasures would reach its destination in safety there was not a grave face among us-

"There," cried the jemadai of the lokurreas, "there is the moon, when she has usen over the trees yonder we will bid you farewell, kind Meer Sahib, we have been happy in your company, and free from alarms and danger Bhugwan grant that we may hereafter journey in company, and as safely as we have done! Thanks to your care in protecting us outside the villages, we have not lost a course, and we have been taught a new mode of encamping, which we will follow in future. The moon will last us the whole night, and we shall have twenty coss of ground behind us by the time you wake from your night's sleep "

The Thugs had taken their places to each rokurrea were four stout men allotted, and I marvelled that they should have thus allowed themselves to be separated from each other. But they had not suspected who could have done so?

The moon rose majestically above the distant trees, her full, round, and yellow orb cast a mellow light upon our group The 10kurreas rose with one accord, and each turned to the men he was near to give them his parting benediction and salutation

"Nay," said I, "we part not thus, Narrayun Das let us separate as friends, receive my embrace, we are friends and brothers by profession" We embraced, and before the others could press forward to salute me, I gave the jhnnee "Pān lao!" I exclaimed

It was enough The jemadar fell beneath my own handkerchief, and a few shrieks and groans told the rest-all had died

"Haste ye, my good fellows," cried I to the lughaees, "the same bright moon which was to have served these fellows shines brightly upon us Quick with your work, the camels are ready, and a few hours will see us safe from pursuit, though indeed none is to be apprehended from this small place"

The bodies were stripped, every fellow had a heavy humeana, besides what was laden on the camels We stopped not to count our money, but hastened on when the interment was finished, and only tarrying for a few moments at the next village we came to, to purchase the goor for the tuponnee, we found ourselves in the morning nearly twenty coss from the scene of our last night's adventure

We halted till the evening, and again pushed on, but by a different road, and leaving Indoor about fifteen coss to the right, we directed our course to a small village named Dehalpoor From this, leaving Oojein also to the right, we hastened on, always travelling by night on account of the extreme heat of the weather, and by way of Buhadoorgurh and Aorcha, we reached Jhalone in safety No alarm had we but one The revenue officers on the frontier of Holkar's dominions insisted on knowing who we were, and what we had with us, and so strict were then inquiries, that, had it not been for the English pass I had with me, we must have been suspected and approhended. But, thanks to Soobhan Khan, it was not questioned, as Futih Mahomed I passed free. A duty or rather an exaction, of fifty rupoes was lovied on the treasure, and a fresh pass given to us, by which we escaped further questioning and detention. Who can describe my father s joy at scoing the treasure. The old man was in ecutary he kissed me, he embraced me, called me by every endearing name, and extelled my conduct in glowing terms to Ganesha, who happened to be with him. It was easy to see, however that to that worthy they might well have been spared. Jealousy possessed him which he could ill disguise, and I verily believe, had he dared, that he would have informed the raigh of the treasure we had secured. In the memory of the oldest Thug no such booty had ever been gained, and I was classed by the Thugs with Jhora Nack and Kuduk Bunwarea, fabled votaries of Bhowanee, of whom stories were told which, though implicitly believed by most, may all of our fraternity I never credited. But it was enough for me. I had never met a reverse, and every Thug of Hindostan, I verily believe, only thought he must join me to secure to himself a booty which would support him for years

I have forgotten, however to mention to you an incident which boile us at Buhadoorgurh. We were encamped outside the town, and late in the evening we saw a body of men, whom we at first took to be Thugs, coming towards our camp

Who can they be? mad I to Peer Khan they look like Thugs, yet it is late for any party to be out.

"Some straggling party I suppose, said he; "I will go and see "If they are Thugs and you know them, I added, bring them, but my not a word of our booty"

No, no, I am not such a fool, said he laughing "but I will bring you the news.

He went, and returned with the leader of the party I had pur posely kept in my little tent, in order that my face might not be seen in case they were strangers, and to conceal it effectually I tied a handkerchief over my mouth and chin. Salam Aliekoom, said a gruff voice, as a man with Peer Khan entered the tent.

"You are welcome, friend," said I "sit down. He was evidently weary with travel, and seated himself slowly

Your name?" said I "and who are you?

My name, replied the man, is well known, I dere say to most people, and they are afraid of it. I am called Lall Khan, or famili arly Ialloo"

I have not heard it before " said I but who are you and your men ? "

"Oh, we are fice traders, who help ourselves to what we can get with a strong hand "

Some wandering Pindharces, thought I, and I asked him if they were such

"Not exactly," said he, "we are Dacoos"

"Worse and worse," said I laughing, "and I suppose you are from Dehh?"

"Ay," replied he, "even so, we know you, though you do not know us We know you to be Thugs by your encampment, but never fear us, biethien should not interfere with each other We have different ways of helping ourselves to spoil, but what matter? we are brothers in a general sense of the word"

"Good, we are, and if I can help you, say so"

"In no wise," said he, "but to give us room among ye for the night; we will be off early, if you do not go the same road"

"Room ye shall have, Khan, till the moon rises, and food too, but after that we are off, we travel northwards"

"Then it cannot be helped," he replied, "we will stay here till you go, and occupy your ground afterwards, we shall not be suspected"
"And where are you going?" I asked

"To Hyderabad," said the man "No one suspects Dacoos to be out at this time of the year, and we shall have the whole road to ourselves, we shall return after the rains, about the Dusera, by the Nagpoor road Now we are going by Bhopal and Boorhanpoor"

"And your luck?" said I, "have you had good bunij" (for this word was understood by them, and is common to all classes of people who do their work on the roads)?

"Middling," said he, "neither good nor bad We have had a few affairs, but nothing to boast of"
"Well," said I, "you have taken a good line the road from Boorhanpoor to Hyderabad is a good one, and you will be in Sikundur Jah's country, where no one asks questions about the people who are left on the highways. I wish you good luck, and my friend will look after your comforts, you must excuse me, as I am in pain from a swelled face and toothache."

"Salam!" said he as he denoted "if you were going instead.

"Salam " said he, as he departed, "if you were going instead of returning, we might get good plunder in company we Dacoos are rare hands at rough work"

I had spoken in a disguised voice, and it was impossible he could recognise me again if he met me I did this for an object which occurred to me at the moment, as you shall learn hereafter I mentioned this meeting to my father "What hinders us," said I, "from meeting them as they come up? they will be laden with spoil, and will be an easy prey Brave and reckless as they are, they have no wit, and will never find us out"

' I don't know that " said my father ' they are not so stupid as you think I know much of them, have killed some of them, and they were cunning enough. Several gauge of them have escaped Thugs by being able to detect them. However I see nothing obrectionable in your plan and at any rate it will furnish excuse for a now expedition.

Ay said Gancaha, who was present, "let us go I long to see the Moor Salub act. We hear so much of him, that, by Bhownnee! perhaps an unlucky old Thug like myself may pick up something now Will you let me come also?

"Cortainly said I but you will see no more than you know already Lucky I have been, but you know my pretensions to know lodge are very small, and I have never boasted of them. To my perception the whole art consists in having a smooth tongue in one s head and a man who is a good bhuttote rarely makes a good noths.

Yet you are both, Meer Sahib " said Ganesha, with a malicious and your men would follow you to the death

So they will, said I for I am kind and considerate to them.

and reward them handsomely "

This stung him to the quick for he was a rough bully and, though perhaps one of the best bhuttotes then living was no hand at inventing travellers and as he always persisted in being a sothahunself, he was notoriously unlucky but few men too would serve under him. He was preparing to retort sharply when my father stopped him.

"Let him slove," said he "he is a proud boy and bickerings among us lead to no good you must not think on what he has

"Nay Ismail," said he, with the air of an offended child. I care not what he says pride will have its fall, and I may live to see it. I was very angry but there was no use m saying more Had we been alone he should have answered for it.

So you see, sahib out of a trilling incident a new expedition was determined on. We all prayed it might be more favourable than the former one which was planned in that direction, and I confess that my success m the last had strengthened my faith in the efficacy of the omens, though as yet by no means established it. Experience, they say is always bought at a costly price, and is bitter when you have got it and I had to buy mine, though the time was not yet

But Soobhan Khan, who was he f said I to Ameer Ali and did you pay him his price of blood?

Not a course of it, said Ameer Ali but you shall hear I saked my father who he was, and detailed the whole of my adventures with him. He remembered the man the instant I spoke of him.

"The rascal" cried my father, "and is he so rich and honoured, the son of a vile woman? To think that he should be in such a situation, the scoundiel! But the deeds of Alla are inscrutable

Listen, my son, to his story, which can be told in a few words
"He and I were jemadars together I never liked him, and he had a bad reputation He was never a good bhuttote, for the fellow was an airant coward, but he was a capital sotha, and his smooth tongue gamed him more bunij than we could gain by straightforward work Well, many years ago we joined together, he to be sotha, and I to manage the other work We had killed a large body of travellers near Jeypoor, for we had a numerous gang Two were sahoukars, and the booty was large Among it were some pearls and precious stones, they were given over to his party as their share, and he said he would go to Indoor to sell them, but I had lent him nearly a thousand rupees at different times, when he had no money to make advances to men to induce them to serve under him, and I pressed him for some of the pearls, which I wanted for my wife, in payment of the money This was late one night, after we had divided the spoil, he said he would give me them in the morning, when I could pick out the strings I liked best, and he spoke so willingly, that I, fool as I was, never doubted him That night he absconded, and I never heard of him till this extraordinary account of yours Pay him!" continued my father, "not the value of a broken course shall he ever get In any other man I might have pardoned it, but in him the conduct was ingratitude in the highest degree, for had I not assisted and upheld him he would have been neglected and have starved"

This then was the secret of Soobhan Khan's wealth. He must have sold his pearls one by one, as he had hinted to me that he had traded in them, and raised himself by bribery to the state he was in Of course I neither sent him his money as I had promised, nor wrote him a line to say that I had arrived safely at Jhalone I destroyed his pass too, as it might have led to detection

CHAPTER XLI.

Prince Henry —Where shall we take a purse to-morrow, Jack? Falstaff—Where thou wilt, lad, I'll make one, an I do not, call me villain and baffle me

Henry IV Part 1 Henry IV Part 1

I have told you of my popularity among the Thugs, and when it became known that a new expedition was planned, and would set out after the Dusera, so many men offered themselves that I was obliged to reject numbers, and select those whom I knew, from experience and character, would be likely to behave best Among them were a few who were excellent musicans and singers. I had before, on many occasions, felt the want of such men to amuse travellers with whom I had fallen in, and these were particularly acceptable to me at the present time, as the expedition was a large one, and the country, being quieter and more settled than it had been for some years, we were assured that the reads would be full of persons of rank and consequence travelling to and from their homes. In order that our band might have the greater appear ance of respectability I begged of my father to accompany us, for his venerable appearance and polished manners would I was certain, do more to insure us success than all our most cumning stratagems.

Nor was I neglectful of the rajah. From time to time I visited his durbar and was always received with the greatest civility and attention, as indeed I deserved for not only was I a good servant to him, but as numbers of Thurs had settled around me in different villages, the revenue they paid for his protection and connivance at our work amounted to a handsome sum yearly and I need not say it was punctually paid, for upon this mainly depended our concent ment. In the last expedition however I had pleaded poverty on my return, and though I could have well spared five thousand ru poes from my own share, I was content with presenting as my nuxur a gun I had purchased in Bombay for two hundred rupoes, and a small string of pearls which I had found among the treasure of the rokurrens, and he seemed satisfied but it was merely the feigned content which precedes a violent outbreak of discontent or passion. He was our litter deadly enemy though he cloaked his designs under the garb of friendship, and was gradually perfecting his schemes for our destruction.

We set out I have nothing new or interesting to relate to you of the manner in which our preparations were made and completed. Atternation, poor soul, never dreamed of what we were it was enough for her to know that every new expedition brought her new ornaments and better clothes, and enabled her to live in a higher and more expensive manner. I had been enabled to add greetly to my house, and it was now as comfortable and specious as I could dook for a higher alliance for our daughter our only child and she had even now received proposals of marriage for her some of which were in every way advantageous, and with persons unconnected with our profession, of which I was glad for knowing full well that one mischance, or one traitor among us, would hurl me at once from my prosperity I was desirous of marrying her to some one who could protect her and be free from any dangers similar to those I was impell exposed to.

I, however, bade Azeema wait, because (as I told hei) the journey I was about to undertake would be infallibly prosperous, and a fresh addition to our already ample means would enable us to have the marriage ceiemony performed in a manner fitting, or perhaps exceeding our pretensions. She readily acceded to my request, for if there be one thing more than another about which a matron of Hindostan is solicitous, it is the marriage of her child, not as regards happiness, I must own, though perhaps there may be a lurking wish that she may be happy, but the main matter is, that her clothes shall be of the best and richest materials, her jewels many and of value, and the whole of the establishment which she takes to her new lord, of the most substantial description, that they may last her for years, and procure for her mother the goodwill of the female members of her husband's family. Nothing is productive of more quariels among the females than that anything should appear indifferent, remarks are made, and reproaches are bandied about between the united families, and out of these soon grows an enmity which never cools. Many a marriage, which promised well at its outset, has been marred in its joyous termination by fault being found with the equipments of the bride, which are always submitted for inspection to her female relations before they become her own property for ever

But I am digressing, and must return to my own adventures We left Jhalone as before, upwards of three hundred Thugs, under my father, Ganesha, Peer Khan, and myself We gave out along the road that we were servants of the Nizam, and were returning to our service at Hyderabad after our periodical leave of absence, this was necessary, for our numbers without it would have provoked suspicion

Never shall I forget the first matter we took in hand, not that there was anything remarkable in the destruction of four men, but it was attended by a sad result, which damped the spirits of the party for many days afterwards, and from which one never recovered

Peer Khan had a nephew, a boy of about ten years old, a noble little fellow, beautiful in his features, and intelligent beyond his years. As you may imagine, he was a great favourite among us all, and I had repeatedly asked Peer Khan to allow me to adopt him as my son, to supply the place of the child I had lost, but he would not hear of it, for the child was the son of a beloved sister who was dead, the boy's father had also died about two years before, and Peer Khan had taken him to his home, and loved him as his own

The little fellow rode a spirited pony which I had given him, was always in the van of the party, and amused us by his mimic feats of horsemanship and by his intelligent prattle. He could never be

Lopt behind and when the time came that the four men were to meet their fate, we had given him in charge to those who brought up the rear with strict orders that on no account was he to be permitted to come on after us Peer Khan also had desired him to keep with these people, as he was going off the read to a village at some distance, and he had promised obedience. Yet all our procantions were of no avail how could they be, when what followed had evidently been written in his destiny f

I had just given the jairnes, and the four miserable men were writhing in the agonies of death, one of them too was shricking when, Ya Alla! who should come galloping up but Alum Khan, the boy I have mentioned. His first exclamation was of triumph that he had caught us but how can I tell the look of horrer to which his countenance was instantly changed when he saw what was going on! His eyes became fixed, and were wide open, his tongue cleaved to the roof of his mouth, he uttered no sound, but clasped his hands in agony and before I could dismount, or even Peer Khan, who was superintending the work, he had fallen from his nony insensible.

"What shall we do?" cried I to Peer Khan, as we raised him up and strove to comfort him. "Speak to him a word from you may arouse him."

"My child, my child! cried Peer Khan, in accents of terror and misory oh, speak to me! one word only you are killing your father Ya Alla! continued he, raising his hands to heaven, grant that this swoon may pass away and that he may speak I will feed a hundred fakeers in thy name, O mercuful Prophet! if thou wilt but intercode and grant my prayer But it was of no avail the poor boy lay senseless, though his eyes were fixed and staring and not a word could be utter. The Thugs too had left the dead, and were all around us. There was a rivilet close by in which the bhil had been prepared. I thought of water and hid one of the men run for some. It was brought, and I poured it into his mouth. "He revives,-his hips move! cried Peer Khan in an ecstasy of delight- he speaks!

And the poor boy did speak.

Where am I, uncle?" said he in a faint voice. "Where am I? What have I seen?

And he passed his hands over his eyes.

Nothing nothing gried his uncle you have fallen from your pony that is all you should not ride so hard, my child you might have been killed.

No no, said the boy "I did not fall I saw-Alla, save me! mave me, uncle ! Oh, look at their eyes and faces there they he-oh, kill me I cannot bear it!-I shall die.

Unhappy child, he had again seen their faces, we had never thought of the dead, one of the bodies lay close to us, the distorted features grinning horribly, and it had fallen against a bank, so that he saw it sitting half upright,—a dreadful spectacle for a child "Take it away, take it away!" he shouted in his infant voice

"I shall die-oh, bury me I shall never forget the face and the eyes, they will be ever before me !"

"Away with them !" cried I, and as I turned again to the child, he had sunk on his face in the sand of the road, and was endeavouring to hide himself in it—he was in strong convulsions

"Alla! Alla! what shall I do?" cried Peer Khan Sahib, by your soul, by your mother's honour, do something! Save that child, and I will be your slave till the end of my days, I will serve you on my knees. I will be your menual!"

"What can be done?" said I "All we can do is to stay with him, and comfort him when the paroxysm is past. He will revive soon and forget all"

Poor boy, how he strove in his convulsions! he could not speak intelligibly, he foamed at the mouth, his hps grew hvid and contracted, his eyes, when he opened them, seemed sunk into his head I had never seen such terror before, nor could I have believed that it would have had such an effect on any one

We carried him to the edge of the stream, and by dint of bathing his face, and forcing water into his mouth, he partly revived had just opened his eyes again, when by a miserable chance they fell upon one of the turbans of the dead men, with which I had been wiping his face. It had an instantaneous effect on him, his screams broke out afresh, nothing could console him, and we were in dreadful alarm about him What to do we knew not, we were far away from any human habitation, and even had we been near one we dared not have called in any hukeem to see him, for his incoherent ravings would have too truly exposed our doings sat by the boy in fearful apprehensions that every three and convulsion would cause his death; at last we raised him up, and placed him on his pony, and had succeeded in conveying him about a coss while he was in a state of insensibility, but it was of no avail. Again he awoke from his temporary unconsciousness, and we were obliged to take him down, and lay him on a bank at the side of the 1 oad, while we fanned his face and endeavoured to compose him

But he was greatly reduced in strength, his moans were feebler and feebler, and though he now opened his eyes and gazed calmly around him, it was but too plain to us that the delicate flower had been blighted, and was fast withering under the terror which possessed him Peer Khan was in a dreadful state he raved, he entreated, he prayed, he knelt down beside the poor sufferer, and bedowed his face with his tears, which were fast falling but no mercy was shown him. We sat thus till long past midday nu merous travellers passed us, all commiscrating the child's state of suffering but they shook their heads as they left us, with a firm conviction that he must die

And he did die Towards evening the pure spirit fled from the dead.

"It is of no use lamenting now said I to Peer Khan, as he sat his hands clasped in angusti, rocking himself to and fro, and meaning and sobting as though his spirit would break. "It is of no use, brother—the boy is dead and we must carry the body on to the stage, which is not very far distant."

Do as you will, he replied; as for me my heart is broken I shall never look up again. He was the life of my soul, and without him what shall I do? what shall I do?"

But we raised the body up, and at times carrying it, at others placing it before us on our horses, we convoyed it to the camp. Our absence had been known, but as its cause was also known, none of the Thigs had come out to meet us. We laid down our sad burden in my tent, a grave was quickly dug and it was buried by torchlight, amudst the tears and lamentations of the whole band, for the boy was beloved by all.

Peer Khan came to me in the dead of the night, and awoke me from a restless slumber in which the dreams of the sad scene had fearfully mingled. I was glad that he had come, but not for what followed.

"Meer Sahib, and he, after a long silence, I am not what I was,—I never shall be again I am broken in spirit, and am no longer fit for my profession. My fate too points against it, and after this dreadful catastrophe I should be useless to you Permit me, therefore, to depart. You see I am calm and composed, and I do not say what I now urge on you in passion or grief therefore let me depart. I will go to my home, and in solitude endeavour to make the remainder of my life acceptable to Alla, who has visited me with this affliction. Nor will it be long ere the earth covers me, I feel that this blow has ahaken me to my soul, and it will bow me down to the grave

I saw it was useless to argue with him his features were simiped with despair and to contravene a man s fate is impossible. It is the will of Alla, and what mortal can oppose it? It must have its course

"Go said I, Peer Khan may peace be with you, and the blessing of the prophet! I feel for you—I shall ever grieve with you but if, in after times, your inclination leads you to you me, I need not say how gladly I shall arail myself of your services. We had ever done before for though every one acknowledged they were good and brive soldiers, it was said they were viewes, and debauched and drauken. At one or two questions of mine the moonshee langhed immoderately I asked him once why the Europeans eat with knives and forks and spoons, instead of with their fingers, which God had given them

"Yes, said my father "old as I am, I have never been able to find this out. Tell us, for you know as you have yourself seen them cat.

"Tell me what you have heard, said the moonshee, "and I will give you an answer "

It appears so extraordinary said I, "that I can hardly behave it for why should not all men be the same? Noretheless, I have heard, and from what I thought to be good authority that their finger nails contain poison, and therefore they dare not risk the chance of their drawing blood, may more, of touching their food. How he laughed! I thought he would never have ended and I

How he laughed! I thought he would never have ended and I felt nettled that my remark should have given rise to such immoderate much. I could hear too from the tittering behind the division of the tent, that the women were also provoked to merriment at my expense. At last he said -

No no Meer Sahib, this is folly Who could have told you such a lie? What if their skins be white and their faces ruddy are they not the same flesh and blood as we are? They eat with spoons and knives because it is the custom of their country and because they do not like to soil their lands. Besides, their style of cookery is different to ours for instance, they reast half a sheep and eat it, and how could they do so without the implements they use?"

"I confess my ignorance, said I, "and am ashamed to put any more questions to you about them, so shall behave henceforward that all I have heard are lies. Yet I longed at the same time to ask more about their drinking somes, and the meaning of the words, Hip! hip! hip! which I fully believed to be of mystic import. It was late when we separated but before we did so we agreed to travel in company and to pass our evenings together. This was what we wanted our success was mevitable should we succeed in getting him on one or two marches farther as the villagers there knew us, were our friends, and for a small consideration would keep themselves to their houses, and allow us to do what we liked. I have not mentioned this before, sahib, for you very well know that it is the case. We have friends wherever we go we bribe all we can, and have our agents in every part of the country in the diagnuse of falcers or merchants. Some semindars fear us, others bully us, and extort large sums from us, but they are generally faithful and without their help and connivance do you think we could effect anything? We could not In the Nizam's country particularly we are well aided Many of the zemindars have Thugs in regular pay, whom they have been in the habit of sending out on the road some are content with a certain sum every year, others, who fear so close a connexion with us, now and then pretend to arrest us, and get as much as they can, and as there is no police of any kind, they are not afraid of their dealings being brought to light I myself know but little of how these matters are managed there,—I mean from personal experience,—but I have heard from others, and in particular from Motee, who led a gang of Thugs for some years all over the Huzoor's dominions and told me, that so long as he paid the patels of villages, the zemindars and the revenue servants handsomely, he had no obstruction, that hundreds of others did the same, and practised their profession so openly, that they often never took the trouble of burying the bodies of those they destroyed You know that this is truth, sahib, and therefore I need hardly mention it But to my story

We reached the village we wished to gain—a miserable hamlet called Biseynee, but the patel was in our interest, and a present of twenty rupees now and then, with sometimes a new turban, gained us his silence and co-operation I say co-operation, for he often gave over passengers to Thugs, by declaring that his village was unsafe, and that they must go and encamp outside with the rest—who were the Thugs He knew well what would become of them, but he was, as I have said, paid for his treachery

Well, we reached Biseynee, I had purchased for the worthy patel a handsome turban and waistband, and had prepared for him a number of other articles, one of which was an English pistol, which he had sent word by a Thug that I was to purchase for him As soon as I arrived, I went into the village to him, and in his own house tied the turban on his head, presented him with the gifts I had prepared, and added a purse of twenty rupees

"Ha!" said he, "what now, Meer Sahib? you are not used to be so liberal. What bunij have you that you are come with it to my poor place, to give it a worse name than it has already?"

"Oh, none," said I carelessly, "you know I have not been this way for some years, and these are to make that I have not for gotten.

way for some years, and these are to prove that I have not forgotten

you "

"Thanks for your kindness, may your condescension increase," said he, "but the buni, Meer Sahib? You are a cunning gentleman, I know you of old. Who is he in the tents youder? and why have so many Thugs collected here? You cannot conceal your designs from me."

"Nor do I wish it," said I, "but remember our old compact" "I do, I do," said he hurriedly, "but times are changed, and with them my masters. Know you not that thus country belongs to the Sahili-logue?

And what of that, Pateljee?" said I what difference does it

"None, he replied "to me but lave you not seen the horse-

What horsemen? cried I

Six, said he "and a duffedar My poor village it seems has a bad name for thieves, and they have sent a party here to guard it. Alla help us, and keep the broad in our mouths!

"And the duffadar what is he like?

He is a Hindoo, said the patel, and a Bhojpource he is called Hittah Singh his men too are all of his tribe.

"Bhospoorces said I then I dare say they are Thugs. What Bhoppooree was ever an honest man ? 'No, they are not Thuge, Meer Sahib, for I have tried them with the pass-word. But, between you and me, I think my friend Hittah Singh only wants an opportunity to be as great a rascal as I am myself -may Alla pardon me! "I have no doubt of it, said I. "Where is he?

" Shall I call him?

"Do so, said I. "If I cannot persuade him, I will bully him and if the worst comes to the worst, you know we are more than three hundred to six, and they would have but little chance

True, Meer Sahib but no violence I pray have some considera tion for my good name. If the Europeans heard of violence having been done, they would turn me out of my place.

And you would turn Thug I suppose. But quick, Pateljee, call the man hera."

He was absent for a short time, and returned with a short mean looking fellow and I could plantly see that rasenl was written on his countenance. You know the old proverb—"Chor ke daree men, Tinka (there is always a straw in a thief's beard) Salutations were exchanged, and I came to the point at once,

Look you, Duffadar Sahib, said I to him, you may have guessed what we are? He nodded assent. This is good 'I continued, "as perhaps you may have guessed at our object."

Parily said he but what do I know about you?"

Exactly said I, the very thing I want you need know nothing and you will have nothing to tell if you are ever asked Take my advice, and remain quietly within your village, and if the earth turns upside down you are not to stir out. For this you shall be well paid. But if you molest us, remember we are three hundred to seven—fearful odds, my friend.

Nav I am wise, said he what Bhojpooree is not? Nor do I wish to interfere. Do what you like, neither I nor my men will stir a foot '

"Cin you depend on them?" said I, "cin they be close?"

"As close as you wish them to be, Jemadar, but we must be

"Certainly," said I; "I would not have it otherwise, but the reward depends on what we get "

"Say two hundred supees," said the fellow, "it is worth your while "

"Well, it is a bargain, Duffadar," I replied, "and the patel is witness. And now I will give you further advice, which is that you are to know nothing, and see nothing, if even the Lord Salub were to You are to know only that trivellers came and departed, and you kept no account of them '

"Of course," and the fellow, "I know this of old. I have met parties of your people in my own country, and have no reason to be dissatisfied with them, they have always beliaved like men of honour, and kept their words with me"

"Then we are agreed?" and I

"Certainly, you will see nought of us, and I will come to you at night for the money"

"You had better come now, Duffadar, as I think we shall move on after it is all over "

"Do you go, Piteliee, it would not look well for me to go with the Syud Salish Do you go and bring the money"

"Come then," said I, "we are losing time"

"Shall you return soon?" asked the duffadar of me

"I know not," I replied, "but it is probable. At any rate, as this country always produces good booty for us, you will see us hero pretty often"

"The oftener the better," said he, "and I must continue to keep my station here; it would be hard to lose such good friends. You, Pateljee, can help me to a few low-caste rascals from time to time, to send in as thieves we have crught"

"Certainly," said the patel, "there are plenty of Gonds and Dhers in the country—every one knows they are thieves, and if they may not immediately have committed any robbenies, they have been engaged in them some time or other, so that it is all the same I will get you a few from time to time as you want them"

"Now and then I shall require a few," said he, "just to keep up my character and appearances, and a few years in irons will do none of them any harm, the Government will take care of them"

I could not help laughing heartily at the cool manner in which this was proposed and accepted But it was the truth, and I know that it was, and is now, a matter of every-day occurrence dufinder of police has wen a good name with his officers in this way and for one guilty man he has sened a dezen innocent people. Who cares about Mangs and Dhers? they are always villans and roblore.

CHAPTER XLI

Good sir you have too fair a shape to play so foul a part in. Fletcher's Love a Pilarimane

"That is a bhula admee (a respectable man) said I to the patel, as he walked to our camp he suits my purpose exactly "

He has been on the lock out for some of you, said he "for a long time. We have never spoken openly on the subject, but he has hinted as much many times. And I suspect he chose this post, if he had any choice in the matter because he was likely to meet Thugs here. If you pay him well, lie will help you materially "Do you think I have given enough?" said I.

Quite, he replied I don't think he expected you would agree to so much.

It is certainly a large sum," said I, but it is the first and the money is well spent.

But you have forgotten me Meer Sahib am I not to partake of your bounty?

"Of course, Pateljee. What I brought was only a trifle, I have more for you in the camp you shall have your share

How much, Meer Sahib? I want money my rents are in arrears, and I am in distress.

Thirty rupees, said I.

Make it fifty I beseech you. You know not in what a strait I am I cannot borrow the money and you have been sent by Alla. for my deliverance You will lend me the money if you will not give it me? and you will have good bami in this business.

"Well, said I, you shall have it, but on one condition. We may not be on the road when some people whom we are looking out for pass this place they are Dacoos they have some taticos with them, and great wealth. If they pass either way you must send men after us with a letter

I will send my own sons, well mounted, replied he they will easily find you out, and you may depend on me. Where will these fellows come from?

"They have gone to Hyderabad now" and I, and will return by Nagpoor If we meet them, all very well but they may escape ua.

"They shall not by Alla" said the patel. "I will watch for them myself, and if you get them I shall hope for a handsome

' I will not forget you. But here we are at the camp, take care no one sees the money as you carry it many "

"Trust an old hand for that" said he, with a knowing wink "I must go after I have got it to the moonshee who has sent for me about fodder for his horses. I should like to see him too-to see a man whose breath is in his nostrils. And he has a wife too"

"Yes," said I "there is no getting her out of the way, so sho must die, which is a pity. He has a child also about four years old, which I want myself he is a pretty boy, and I have no son to bless me, he will never know the difference between me and his father after a few days"

I paid the money and dismissed him — Ganesha came to me

"I have been looking at the ground," said he, "and there is a hole near the moonshet's tent which has been dug for some purpose or other, apparently the commencement of a well, it will save us the trouble of digging, the earth too lies close to it, and will only have to be filled in"

"Have the lughaces seen it?" said I

"Yes," he replied, "I took Bhowance with me, he says it is the very thing"

"Now, Ganesha," said I, "how shall we manage?"

"Oh, do you take the tent work, and leave the rest to me, I will settle all outside. You have a smooth tongue, and the moonshee is alone, I will be close at hand in case of anything going wrong, but I do not apprehend anything"

"Nor I either None of the saceses or camel men must escape.

there are many of them"

"Sixteen in all, I have counted them let me see-eight bearers, two camel men,—one of them has a wife,—two kindmutgars, one female servant, and four saceses, how many is that?"

"Eighteen," said I

"Ah, well, it does not matter, towards evening I will surround the whole, most of them will be listening to the songs, and the rest we must overpower in the best way we can The night will be dark too, which is in our favour"

I then told him of the hoisemen in the village, and what I had He knew Hittah Singh, the duffadar, and told me that in his excursions into the district of Arrah, in Bengal, he had met with him, and that on one occasion, when he had been arrested for murder, this Hittah Singh had got him off, by swearing to the collector that he knew him, and by being security for him to a large amount "He is a good fellow, for a Bhoppooree," said Ganesha, but requires to be well paid, and you have given him enough to keep him quiet.

The evening came. My father and I went to the moonshee s, but after the evening prayer time he had his son on his knee and a noble little fellow he was. How I shall love that boy! said I inwardly as I looked on his fair beautiful features and expressive eyes he came to me readily and I fondled him and dapplayed to his admiring eyes my beautiful sword and dagger Azeema too will love him, thought I, and he will supply the place of our daughter when she is married and gone from us.

You have no children ?" said the moonshee or perhaps I ought not to ask, you may have lost them: your brow darkens at the question.

"One, ropled I, "a daughter A son, the counterpart of the Salub Zada, it pleased Alla to take from me when he was about his

It is indeed his will, said the moonshee there is no striving against fate. This boy is my only offspring; for many years I had been married, and my case was somewhat like that of the sultan in the Story of the Parrot grey hairs were coming and I despured, but at last Alla was gracious, and you see the boy

"May God grant he live a hundred years, and be prosperous, mid L. I have no hope myself.

We conversed together for some time, and on a message being given from without, I said. You have been so pleased with the singing of some of my men, Moonshee Sahib, that they have arranged a little masque, after the manner of the byroopens, which they are anxious to perform before you. It will be absurd enough I dare say yet it will serve to pass the evening and your son too may be amused.

By all means, said he; "anything in the jungle is acceptable but for your company their Sahib, we should have had a dull march. I will prepare these within, so pray call in the performers.

The men came, six stout follows dressed fantastically two of them as women, with sitars and drums in their lands they personated a body of goosacene, and danced and song in a ridiculous manner. Where they had learned their parts I know not, but the whole was well done, and the moonabee's little son langhed immoderately. As we had expected, the whole of the moonabee's people gathered round the tent, which was open on one side, to admit of their seeing the timinahs and I observed with secret emilitation that every man had two or three Thugs close to him, and one in particular behind each of them. All was ready as I thought, and I was about to give the signal, when one of the Thugs called to me that I was wanted without. What it could be I knew not but excuring myself for a moment. I went out.

"What shall we do?" said Ganesha to me in a voice full of alaim and apprehension "Meer Sahib, the Feringhees are upon us!"

"The Feringhees!"

"Yes," he rephed; "and what can we do? This good bumj will escape us Of course the moonshee will join them, and we may then as well think of strangling the king of Dehli, as of getting hım "

"But how," said I, "how are the Feringhees upon us? you seen them?"

"No," said Ganesha, "but I have seen their people string of camels have just arrived, with I know not how many redcoated sepoys to guard them, -my curse be on them all!"

"And where are they?"

"Why, they are gone into the village They wanted this ground, but I told them I would not give it up, that the moonshee was a gentleman of rank, and could not be disturbed, and that there was better ground on the other side of the village"

"Then never fear," said I, "the work must be done immediately I will go in and give the thirnee, and if any of those prying rascals the Lascars come about us, you know what to do But I fear not; the patel will help us, and Hittah Singh too, and there need be no great noise My father will have to personate the moonshee for awhile if necessary, but that does not matter"

"Good," said Ganesha, "but be quick, Meer Sahib, I shall be in a torment of apprehension until the whole are fairly under the ground "

I left him, and carelessly playing with my roomal, again entered

"What is it?" asked the moonshee

"Oh nothing," I replied, "only some Sahib-logues' tents which Their servants wanted this ground to encamp on, but seeing us here, the Lascars have taken them to the other side of the village The troops will be here early to-morrow"

"That will suit me exactly," said he, "I will stay with them, and bid you gentlemen farewell, but that is no reason why we should be the less merry other song or two in store Have you?" he asked of them

"A hundred," replied one of them, "but perhaps the next will be rather a noisy one"

"Never mind," said he, "play on, you shall have as good a reward as I can afford to bestow"

I waited till the noise was at its height to give the thirnee, yet I had not the opportunity I wished for The moonshee sat with his back to the kanat, and to get behind him was impossible, one of the Thugs saw my embarrassment, and relieved it, by begging him to rise and advance a few paces.
"What are they going to do ?" asked he,

I know not," I replied, "but you had as well comply"
He arose, and I slipped behind him "Now! I bring the pan! and my hand was on the moonshee s neck. One wild shrick he gave, and fell

His wife had been looking on through a hole in the kanat she lad seen the work and rushed out into the midst of us, with her boy in her arms. I shall never forgot her-never I shall never forget her wild look and her screams. I tore the boy from her arms, and left her in the midst of the Thugs I ran out into the air and the first person I met was Gancaha, his face flushed with triumph, which I saw by the glare of the torches from the tent.

"All is done! cried he "they have all fallen Two I k myself. Where are the lughaces P we must be quick."

He ran on; and I stood in the open space before the tent. Parties of Thugs passed rapidly to and fro bearing the bodies of the dead, which were one by one thrown into the hole. But the singing and music went on as merrily as ever and looking into the tent I saw my father atting in the place which had been occupied by the ill fated moonshee.

My little charge was crying terribly imploring me, in tones and words that would have moved any one s heart but mine, to take him to his mother I soothed him as well as I could, and was going to my tent; but currosity impelled me to return, and see the hole in which the business of interment was going on. I went to the edge Ganesha was standing by it encouraging the lughaces! he saw the boy in my arms.

"What folly is this, Meer Sahib ? said he "you are not going to spare that boy when we are even now in such danger !- it will be madness. Give him to me I will silence the crying wretch, and send him with his parents."

Never! cried I; the boy is mine you may have all the spoil, but give him up to death I will not. Have I not lost a son, and is it not lawful to adopt a child of this age ? Madness! madness! creed Ganesha, ' the boy neast die. Are you a fool, Meer Sahib, to risk such a chance ? He will never find out the difference between us and his parents," and I "and I will not be interfered with

"Fool! said Ganesha setting his teeth "I spared a child once, and will never spare another I have sworn it on the pickage"

"I care not for a thousand oaths I cried "the boy is mine, and you had better not oppose me if you wish to avoid a quariel and I was going away

He caught me by the arm

"Let me go," I exclaimed, and I felt for my dagger, "or, by Alla!

I will strike this steel into you"

"Boy," cried he, "you are mad; I fear you not, talk of daggers to others than Ganesha, he has seen too much of you to fear you Give me the child I say, his very cries will alarm the sepoys"

I felt for my dagger or sword, but I had left them in the tent, I tried if pity could move him

"Have you no compassion?" I said more gently, "Ganesha, have you no pity for a child? Can you bear to kill him?"

I was off my guard, and he saw his opportunity Quicker than thought he had rudely snatched the child from my arms, and as he hurled him into the pit, he cried scornfully, "Pity! no, I know it not Now go and cry, Meer Sahib, for the loss of your plaything"

I started forward, and leaned over the edge of the hole, which was being rapidly filled, the poor boy lay senseless and dead at the bottom,—one shrick alone had escaped him, as he was dashed with passionate force into it. I gazed for an instant to satisfy myself that he was dead, and some of the earth which was being thrown in hid him almost instantly from my view.

I turned to Ganesha in savage anger.

"Dog!" cried I, "and son of a dog! you shall answer for this Had I my sword now with me, I would cut you in two pieces"

"An idle threat, and one befitting what I have heard of you," said he. "Go, Meer Sahib, you are a boy and a fool I do not fear

you"

Stony-hearted villain, he had destroyed my son Situated as I was I could then do nothing, but I was determined to have my revenge. and I took it too I mentioned what had occurred to my father and to three of my intimate associates. they were determined to stick by me whenever I chose to attack Ganesha, and would fain have done so the next day, but this did not suit me, though his words rankled in my heart, and the deed he had done made me hate him more than ever I deferred my revenge to the last moment, but I took it, as you shall hear

We stayed on the ground that night; the palankeen had been broken in pieces and thrown into the hole, but my father personated the moonshee the next morning as we rode through the camp of the Feringhees, which had been pitched so near us, that indeed I have often wondered they heard not the cries of the party as we despatched them. But we had taken good precautions. The noise of the drums, and the confusion occasioned by letting loose two of the moonshee's horses, which were here and there pursued by a number of Thugs, shouting and screaming after them, had drowned the cries of our victims, and we had effected the whole without suspicion

Our good friends, the patel and the duffador had Lept the sepoys in conversation, and they had not noticed the noise beyond hazard ing a passing remark as to its cause.

Again therefore we were on the road. We had not get all the booty we expected it did not indeed amount to three thousand rupees, and we carnestly looked out for the Dacoos, who were, we honed, to be our next bunit

We went on to Nagpoor and sold the moonshees camels and horses. Here the gang divided one part, under a jomadar named Emam Buksh, took our old road towards Commotee, and through the valley of Berar to Khandesh and Boorhanpoor the rest of us returned by the road we had come after staying four days in the city of Nagroor

On our second or third march homewards we overtook the Dacoos. They had been seen by our spice the moment we entered the village we had encamped at and as much caution was requisite in manag ing them, my father at once proposed to be alone the soths, or in-

I shall fearn to be a Hindoo," said he these rascals will suspect me if I go by my own name, and indeed they would know me I will be a rapport jemadar come from Hyderabad, and you shall see I have not forgotten my old trade.

Accordingly he painted his forehead and breast after the fashion of the Hindoos, covered his eyes with wood-ashes, put on a waist-cloth and dress he borrowed from one of the men, and attended by another went into the village. How anxiously I expected his return! I feared he would fail in his mission, but Ganesha was confident. "He never fails, said he to me he is one of Bhowance s own favourites; nothing he ever did failed. Would that I had his luck!"

But he was absent so long that I became apprehensive for his safety and was on the point of setting out to gain tidings of him, when to my great joy I saw him approaching I ran to meet him. What news? cried I oh, my father my liver has been burnt during your absence. Why did you stay so long? "Nover mind, my son, said he, when he had dismounted, "you would have been wrong to come after me But ah, the owls! I have entrapped them -they are ours Ul-humd ul ills! cried I, "this is more news but how did you manage at P

"Why" replied he, "it was done easily enough, though I feared for my success when I saw that one of the Dagoos was a fellow I had known a long time ago however he did not recognise me thanks to my white beard and these marks of the midels he never thought I was Ismail Thug I sat and conversed with their leader who told me very gravely he was a servant of the English going to Hindostan on leave of absence I said I was one also, and had come from Jalna, where I was a collector of duties on spirits. We then became intimate, and the upshot of the whole was, that we agreed to travel together, and, by Alla! if the omens are good, they shall die to-morrow. Delay is useless with these fellows, for they evidently think (from the signs I saw them making among themselves, which are known to me), that we are certain bunit to them, and if we do not attack them they will fall upon us."

"We shall need good hands," said I, "and I will take the leader"

"I will be a bhuttote also," said Ganesha "I never killed a Dacoo Are they stout fellows?"

"Very," answered my father, "but like all their tribe they are heavily armed, and can do but little against us, if we manage properly"

"We had better fall on them with our swords," I observed

"Not so, my son, but we will surround them, and if there is not a good opportunity, the men can use their weapons"

We were soon agreed on this point, and in the morning the Dacoos joined us as we moved round the village into the main road. They were twenty-five in number, stout but heavy-looking men, armed to the teeth, with their heads enveloped in folds of cloth. They had with them this teen tattoos heavily laden, and it was well they had this encumbrance, as it served to separate them, as each tattoo required a man to drive it. Had they kept in a body, we could have made but little impression on them, and dared hardly to have attacked them.

"Now, look out!" said my father to the men, "if you see them leaving their beasts and collecting in twos and threes, fall on them at once, or they will attack us, they know well enough who we are,

though they pretend they do not "

We journeyed on in company, after I had ridden for some distance I dismounted, and walking beside the leader I entered into conversation with him. He did not recognize me in the least, and very gravely began telling me how he had met with Thugs on his way down, how he had fought with and overpowered a large band, and carried off their plunder, amounting to some thousand rupees

I could have struck him on the mouth with my shoe, but I refrained, yet it was enough to have provoked me, being so barefaced a lie—Still I applauded his bravery, and he continued "Yes, Meer Sahib, these Thugs are the greatest villians unhung, and I praise the Prophet that I have gained some information about them, which I will give to my masters the Europeans—The fool of a Thug, or rather one of his people, told me they belonged to Jhalone, I am going that way and if I do not tell the rajah of their being in his city call me an owl, and a father of jackasses. I expect, too, he will roward me handsomely

2 E

Ay you will tell him, thought I but you must get there first, my frond. Mashalls! words are one thing but deeds are another "And were they such fools? I lasked "all the world say that Thurs are never to be taken in."

The fellow laughed scornfully

"Nover taken in !" said he; did not I deceive them? They are swine, they are asses they murder poor travellers, but they have no wit, not so much as childra. Their fool of a joinadar tried to deceive me by wrapping his ace in a cloth but I saw him, dark as it was, and could swear to him among a thousand.

"What was he like? inquired I "I am curious to know if it were only to av id him in future, especially as I am a constant tra voller on this road but you said you attacked them?

Yes," and he I am an old traveller too and as we were a large body and the Thugs not more than treble our number I said to my companions that, though I knew we were with Thugs, they oughls not to fear and if they would only watch me, we might attack and disporse them and get their plander and, by Alla I we did sainly. Late at night we rose on them, killed some and the rest ran away among them the cowardly jemadar We got enough too to take us to Hyderabad comfortably"

So we had a narrow exampe, thought I these fellows would have attacked us, I doubt not, had we not gone on that night. But the lie, sahib, was it not an impudent one? Yet I could not help laughing heartily at his relation, which he swore was true, by Alla and the Prophet, by my beard, and by every sant in his

colendar

We trudged on till we came in sight of two trees on the road, on which travellers hung bits of rag as offerings to the guardian saint of the place. I saw very plainly that this was their bill one by one thay began to forsake their tattoos and collect. More delay on our part would have been fatal, and my father saw this. He was as prompt as I could have desired he had seen their movements, and just as I had disengaged my roomal from my waist, he gave the phrince. Eleven of the Dacoos fell at the same moment, the leader by my hand. I had my roomal round his throat, and before I gave the fatal wrench, I shouted, in his ear that I was Ameer Ali, the leader of the Thugs he had met, and that then I had sworn to kill him and had done it. The rest were cut down with swords my men were prepared, they were not, and were heavily encumbered. Yet had we delayed for another three or four hundred paces, they would have fallen upon us, and I think, sahih, the Thugs would have run away

As it was, however, we were victorious, we threw the bodies as they were into the jungle, and pushed on, laughing heartily, and in the highest spirits at the issue of our adventure. The booty, too, was good—thinteen thousand rupees' worth of gold, silver, and ready money met our admiring eyes, when the packages of the loaded tattoos were opened for our inspection.

Well, sahib, we had proceeded as far as Sehora on our return, when we fell in with a great European, who was also travelling We did not fear him, but on the contrary determined to keep with him, because we well knew that he had many travellers in his train who profited by the protection of his troops, so we divided into two parties, one under myself and my father, the other under Ganesha Our object was to separate the travellers from him, and we hoped, by representing the inconvenience they were put to by delay on account of his slow marches, and the scarcity of provisions they would experience on the road, to induce them to accompany us I need not follow the adventure further, for it differed not from the rest, suffice it to say, that after a few marches a large party of travellers had joined with us We left the high-road to proceed by footpaths through the jungles, and near the village of Shikarpoor we selected the bhil The place was a favourite one, and well known to our The travellers fell, twenty-nine men, some women and children, all were buried in one grave, for the spot where they were killed was a desolate one The deed was done in the night, but by the light of as fair a moon as ever shone on us One child I saved from the general slaughter, Ganesha was not present to oppose me, and though the boy was a Hindoo, yet I determined to adopt him as my own, and to bring him up in the holy faith I professed myself, and this would enhance the ment of having spared him But when his mother died, I could not force him away from the body, he clung to it, young as he was, with frantic force, he screamed and kicked whenever I attempted to lay hold of him, and bit me in the arms and the hands I thought, if the body was removed from his sight, he would be quiet and submit to his fate, but no-when it was gone, he grew worse and worse, nothing would pacify or tranquillize him, and I fairly grew impatient and angry I drew my sword, and threatened him, but he was insensible to his danger; he reviled me, he spat at me with a child's virulence. I once more raised him up in my arms, but it was of no use, he seized my ear in his teeth and bit it till the blood came. In the agony of the pain and in my rage I knew not what I did Sahib, how shall I tell you what followed? it was the worst act of my life but one, which I have yet to tell you of

You killed him, I suppose, Ameer Ali, said I

Yes, sahib, I killed him but oh, how did I do it it was the devil's work, not mine I never was cruel, but now the Shitan possessed

Here Ameer Ali put his hands to his eyes and finding my heart sicken, I begged him to refrain from reciting the dreadful particulars.

After a pause he continued

Wrotch that I was, I did this. No one was near me but the Thug who held my horse, and even he was horror stricken, and uttered a lond scream of terror I silenced him, and leaving the mangled body I mounted my horse and galloped after my party

Yes, ealib I deserved to be hung for that deed, had I never done another but I was spared for a different fate.

We were in full march on the third day after this happened, when we saw a body of horsemen coming after us. My mind magaze me when I observed them and I hastened to collect the straggling Thugs and form them into a close body in case the horsemen should prove to be enemies, or make any hostile demonstration. On they came, shouting and abasing us in every term of vile repreach their tongues could utter. There were about forty of them and I verily believe that, had I not been at the head of the band they would have field as one man however I cheered them up, and was determined to show a good front in my retreat. I knew there was a village in our interest within a few coss, which possessed a worthy patel like him I have told you of and that if we could but reach it, we might man the walls and towers, and bid defiance to our pursueers.

Be not afraid, cried I to my man let the best of ye come behind with me, and we will stop these maruading ruscals. I know they are Pindharees, and the veriest cowards in existence. Only be firm you who have matchlocks take good aim, and when they are near enough, every one mark his man, and see if as many saddles are not emptied.

On they came fortunately the road was narrow and had thick thorny brushwood on each side of it, so that they could not pass us.

They were within speaking distance, and I shouted,-

Are we friends or enemies? if the former keep behind us if enemies, begone in the name of the Prophet, my friends, or ye are likely to get a sharp reception.

"Stop I shouted the leader of the party "who among you is leader? I would speak to him.

"I am leader said I "come out alone and I will meet you but if any of ye stir by Alla! we will fire on you. The fellow ad vanced, and seeing that none followed him, I rode out in front of my men. "If there is treachery said I to them, "fire,—never mind me."

Jemoder and the man, "our thakoor has sent for you, you may possibly have guessed why You had better come, you will only have to pay a fine and will be released, I swear this to you on the faith of a rappoot"

"I will neither trust you nor your master," said I, "you are a parcel of vagabond Pindharees, I laugh at you, and spit on your beards. If you want us, come and take us, but of our own accord we come not. Are we fools? are we asses? O man! art thou one to talk thus? Go back to him that sent thee, and say, the man is yet unborn who will take Ameer Ali so long as he has a weapon in his hand, or a few gallant fellows by his side. Have you no shame to deliver such a message?"

He made no answer, but urged his horse and cut at me with his sword Fool! he did not think that a Thug could fight, and still less that he had engaged one whom no one had ever yet defeated I caught the blow on my shield, and returned it on his head as he passed me,—the fellow fell from his horse a dead man

My own men set up a shout and discharged their matchlocksone horseman and a horse fell wounded, and struggled in the dust Had only my own good companions in the Pindharee affairs been with me, I would have charged them and put them to flight, but I could do nothing alone We had checked them, however, and retired slowly, followed by the troop, who kept out of shot, but evidently waiting for a piece of level and fair ground to charge us In this way we retreated till the welcome walls of the village whither I had directed the main body appeared to our view. We redoubled our efforts to gain the shelter they would afford us, and the men were in some disorder as we passed over a level plain in front of the village, they were even beginning to run, but I checked them "For the love of Alla!" cried I, "for your own sakes, keep together and have brave hearts, so long as we are firm they will not dare to come near us, but if once we separate we are lost See, even now they are preparing to charge, as a hawk stoops on his quarry" And down they came, thundering along, brandishing their spears, and reviling us Some of my men fled at their utmost speed to the gate, but most of them stood Again I dashed at one of our enemies and wounded him, but the odds were against us one our enemies and wounded him, but the odds were against us one of my own men fell, pierced through the breast to the backbone by a spear, another was wounded, but they could not take further advantage of us. Those who had fled, joined by others of my men and some villagers, headed by my brave old father, issued from the gate, which the horsemen seeing, they drew off, and we got within the village in safety. They kept hovering about till midday, but out of the reach of our shot, and soon after noon they all departed, and we saw no more of them. We had to pay for our shelter handsomely, however, for the patel shut the gates of his village and declared we should not pass out without having paid him a thousand rapecs. I was for attacking him, plundering his village, and burning it after the Pindharce fashion, and we could have done it easily But my father would not hear of it "The country would rise on us, he said and, besides it would ill requite the patels hespitality and protection, even though we had to pay for it. So he paid the money and, after a thousand protestations of mutual goodwill, we left the village in the croning intending to push on as far as we could, to be beyond the reach of pursuit.

Nor were we followed though this exploit made a noise in the country and was known far and wide, we were not molested. We heard afterwards that the thakour flew into a furious passion when he heard of his men s defeat, and dismissed them from his service as a parcel of cowards as indeed they were. Moreover he swore he would be revenged upon every Thug he might ever catch after wards; and I believe he kept his word and put some to death But we laughed at his beard, and many a morry jest had we over the adventure afterwards.

It seems, the day after some herdsmen were passing the spot where the travellers had been killed, and they saw the body of the lad lying in the road all the remains were discovered, and inform ation was given to the ruler of the village and tract of country in which the deed had been done.

We pursued our route Gaucaha too had been fortunate he had decoved a large body of travellers, consisting of a jemadar who had lost an arm and his family with some others, along the byemaths in another direction, and he had killed them all.

You know sahib, that it is forbidden to us to kill persons who may in any way be deformed. I was amused afterwards to hear the accounts which were given of the deliberations made upon the jemadar's fate by Ganceha and his gang he told them to me him self when we met.

Some, indeed most of the men, said he, hentated as to whether he should be strangled or not. There was no means of separating him from the party and they said the whole ought to be abandoned on his account, as he had lost an arm, and therefore was not a fit sacrifice to Bhowance I replied that he was not de-formed, that if he had lost an arm, he had had one once, and the losing of it was not the work of Alla but of man, and that when he died he would appear in the form in which he had been created therefore he was not forbidden, but was true bunij and I asked them how they would show their faces to you and to their brothren at the rendexyous with no deed to boast of, and, more than all, no plunder I prevailed the whole were strangled the remadar by my own hand, for no one else would touch him, despite of all I said to convince them there was no harm in it. The worst of all was, however, that there were two young girls of a marriageable age, the daughters of the jemadar. Two of my men took a fancy to them, and would fain have carried them off to be their wives, but they would not consent, and they were strangled with the rest."

We were now somewhat at a loss for a route, or whither to go. The omens were consulted at Saugor, which was our place of rendezvous, and as they pointed to the northward, we struck off the high-road to the north at Saugor, and took that to Seronge But my father returned to Jhalone We divided into two bodies, each a day's march from the other, for we were fearful of being suspected if we travelled in large numbers, and since the Europeans had got a footing in the country, we found that we were asked more questions at the different posts and guards than we had used to be large bodies of travellers had disappeared in various directions by the hands of other hands of Thugs, and the authorities were suspicious and inquisitive to a degree However, now with bullying, now with bribes, we contrived to pass on, leaving our fruit as we went in many a sly place, which the police never suspected, and although we got no large booty, yet scarcely a day passed but one, two, or more travellers met their death at our hands. It was at the village of Eklíra, in Holkar's dominions (alas! I shall never forget it), that our sothaces brought us word they had secured a small party of travellers, who, they had heard, were about to proceed to a village a few coss distant

Of course our men told them of the danger of travelling alone, of the alarms there were of Thugs, and begged of them to accompany our large party for safety, which had collected for the same purpose, and they consented. The sothaces offered to introduce them to me as the leader of the kafila, and accordingly, at sunset, one of them returned to the bazar, and brought two of the men to me I received them cordially, repeated the same stories as my men had done, and frightened them quite sufficiently for my purpose frightened them quite sufficiently for my purpose

"Lasten," said one, "though I have never seen a Thug, nor know of any existing in this part, yet that they have been here there is no doubt. My wife's father was killed by them"

"How!" said I, "it is horrible to think on; how did this happen? know you aught of the particulars?"

"No," replied he, "none but what I have heard from others I was a boy at the time, but the old men of the village know them well, and often speak of them even to this day. I will introduce you to my father-in-law, as I justly call him, and he shall tell you the tale himself Mashalla! he tells it with much spirit, and 't is worth hearing"

I confess I was interested why I should have been so at a common tale of Thuggee was more than I can imagine I rose and followed the man to his house, determined to hear the whole story from his father in laws mouth.

I have said it was yet day the sun was setting and the village was a scene of bustle and noise, as is always the case in an evening. the herds which had been out to graze were pouring in at the gates, raising clouds of dust, through which the walls were but dimly seen. Yot still as I advanced I fancied them familiar to me I imagined I know the names of different places near them -one in particular the abode of a fakeer around which was a small garden I almost started when I approached it, for it seemed like the face of a familiar friend one meets after a long long absence, when one heatates to accost him by name, though almost assured of his identity But in spite of my desire to know the name of the gar den, I walked on for it would not have suited my purpose to have an utter stranger As we passed through the gate, objects more and more familiar to my eyes presented themselves,—the bazar the little morque, the ketwal's chowree, the temple of Mahadee I could have named them all, and one house in particular—my heart leaped within me as I passed by There was nothing remark able in it but it seemed unaccountably fresh to me,—as though I had but left it yesterday

Still I walked on silently and my companion did not notice the agintion and surprise which must have been depicted on my features. We reached the house, a respectable one m appearance and desiring me to be seated, he left me, to bring the old man of whom he had spoken. When he entered, Alla! I could have called him too by name, though his features were shrunken and withered. I was almost about to exclaim, Rheim Khan! but I checked my self, and as he was presented to me under another name, Futih Mahomed Khan I was silent.

The whole, after this, thought I, must be a wild dream, or I may have visited the place in my wanderings, perhaps stayed a few days at it, and it is thus familiar to me. After some desultory conversation my new friend stated what he had told me, and requested his father-m law to relate the story of Peer Khan, with all its particulars.

CHAPTER XLII.

Now o'er one-half the world

Nature seems dead, and wicked dreams abuse

The curtained sleep Now withered murder thus with his stealthy pace,

Towards his design moves like a ghost

Macbeth, Act 11, Sc 2

The old man returned my salutations cordially, and when we were fairly seated, and the hookah had passed round, he related the sad history of the parents of the girl he had adopted. His version of the tale differed little from that of my new acquaintance, and indeed the whole affair appeared to have been as successful a piece of Thuggee as I had ever listened to. I wonder who they were, thought I, I will mention the story to my father, perhaps he may have heard of it, and can give me some clue to the boy whose fate is buried in uncertainty. Yet the lad may even now be among us, and as this thought flashed across my mind, a half conviction forced itself upon me that I was the man! But I checked it,—it was a foolish thought, such as one harbours sometimes upon the slightest cause, and dismisses after a moment's reflection

"And you never heard aught of them afterwards, nor of the boy?" I asked

"Never," said the old man, "never, years have passed since then, and the lad, if he lives, is about your own age, Meer Sahib, and—Ya Alla!" cried he, gazing on me, as a gust of wind caused the lamp to flare towards me, "those features are familiar to me!—speak, man! thou art not the son of him who was murdered?"

I confess that his earnest gaze and manner, with my previous convictions that the village was familiar to me, almost overpowered me, but I was too old an adept in deceit to be long staggered by a suspicion which he had no means of confirming, and I replied carelessly and with a laugh "No, no, that cannot be my father still lives, though my mother is dead, indeed I have but little remembrance of her Besides we are pure synds by descent, and reside in a distant country, and you spoke of your old friend as a pathan"

"It cannot be, then," said the old man, turning away with an air of disappointment, "yet the resemblance is very striking, and I pray you, Meer Sahib, to paidon an old man's mistake, it may be that my eyes are failing me Yet look at him, my son, and say, does he not resemble her?"

"He does so, certainly," replied the other, "and I was struck with the similarity of features when I first saw him, but it must be imaginary or it is perhaps one of those unaccountable resomblances which one often sees without being able to discover any cause why it should exist.

But you spoke of a coin, said I, 'which you hold to be possessed of peculiar virtues.

I did Meer Sahib, and my father will tell you that I have not overrated its efficacy

Nor has he said the other "many charms have I seen, but none equal to it. When around the neck of the wearer no evil comes to her no disease attacks her and the eye of the maleyolent or envious rosts in vain upon her Assuredly it possesses wonderful virtues, for if it is ever absent from her she suffers from disease or is unquiet in mind.

"Allake Qoodrut!" I exclaimed it is the work of God Such charms are indeed precious, and lucky is the possessor of them. I had once a son -he became the victim of an ovil glance cast by a fakeer to whom alms were denied he cursed my house, and the boy pined and died. I was absent from my home, and you may judge, sirs, of my agony when I arrived and learned my boy was dond. I have never been blessed with another but a girl still survives, upon whom every care is lavished, and no charm is offered for sale by the wandering fakeers, Moslem or Hindoo, but it is engorly purchased and hung around her neck. In this manner I have spent much money but as yet without effect for my child is delicate, and afflicted with dreams which disturb her rest and disquiet her gentle spirit and I would to Alla I could become the possessor of some charm similar to the one you mention."

"Keep a stout heart, Meer Sahib, said the old man bought your experience with sorrow to be sure, yet a constant attention to the wants of the holy wanderers will no doubt have its effect in the end, and their prayers will be affered for the health of your child and her long life.

"May Alla listen to them! and I fervently for my heart was then with my child and my loved wife.

I arose to take my leave, and as my new friend insusted on accompanying me to our camp, we walked thither

"You will be ready then, at the first dawn, observed I travel early for the sake of the cool morning air and my compan ions bestir themselves as soon as the first blush of light spreads over the east.

Depend on me, said he, "I will not keep you waiting we have a long stage before us.

He left me. I will have the charm, thought I, as I lay down to rest my child shall be protected by its extraordinary virtue, and there will be an end of the constant searchings for amulets, which do no good, and cost much money Besides, I could not bring Azeema a gift she would puze more highly, better far in her eyes than strings of pearls or costly jewels. Thus musing, my thoughts wandered to my home my treasures were before me in imagination, and I compared this my wild and exciting life with the peaceful moments I enjoyed when I was there with them—Azeema lying beside me, and our child amusing us with her innocent gambols. The contrast was foreible, and appealed to my best feelings.

I fell asleep, not did I awake until the bustle of preparation for the journey warned me that it was time to use. Having performed my ablutions, I repeated the morning prayer and thanksgiving, and issuing from my little tent, I saw the band was in readiness to move on, but my new acquaintance and his family were as yet not with

115

"Shall we move on?" asked Inloo,—who was now my confident, being the second of the bhuttotes,—as I stood near my horse, preparing to mount

"Not vet," said I, "I expect some bunil from the village, they promised not to be late, yet the day advances. Send some one to hurry them "

"Ay, our friends of last night, I suppose, Meer Sahib Of course we will write for them, and I will send a fellow to quicken them, know you how many there will be to deal with?"

"Not I," I replied, "there are a man and his wife, but how many more I know not We shall soon see, however."

Our messenger returned almost immediately "They come," said he, "I had not reached the village gate when I saw them issue forth"

"And how many are there?" I asked

"There are two women on ponies, one old one on foot, and three men armed with sword and matchlock"

"Six in all," said I "Do you, Laloo, tell off the Bhuttotes, if we find a good place to-day I will give the jhirnce, if not, the business can be done to-morrow"

"True, Mcer Sahib," he replied, "but we had better put it off to-day To tell you the truth, there was an objectionable omen this morning, and you know there is no need of risking anything"

"Certainly not, we can send on the bellias to-night, and things are best done which are conducted regularly."

The village party now approached us, and salutations were exchanged. We stayed not, but pushed on at as rapid a pace as allowed the villagers to keep up with us, and we travelled thus to the end of the stage. I saw no likely place for the deed on our way, for the country was thickly peopled and the villages were close to each other. But I heard with inward satisfaction from my acquaintance, that the next march was through a lonely tract, and I was urged by him to be on the alert and careful, for that robbers were plentiful and we might be attacked.

They rested in our camp that day and night. I watched engorly to see, if it were possible, the face of the woman who bore the prize I so engerly coveted, but I could not discern it she was strictly secluded, or if she moved out of the temporary screen her husband land erected, she was enveloped in a thick wrapper which defied my ntmost attempts to discover her countenance. But she was mine and I gloried in the thought that ere another day should pass over me she would have fallen under my hand, and the charm would be mine also You, sahib, will perhaps wonder at my engerness to possess it but you know us not, if you do. What mother is there in Hindostan, ay or father who does not covet a potent charm against the evil eye for his child or for his wife, far more than riches, may the commonest necessaries or comforts of life? A child falls sick the glance of some one is declared to have rested on it, ceremonies are performed without number pepper is burned, mustard-seed placed in the room and other things done which you would laugh at were I to relate them all and hence comes the necessity of charms. Holy men are besought to give them, and are paid for them highly fakeers are implored to pronounce mystic words over the suffering infant; and women will sell anything they possess, even their jewels, to purchase an amulet which is said to be efficacious. Sahih. I had lost one child another my sole offspring was constantly ailing and we were tormented by a thousand misorable anticipations regarding her Within my reach was a sovereign remedy for all, so at least I firmly believed. Can you wonder at my eagerness, my impatience to possess at P Lalco came to me, and with him the chief of the belles.

are to go on, I suppose, as soon as we can?" said the latter

"Certainly replied I "I hear the road lies through a lonely tract, which commences a few coss from here. See that you choose a good place, and that the grave will hold ax bodies.

Jo hookum! rejoined the fellow "but I hope the information is correct about the road, and that it is not like the last stage, cultivated ground from first to last. I would have defied the best bella that ever drew breath to have selected a spot free from a chance of interruption."

"Rest content," said I the information is good, I had it from our fellow travellers, who have passed that way a hundred times.

"Then I will start by sumset, continued he I suppose the nearer to this the place is selected, commistently with security the hetter "

[&]quot;Certainly " said L "Go you have your leave."

Midnight soon arrived, we had arisen and had proceeded about three coss on our way, we had passed every village, and entered on the desolate tract I have mentioned The hot night-wind still sighed over the waste, and through the thorny bushes by which it was thinly covered No sound broke the silence, save a shill neigh from one of our baggage ponies at intervals, or the wild and melancholy note of the plover as it piped its wailing night-song to its mate, and was answered again from afar Once or twice the half shriek, halfhowl of a hyena might be heard, and so like was the cry to that of a wretch under the kmfe of an assassin, that my blood curdled in my veins as the sound thrilled through me I rode on, first of the party, eagerly looking for the bellia, who should give me the welcome intelligence that the grave was ready, and that we were secure from interruption, nor had I long to wait for this. At a tuining in the road I saw the trusty messenger seated, and as he espeed me and arose, I hastened to meet him

"Bhil manjeh " I asked in our slang language

"Manjeh," was the reply, "'t is ready, Meer Sahib"

"And how far, Gopal?"

"Scarcely a cannon-shot from hence, a dry nulla with a sandy bed crosses the road, and a tributary streamlet's course, between high and narrow banks, was the best place we could find"

"Good," said I, "you are always careful Now keep near me, and hold my horse when I dismount, I have a share in this affair which I would not trust to another"

I slackened my horse's pace, and the party soon overtook me

I stopped as they came up, and dismounted

"A plague on these 1 onds of yours, khan," said I to my acquaintance, "my horse has lost a shoe, and his foot is somewhat tender, so I will walk a coss or two to ease him of my weight. Surely there cannot be much more of this stony track."

"Not much, a coss or two perhaps, we ought to be near a dry nulla, if I am not mistaken, and from thence the next village is a coss and a half, after that the road is good"

"Let the Meer Sahib ride on my tattoo," said a voice like music,

"I am cramped and stiff, and I shall be glad to walk awhile"

It was that of my victim! she who was to die under my hand ere a quarter of an hour elapsed. She must be beautiful with that voice, thought I, but I shall see

"No, no, khan," said I, "that must not be, I am soldier enough to walk when I have no horse Mashalla! my limbs are strong and supple, and I would not mind trying you at a long stage"

"As you will, Meer Sahib, but you have only to say the word, and she dismounts Alla knows 't is a small recompense for your safe protection over this dreary tract, which never man yet passed but with fear and apprehension The nulla too we shall reach it soon they say many a brave fellows blood has moistened its sand.

I saw the woman shudder at her husbands speech, and I checked

him

"Shame on you khan!" said I 'think who hears you women s cars are not fitted to listen to tales of blood, save when they are of a battle-field, and of scones in which honour is camed and fame won at the sword s point. Here you are safe no rascally Dacoo would dare to meddle with a knfila like ours, and we shall pass the nulla. as we have those behind us, without a thought of its dangers or what has ever happened in it. But what was that ?" I carerly asked, as something crossed our path close to my feet.

Nothing but a hare, said the Lhan some prowling jackal has scared her from her form, and she seeks another hiding place.

"A hare!" I repeated, the current of my blood seeming to be suddenly arrested, as I thought on the fearful omen to a Thug -one that could not be disregarded or if disregarded was certain to be followed by the most dire calamities, nothing less than death or long imprisonment.

"Yes, Moer Sahib, a hare. Why should it astonish you?

"But across my very path I muttered involuntarily 'T was chance, said the man "what of it?

replied I "nothing -we have an old superstition about it in my country but tis an old woman's tale, I dare say " I paced on in silence. Ya Alla! what a conflict was raging in my heart! I have told you I disregarded omens I cared not for them, only as they were the soul of Thugree as far as my men were concerned and to humour them I feigned to be particular in their observance But my soul quailed when I was put to the proof. Every tale I had heard of the vengeance of Bhowance at a conscious neglect of her commands and omens flashed in rapid succession across my mind how one had died enten by worms another been overtaken by what the world called justice how another had lost hus wife or children, and I too had yet a child! I say I quailed in mental terror for awhile but mine was a stout heart, a noble spirit and it roused at my call, like that of a good steed, which worn and weary with travel, yet at the approach of strife or danger bears his master as gallantly as though he were fresh from his stall. Yes, my soul railied. Away with such idle tales, fit only to be bug bears to children, said I mentally Ameer Ali is not to be frightened by them. And to lose the charm, -the object of my anxiety when almost within my grasp! I laughed aloud

"You are merry Meer Schib cried Laloo, who I saw was at his place tell us your thoughts, that we may laugh too and, by

Alla! we need it, for a more unminted country I never saw

"" was but a thought," said I. "Know you where my hookah

"I do not," he replied, "but I will call for it" And the word was passed by those who followed us for it to be brought

This was the preparatory signal Every one heard it and took his post. The place could not be far, and with my last words had passed away every chance of life to our companions

Nor was it fai off, a few moments' walking brought us to the brink of the nulla I first descended into it, and disengaged my I was ready, one by one the others followed me, and we were now in the middle of the dry and sandy bed, mingled together, the victims and their destroyers I saw the time was come, and I gave the thir nee They fell,—ay all 1 and almost at the same time There was no sound, no cry, all that I heard was a faint gurgling noise from the husband of the woman, who had writhed in her death-agony under my fatal gripe, a few convulsive throes and she was dead! I tore away the boddice which covered her bosom, I thrust my hands into it, and groped upon the still waim breast for the prize I had so earnestly longed for I found it tied to a silk coid,—which defied my utmost efforts to break, but I unsheathed my dagger and cut it, and I hugged the treasure to my heart in a frenzy of exultation One look at the face, thought I, and the lughaees may do their work, and I gazed on it. It was beautiful, very beautiful; but the expression and the eyes,—sahib! why did I look at it? I might have spared myself years of torment had I not done so That face, of all that I have ever seen in death, haunts me still, and will ever haunt me, sleeping or waking

Not that it had any particular effect on me then No, it was afterwards, as you shall hear, and when I had discovered what I Yes, she was beautiful, fair as my own Azeema, as delicate and faultless in form The lughaees shall not behold these beauties, thought I, nor could I listen to their coarse remarks, so I covered up the bosom, folded the body decently in the sheet which had been around her, and sat down by it to await their com-

"How, Jemadar Sahib!" said Gopal, as he came up to me, "have you not stripped the body? But let me do so, yonder sheet is worth two rupees"

"Let it alone !" cried I, "touch her not, she is too fair for the like of you to look on And hark ye, my friend, let her be buried as you see her now Whatever the others may say, tell them that it is my order, and for your own share, you shall have a new sheet when we reach Jhalone"

"Jo hookum," said the man, "you shall be obeyed you searched for jewels?"

"I have she had none. Away with her and see that I am obeyed 1ct stay I will accompany you

I went with him The grave was where they had described it between the high and narrow banks of a small watercourse it was deep and already contained some bodies. I saw that of the fair girl laid carefully down over them, and I prevented their mutilating it with their knives as they had done the others. I waited till all had been finished, and the grave covered in; and collecting my scattered party we pursued our journey. It was well we had been so expeditions, for scarcely half a cost from the spot we met a large party of travellers, who confident in their numbers, had pushed on by night as we had done. Short greetings were exchanged between us, a few inquiries as to the road, whether water was to be laid, and where, and we passed on.

Our booty was small enough, as you may conceive about forty rupces, a few changes of raiment, the tattoo of the deceased, and the few and simple ornaments of the women, worth parhaps a hundred rupces, were all we got. But I had the real prize, worth in my eyes thousands of rupces. No one knew I had it, and I kept it hung round my own neck, and close to my heart. A thousand times I took it out and gazed at it there was something about it which had a mysterious effect on me many times I thought I had seen it before, and I fancied its old and battered surface was familiar to me. But my mind gave me no clue to the idea, and I attributed the effect I have described to the influence of the charm itself and I was assured of its potency. How Azeema will prize it thought I—in itself valueless, yet a treasure in her eyes and mine, for it will protect our child, and many an envious eye is upon her

We were still far from Jhalone, and the scanon admitted of further wanderings but I was sated. Strange to say I no longer thirsted for adventure and though it came, and men were delivered into our hands, yet I sought not for them. Those we destroyed were causal travellers who joined our party and whose destruction was

muovoidup

We hald a general deliberation at a village on the confines of Maira and though some were for travelling northward as far as Agra, and thence to Jinlone, I overruled this, and indeed had the majority on my aide, who were satisfied with what we had got, and longed for their homes as I did. "However my friends," said I, our proceeding homewards need not bring us worse booty than we should get by going north. Boads are roads, and travellers will surely be on them wherever we go. Let us not relax in our vigil ance, and do you trust in the lucky fortune of Ameer Ah. Victory has slways followed him, and his star is still high in the ascendant. Above all let us consult the omens, and by them be guided if it is our fate soon to see our homes, they will determine our actions and proceedings"

My speech was received with plaudits, the omens were consulted, and though none remarkable were observed, yet in the opinion of the best-informed Thugs we were justified in holding our present direction, till it should be changed either by meeting with new adventures or adverse omens Accordingly we pursued our route I forget how many days it was afterwards, but we were encamped at Tearee, a large town in Bundelkhund, and had been there two days in the hope of buni We had been unlucky in not meeting with any till then, but our tilhaees were actively employed, and I was determined not to quit the town without an adventure, as it was the last place on the road to Jhalone where we could hope to meet with any of consequence The sothaces and tilhaces, however, returned in the afternoon with downcast faces, declaring they could meet with no one, except miserable creatures hardly worth the trouble of destroying, and all were for moving off the next morning,

I was piqued at our ill luck, I know not why "Stay, however," said I to them all, "for the morrow, something tells me it will be a lucky day, and one is not of much consequence" My will was of course law to them, and early the next day I dressed myself in my best clothes, armed myself with my most showy weapons, and taking some of the Thugs with me, as it were a personal escort, I rode into the town, causing my horse to caracole as I went, in order to show off my admirable horsemanship. Twice did I ride up and down the bazar and the principal streets, but without meeting with any hope of adventure or buny At last, observing three respectable-looking Mahomedans seated on a chubootra, or terrace, under the shade of a large peepul-tree, I rode up to them, and inquired whether they could direct me to the abode of any dealer in pearls or precious stones, as I wished to purchase some "Are you in earnest?" said the oldest of the three, "or do you merely ask to find out whether our poor town would afford you such precious commodities?"

"God forbid, sirs," said I, "that one so young as I am should dare to endeavour to jest with men of your age and respectable appearance. I do indeed seek what I have said, and shall rejoice if any of you can direct my steps, for here I am a stranger "

"Since such is the case," replied the old gentleman, "I am happy in being able even at this moment to present you to Shekh Nusr-oo-deen, who sits here beside me, and who follows the respectable calling you are in search of But you had better dismount, and, if such is your pleasure, join our mujhs for as long as you feel inclined My worthy friend will then, I doubt not, be happy to accompany you to his abode, and show you the articles you require"

"You are kind said I, "and I accept of your civil invitation. So eaying I dismounted, and ascended by a few steps to where they were sitting

A few moments were eccupied in the coronomics of being scated My new acquaintance called for a hookah and sherbet, and in a few moments we were on excellent terms.

And what may be your distinguished name? said the elder of the three, who had first accepted me.

I named myself — a poor synd," said I an unworthy descendant of our Prophet, on whose name be peace!

"Mashalla! I told you so creed the old man 'Mashalla! there is no mistaking the noble race and his speech too! How say ye, my friends, is it not sweet and mellifluous like a verso of Hafis?

Ameen! Ameen! cried both tis even so; the young synd is a worthy representative of his tribe, and we are fortunate in having made his acquaintance

"You overpower me, worthy sirs, said I I little ment these encomnums for having spent all my days in camps and in strife, I have learned few of those courtesies which ought to adorn the man norm of every true behaver

You have served then with Sindia? asked the pearl merchant
No said I not in his armies, though there has been tough fighting enough to be seen with them. I have served in the Dukhun and I om proud to say under the bunners of Salabut Khan of Ellichpoor"

A good name," cried all; "the noble khan too has won it bravely though not on our side in the late contests.

"It matters not said I; wherever a blow was to be struck, or there was hope of a fight or a foray Salabut Khan was ever first in the fray and the last to leave it.

'And your destination, Synd? naked the pearl-merchant.

"Jhalone, I replied. "Salabut Khan has reduced his force and there being no longer hope of employment for a cavalier like myself, I returned home to my father and have taken quet service with the rejah,—whom Alla preserve! for he is as generous a prince as any of Hindostan and on his behalf I have recently been on a mission to the durbar of Doulut Rao on some matters which have been in dispute between them. I am proud too to say that all has been quietly settled.

"Soobhan Alla! cried the third worthy; how could it be otherwise, since our honoured guest has managed the negotiation?

Again I bowed my heed to the earth, and acknowledged the compliment. Some desultory conversation followed, and I rose to depart.

"My time is precious," said I, "and I implore you to excuse me I have much to arrange about the men who accompany me, and I go on to the chowsee to settle their accounts with the kotwal, if the worthy shekh will allow one of his attendants to point out his abode, I will notice it, and visit him ere sunset"

"Nay, Meer Sahib, this cannot be," replied the shekh, "behold, I am ready, I will accompany you, my poor house is not far off, and Alla forbid I should be the means of trespassing upon your time!"

He arose, girded up his loins, threw his shawl over his shoulders, and thrusting his feet into his slippers prepared to accompany me "I take my leave then, worthy sirs," said I to the others, "may health be with you!"

"Not without the pān and utr, Meer Sahib," said the elder, "it cannot be that we should let you go like a dog." And calling to an attendant, the articles were brought. The pān was presented to me, I was duly anointed on my beard and under my arms, and after a few more salams and compliments, I was following my new acquaintance the pearl-merchant

"Is he to be buny?" whispered one of my attendant Thugs to me in Ramasee as I passed him

"Hush!" said I, "speak not a word, but iun all of ye before us and clear the way, as if I were a great man"

They obeyed me, and ran forward, shouting and pushing the crowd to and fro, as though I had been a nobleman of fifty descents and a hundred titles

We soon reached the house of the merchant, and leaving our slippers at the door, he took me by the hand and led me at once into the private apartment, where I suppose he transacted his business or received his best customers It was a dahlan, or veranda, opening into a court, in the centre of which was a small fountain, its edges were planted with red poppies and laikspur, in various figures, and a plantam tree or two flung their broad green leaves The place looked cool, and was scrupulously neat and clean The 100m where we sat had been newly whitewashed, and its floor covered with a white cloth, except the musnud itself, which was yellow cloth bordered with blue velvet, a few large luxurious-looking pillows invited me to recline and forget the world and its cares Such shall be my own home, thought I, after awhile, a fountain is easily made, and I will enjoy my peace and quiet even as this worthy does I had seen a hundred such, but the unobtrusive neatness and comfort of the spot struck me forcibly, and whilst envying the possessor his peaceful lot, I was inwardly forming a plan to decoy him with me, which I had leisure to mature, for he had left me seated, and was for some time absent

OHAPTER XLIII.

Hor.—What is the issue of the business there?

Host.—It will be short the interim is mine

And a man s life s no more than to say one.

Hamlet. Act v., Sc. 2.

Harlet. Act v., Sc. 2.

Hs returned after some time bringing with him a small casket, and leading by the hand a noble looking boy whom he presented to me as his son, his first-born. He was about twelve years of age in telligent in feature, and withal handsome, and possessing a con fidence of manner I had never seen surpassed.

Alla has been merciful to you, my friend, said I and the Sahib Zadah is worthy of his sire. I had a son too once who promised to be such a one as the boy before me; but it was His will! and I have now a lonely house. Yet why obtrude my griefs upon a strangur? You have doubtless other flowers of the same tree.

"There are three of them," said the merchant, "and they are the pride of my existence for after all, what is wealth? What is honour? what is well-doing or respect in the world without some one to inherit it, and to tall of his father to yet unborn generations? And you are yet young Why be without hope? Alla will not fail to listen to the prayers of a devout synd.

Alas," and I, 'I think not of it. A girl remains to me, who is contracted in marriage to the son of a worthy neighbour and upon her rest my hopes at present. It is on her account that I seek a few pearls for the marriage commonies."

And they are here, Meer Sahib; pearls from Surat and from Serendeeh,—pewels that a momarch might be proud to wear." And he opened the casket, and displayed its beautiful contents to my admiring eyes.

They are indeed beautiful, said I; but a poor soldier like myself has little to do with such costly ornaments. Show me, I pray you, a few of a lower pince, such as will suit my present wants, which do not reach further than three hundred rapees worth.

He selected a string and held them out to me they were what I really required, and the purchase was quickly concluded.

Still however the glittering strings by before me and as I took up one in particular of great beauty from the evenness of the pearls and their bright water I said, as if involuntarily Would that my patron could see these!

Eh! what? cried the merchant. "Do you think he would purchase them?

Assuredly said I "for shortly before I left Jhalone the rajah was in the greatest need of pearls, and sent hither and thither for them, but without success none were to be procured, and he was even talking of sending to Surat for some, but the length of the Journey and the 11sk put the matter out of his head" The merchant mused for awhile At last he said, "And you really think he would purchase them ?"

His daughter will be married next year, and he is collecting jewels for the ceremony"

"They are very beautiful," said the merchant, taking up the string, "are they not? I have had them now for two years, and no one here is iich enough to purchase them, yet they are cheap, I swear by your beard they are, and I look for but little profit upon

"From a poor man, like you, Meer Salub, a synd and a soldier, I would take six thousand supees, but from a rajah and an infidel I

I have the heavy expense of this mailing coming upon me What "Now listen to me I am, as you say, poor, and say you to accepting my aid and taking the pearls to Jhalone and selling them there? The lajah is much guided by me, and if I get him to pay eight thousand rupees, you will pay me back the three hundred I now owe you for those I have purchased? Turn it over in your mind, and tell me your determination"

"Jhalone is a long way," said the merchant, "and if I sell my of the transaction and I to get back with the money? Thieves will hear of the transaction, and I may be waylard and murdered " "Fear not," replied I, "be at 1est on that score come so far from his home to oblige him, the rajah will give an escoit to ietum Of this I am confident, and if this is all that prevents your making the determination to accompany me, you had To one who has better dismiss it from your mind at once" "I will consult the astrologer," said he

"Nay, Shekhjee," I replied, "this is too ildiculous we true believers to do with astrologers? The man you would consult is a Hindoo, and there is abomination in the very word what danger is there? I have some fifty men with me, my own What have attendants, and the rajah's sepoys, therefore no harm can come to you, as for your leturn, you will have a few horsemen, who will afford you ample protection Again, you said you have had the necklace for two years, and never had an offer for it, why, thereme."

"Yes, father," said the lad, "listen to what the brave Meer Sahib says, and I will accompany you, and see the world beyond our town

You know you have promised to take me with you the first journey

you make

"Well it is very tempting certainly" said the merchant "Eight thousand rapees, you said Meer Sahib? That is worth going for and these baubles are useless to me here To tell you the truth, continued he, I got them from a Pindbarce who served with Chectoo or Dost Mahomed I know not which. He kept them as long as he could, but the lubhurs were broken up by the Feringhees (a said blow to our free trade) and though a few horsemen, his own followers, stack to him yet he had nothing to give them at last when they became mutinous, and threatened his life for their pay he was obliged to sell these, and I was the purchaser

And you got them cheap? said I.

Yes, they were not dear Meer Sahib a man in necessity rarely drives a hard bargain. I got them cheap; and yet I swear to you that they are cheap at eight thousand rupoes. I say this from experience for I have sold worse to Mahdanee Sinda himself for ten thousand but he will not purchase now and they lie heavy on my hands.

All therefore considered, Shokhyee," said I, "you had by far better accompany me to Jhalone. As to the journey a month will see you back again the season is favourable for travel, and as we are a strong party and march by night, you will never be incommoded by the sain."

Wall, Meer Sahib, I have almost determined but it will be necessary to tell those made, said he, pointing with his thimb to the zenana; and as you said you had to go to the kotwal on some business, if you could look in here after it is all over about the time of evening payer I shall be able to give you a decuave nameer. Much as we affect to despise women, you know I dare say Meer Sahib, that it makes one uncomfortable to undertake anything more especially a journey without consulting them.

"As you will, said I "I am indifferent about the matter it is for your good alone that I have offered this counsel and in this world of infidelity and selfishness it is refreshing to the heart either to assist a brother Moslem, or to be assisted by one without selfish motives. Alla Hafis! I take my leave and I will return by the Moghreb, and bring the money for my pearls. I left him.

"Is he to be bunil? sgain asked the Thug

Peace fool!" saud I laughing "he has gorged the bart, but the hook is not yet struck. Wait Insballs! Ameer Ah is not the son of an owl or a jackness and, Inshalls! we will yet throw dirt on his beard, for all he is so cauhous.

I had no husiness with the kotwal, as you may have imagined. I rode to my tent, and assembling the leaders of the band developed to them my plans and gave them instructions as to their demeanour and conduct before our new guest in prospect, this done, I was easy about the rest—If he came! It was almost too much to hope for, yet I had confidence in myself and in my fate—And the boy! that beautiful boy!—I had (for once) no heart to be a participator in his death—I must not allow him to accompany us, I said to myself, enough that the house is made desolate by the death of the father I was thus musing when Laloo came to me

"You are mad, Meer Sahib," said he, "this plan is not feasible. Bunij met with on the road is well enough, but to drag a man out of his house, as I may say, to destroy him, is too bad, and I do not think it is justifiable"

"Ha!" cried I, "so you are turned against me How is this?"
"God forbid that you should say so, Meer Sahib, but look at the matter You are known in the town, people have seen you enter the house of the merchant, and they will know that he accompanies you Will they not hunt us out?"

"You are an owl," said I, laughing, "trust me, there is no fear; and as for taking the man out of his house, I tell thee I see no more difference in it than in having met him on the road in the regular way. Let me alone, I know my work, and when we have got him, you shall appland what I have done"

"Nay, it was but a friendly remonstrance," said he, "and as you feel confident, go on with the matter He will be good bunij?"

"Assuredly, to the tune of some thousand rupees By Alla! I

"Assuredly, to the tune of some thousand rupees By Alla' I was tired of the humdium work we have been at lately, and my blood stagnated in my veins. This has stirred it, and I have set myself to the work. You know I seldom fail."

"Seldom indeed, Meer Sahib, but can I do ought?"

"Yes, you can," said I, "follow me at a little distance, and note the house The fool I am after will depend on his astrologer for a good day to quit his home. I am sure of this, for he said he would, and he took my bantering against him with an ill grace. Find out his servants, and from them the brahmin, take money with you and pay him. There is enough of daylight yet, and remember to-morrow morning is to be a lucky one, and the next a bad one. Mind this, and do your best, for much depends upon it—nay, everything."

"On my head and eyes be it!" said he, "and therefore, Mccr Sahib, I pray you accompany me even now, better in disguise perhaps, and show me the house Leave the rest to me, and I will not fail "

"A good thought," said I "The sun will not set for the next four hours, I can easily return and equip myself afresh So saying, I stripped myself of my fine clothes, put on others which were soiled and duty, tied up my face, except my eyes, and tucking my sword under my arm, looked as disroputable a brawler or smoker of ganga as any in the good town of Tearce.

"Come, said I," our errand is soon done and so it was. We walked most the house, and I left my ally at the corner of the street with a hundred rupees in his waisthand, and a cuming heart in his breast.

I returned and re-dressing myself, I mounted my horse and took my way to the merchant s, with the money I owed him. I found him in the same spot but as the evening was sultry he led me to the terrace of his house, where carpets had been spread for our convenience I paid my money and received the pearls, and then entered upon the main object of my visit.

You will go then Shekhjee? said I or is your mind against 1t P

Not at all, not at all," replied he. It is my wish to go,-my great wish Meer Salub but when I mentioned it in my zenana, though the proposition met with no opposing words or tears, they one and all declared that a lucky day must be fixed, without which it would be clearly of no use my going at all. You know what women are Moer Sahib suffice it to say that I could not over come their scruples for the more I argued and persuaded the more strongly they opposed and in fact, the matter became so serious, that to pacify them-mind you, to pacify them-I sent ten rupees to a brahmin who lives hard by who is a noted astrologer and the only one here in whom any confidence is placed. Allais my witness I cared not what he said but when a message came back to my that to-morrow was an unlucky day the whole genan Lhans. wives, slaves, and asseeds, set up such a howl of lamentation at what might have happened, and afterwards of congratulation at my hav ing escaped the threatened evil, that I was fairly stunned, and have given up the idea of the journey for to-morrow at any rate. But you know Meer Sahib, to-mofrows conjunction of planets may have a different effect, and as you will stay---

"Indeed, Shokhjee, said I, "I cannot stay Here have I idled away three whole days, and I can remain no longer for time is precious to me. My patron will even now wonder what has delayed me and to lose his favour will be the loss of my means of mainten ance. So to-morrow I start, most assuredly whether you come or not. And as to your accompanying me, that is your matter. I am perfectly indifferent to it, except that I shall lose your pleasant society on the road.

He was fairly perplexed. He had evidently reckoned on my stay but my careless yet determined manner of speaking left him no hope of a change in my opinions and, as a Persian would have said he held the finger of deliberation between the teeth of impatient desire" There he sat for a long time, looking on the ground in silence. It was a struggle between the love of gain and superstition, for though he had wished me to believe the contrary, he was as fully imbued with the belief of lucky and unlucky days as any of his wives, slaves, or asseels. At length he said—

"Meer Sahib, you remember our agreement—the two hundred rupees? I will make it another hundred if you stay one more day You are a poor man, and a hundred tupees will buy many cloths for your daughter's marriage"

Here was a direct attempt to cheat me out of a hundred rupees, and, for the latter part of his speech, I could have strangled him on the spot Yet I kept my temper I was playing too deep a game to lose it, and for a trifle too

"No, Shekh," said I, "it cannot be, I would not for a thousand rupees stay an hour after daylight to-morrow. you cannot tempt me But have you ever thought that your nujoomee may have played you false, and that it requires a few more rupees than ten to make the heavens propitious? I have heard of such things, ay, and proved them too, or perhaps I might believe in the aspect of the stars as you do"

"Ay say you so, my friend?" cried he By Alla! I would beat the rogue with a shoe in his own temple, with a shoe of cow's leather too, if I could think he was trying to cheat me, but that is impossible How can he help the position of the stars? And yet say, shall I send more money ?"

"No," said I, "surely not · if he is honest, he will fling it in your servant's face, if he is a rogue, he will keep it, and send word that the stars have changed, in the first case you will eat dirt, in the second you will be cheated, and he will laugh at your beard. No, I see no help for you, but to go in defiance of him, the zenana, and the stars, and this will prove you to be a man" the stars, and this will prove you to be a man"

"Impossible, Meer Sahib," said he despondingly "Putting the nujoomee out of the question, I have four wives, Alla help me'—the lawful number, you know, but oh! my friend, their wrath is dreadful, and I dare not provoke it"

"It is enough," said I, "you will not go, because you dare not,

-not because you do not wish it"

"Exactly, Meer Sahib you have hit upon the very cause My own heart is willing, and the prospect of gain leads me, but those women—"."

It was prayer-time, and the muezzin's sonorous voice proclaimed the hour from the roof of a neighbouring mosque We performed our ablutions, and, as good Mussulmans, we spread our carpets, and turning to the still glowing west, poured forth our evening praise and thanksgiving. I was determined to stay till the last moment I could, to give my emissary time for his proceedings and if no message came from the astrologer to try some other plan, or even to agree to stay another day. Ah gold! thought I if then describest me now at my best need. I will foreswear thy worship

Our pmyers were ended, and still we sat and conversed, but no message came to suit my purpose. I had gradually led the mer chant back to the subject of the journey and was picturing to him, in terms suited to his avarietous soul the reception he would assuredly meet with at Jiahone and I was preparing my words to introduce a change in my opinions as to staying another day when a servant came up the steps and whispered semething in his car at which he started, yet at the same time his face put on a joyous appearance.

Excuse me for an instant, my friend" said he I am wanted below—some one awaits me in the downe klmpa. Wait here, and I will rejoin you instantly

If heart beat loud and quick in my bosom as I watched him down the stops. Could it be that I had succeeded? or was there any feer of danger to my own person? I looked over the terrace it was far too high to leap from escape if there was danger was impracticable. But a moment s thought rallied me and as I disengaged my trusty sword, and held it ready for action, I laughed at my own fears, for I knew I could defend that narrow stair against a host. I looked over into the courtyard of the dewan khann but saw no one I could hear two voices in low and carnest conversation and as I stretched forth my neck, and bent over the parapet of the terrace in the vain endeavour to catch a syllable, I was sud deally gratified by seeing the merchant and a figure robed in white which I knew at once to be that of a Hindoo while his bare and ahaven head proved him to be a priest, emerge from the dewan khana; and now their words came clearly to me.

"Then there is no obstacle? said the merchant.

None, said the brahmin (for so he was) "as I

None, said the brahmin (for so he was) "as I have said, there was a mistake in the tables and calculations which I have just discovered. My art also told me that thou wert anxious to go am I right?"

"Right! ab, virtuous Brahmin, assuredly thou art. I am promised gam-nay wealth.

"And thou wilt be successful," said the other 'May Narayun grant at! I will pray for thy good fortune

Do so do so, good Brahmin. Good Seonath, I will not forget thee on my return. Inshalla! I can be grateful I will make a nuxur through thee to the temple

"You will not fail to do so I think, Shekhjee, for Ballayoe hath been propitious to thee ever since thy nuzzurs have been offered up at his shrine But I go to present thy gift, though it is a small Narayun keep thee!"

"It shall be doubled—trebled, Seonath. I swear to thee by Alla I will not forget when I return. Thou goest? Well, Alla Hafiz!

my friend awaits me "

He returned to me "Rejoice with me, my friend," cried he, "my kind Meer Sahib! after all, to-morrow is the lucky day My friend the brahmin sent one of his disciples to say there was a mistake in the calculations upon his tablets, and that the aspect of the heavens was favourable to me for an unlimited period Ah, how wise he is, Meer Sahib, and how honest '-you called him a rogue, but, see ' he might have kept me in suspense for a month, and refused to consult the stars at all until he had been well paid Well, after all, it is the power of Alla, and doubtless these infidels hold some communion with Him, which is denied to those of the true faith"

"So it would seem, Shekhjee," said I, humouring him, "it is no doubt wonderful that your friend, for an astrologer, is for once Of course you paid him liberally for his new discovery?"

The merchant winced "A trifle, Meer Sahib; a few pice to purchase oil for the temple was all he wanted "

"Oh, raie disinterestedness!" cried I, "truly it is grateful to the heart to see such conduct in this selfish world, where every one appears to strive how he can overreach his neighbour Of course he has no prospective advantage?"

"None, Meer Sahib, none! How could a true believer have dealings or connection with an infidel property Do I not take advantage of his learning for my own convenience, and then laugh at his beard?"

And he chuckled

Liar, said I to myself, as I clenched my hand and ground my teeth, thou shalt answer to Alla for this perjury before thou art many days older Verily, this is a meritorious deed, and therefore hast thou been delivered into my hands A Hajji too! Oh, shame, shame 'Yet then I remembered the Arab verse which saith, "If thy neighbour hath performed the Haj, trust him not, and if he hath done it twice, haste thee to remove thine abode from his vicinity" "Good, O Hajji," said I, "and you do night But the night wanes, you had better make preparation for the journey, and let me offer you counsel Bring no one with you but a servant or two, my company is ample for your protection. I have a small pal which will hold us both, and, above all, bring not your son,—he will but fatigue himself for no good purpose, and be a clog on our rapid movements, for rapid they must be "

"I will follow your advice in all things, Meer Sahib bring no servants. the man who will drive my spare tattoo can attend me when I require it; and the less show I make, the less I shall be suspected of carrying money with me.

Remember then," said I, ' you come to my camp by the time the morning star rises we shall all be ready for you, and the sun will not be powerful ere we reach our stage.

He promised to be there by the appointed time, and I left him.

I found my trusty emissary waiting for me in my tent. He burst into a loud laugh when he saw me.

"Is he safe ? he saked at length Ah, Meer Sahib, I have had great amusement, as no doubt you have also.

"He is he is fairly caught. The not is around him one pull and he is a lest man. And you, my faithful friend you have suc ecoded so that I marvel at your success.

"Marvel not, he replied "the task was easier than I thought.

But hear my adventures.

Surely and I and I called for a chilum, while he proceeded

You remember when you left me?"-I nodded,- Well, it was a long time ere I could find a servant and in despair I lay down in the shade of the wall, but kept awake. At last a fellow came out, a Hindoo, as luck would have it and I followed him Canst thou direct me to a kulal s shop? said I I have travelled far and my throat is dry I saw that the fellow humself drank, from the colour of his eyes, and they sparkled at the mention of the kulal s shop.

There is one close by he roplied I will show it. Good, said
I, thou shalt share my potations. Well, we entered the shop, and went into the inner room. I called for a bottle of liquor and paid for it. The place was somewhat dark, and I poured what I took on the ground, but he drank every drop; he finished the bottle as though it had been water and I sent for more. At last I began by asking him who his master was and what service he did, and, Ma shalls I heard in a wonderfully short time all about him and, lastly that he was going a journey but had been prevented by an astrologers having declared the morrow to be an unlucky day In fine, my friend Sumbhoo (for such was his name) got very drunk and having told me much of his master a private history which did not redound to his credit, he fell senseless on the ground, and there I left him but not before I had ascertained that the astrologer readed at a temple in the next street, and that his name was Sconath."

'I have seen hun, said I "a tall, fair man, a good looking priest, and stout enough for a Thug

"You saw him! How and where?"

I told him, and we had a hearty laugh as I described the scene in the court-yard, and mimicked the cringing tones of the merchant and the haughty ones of the brahmin. "But listen," said Laloo, "and wonder, as I did I soon found the temple and the brahmin, and accosting him, I begged for a charm against the evil eye for my child. He looked at me—Ya Alla' how he looked! I quailed under his gaze, and my flesh crept as if I were in an ague fit, for once I was afraid, for I knew not the man, and yet he seemed as if he could read my heart. 'Follow me,' said he, 'I would speak with thee apart from these prying people.' He spoke kindly, and I followed him, though almost mechanically. He went before me. 'Leave your shoes,' said he, 'this place must not be polluted. It is sacred.' At last we were alone in a small court, where there was a shrine of the god. Again he turned on me, and looked into my face. I really knew not what to think, and oh, how glad'I was when he put an end to my suspense by repeating our signal words!"

"Our signal ?"

"Yes, Meer Salub, even so, I was as much astounded as you are, but the mystery was soon solved. He proved to be a priest of our holiest of temples, Bindachul, who had travelled into these parts, and having picked up some astronomical lore at Benares, set up here for an astrologer, and found the trade so profitable that he has not returned to Bindachul. Of course I had no reservation with him, I developed our plan, from which he at first drew back, but I opened my purse, and five ashruffees worked such a change in his sentiments, that he listened to my words with complacency, altered the face of the heavens as far as they concerned your friend, and, in fine, offered there and then to go and say that his calculations were wrong, and that everything boded prosperity to the poor shekh."

"He has not failed us," said I

"No," replied Laloo, "I know that, but we have to pay handsomely He wanted a hundred rupees more, but I represented that we were a large band, and there would not be much to divide, and I obliged him to be content with a bhuttote's share, added to whatever a general subscription might amount to when the band should be informed of the part he had played"

"And he is content?"

"You have had the best proof, Meer Salub, has he not done the errand he promised? And when did a brahmin of Bindachul ever break his faith? He dare not Bhowance would smite him on the spot, or kill him by lingering to ments"

"And how," I asked, "are we to convey this share to him, whatever it may turn out to be?"

"Easily enough, we can get a hoondee on this place, and send it to him in a letter, or we can despatch a man with it"

"True, we can," said I, "and so now go, repeat to the men the lesson I taught them, and enjoin them to be circumspect and wary.

We have good burn; in prespect, and, Inshalla! we will get it too But I wish I could see the brahmin who has done us so good a turn in this matter.

Let him alone" and he he told me that, although he wished much to see you, having often heard of your conduct, it was better to avoid suspicion, and that any open intercourse between him and you would expose him to the inquiries of those with whom he was associated and had better be avoided. And he is right, Meer Sahibi it would do no good.

CHAPTER XLIV

Corneall -

Pinion him like a thief bring him before us; Though well we may not pass upon his life Without the form of justice yet our power Shall do a courtesy to our wrath, which men May blame but not control.

Lear Act. III. Sc. 7

Four days passed, and the merchant was still in our company. Ho was slightly attended, and we could have terminated his existence whenever we pleased but we were annous to carry him on as much of the journey as we could, and to baffle any traces of our route by turning to the right and left, away from the regular tracks, and by footpaths and byways only known to ourselves. Yet we had got far enough and I knew that the next days march would lead us through a jungle, which was one of our favourite bhils, and where I had from the first determined that he should die.

We were on the road early on the fifth morning and as before (indeed as was my word) I was riding at the head of my party. It was now daylight, but we were entering the jungle, and I was merry in my heart to think that he was in my power and that a large and valuable booty would be our price in the course of a short hour when I saw an animal move in the bushes on my right hand. Another instant, and a hare again crossed my path! I laughed within myself. Fools that they are, thought I, these brethren of mine! no jemadar but myself would dare to pursue this track after so dire an omen; himself and his whole band would fly as though a hundred tigers were in their path, and would leave their buny to escape, or to follow them, as his destmy might guide him. But I!—I laugh at it once I have proved that the omen is harmless, and shall it deter me now? Ah, no, no! my game is sure, and within my grasp.

And so it was. Sahib, we had not gone a coss, when I saw the place I had determined on and there the merchant died and his two servints. Yes, he died by my own hand. I pulled him off his pony and strangled him; and the servants were cared for by the others, but not before one of them had cut down one of my men, for m my eagerness to possess myself of the pure before me, I had not seen that the servants of the merchant could observe my actions. The poor fellow who had fallen was dreadfully wounded, yet he still breathed. What to do with him I knew not we could not wait, and to transport him with us was out of the question.

"What shall we do with Anundee?" said I to Laloo, "we are far from our stage, and we cannot, with our large party, say we have fallen among thieves '

He solved my doubts at once "Put him out of his pain," said he, "the man is dying what matters another thrust? he can be builed with the rest. The men might not like it if they saw it, but all here are engaged, and most of the band have gone on. We can wrap him up in his sheet afterwards."

I drew my sword and stepped towards the dying wretch, he looked supplicatingly towards me and strove to speak, but my heart was hard. I was sickened by the deed I had done, and I prayed

Alla to forgive me the blood of the miserable creature

Wretch i said I, interrupting Ameer Ali, and you murdered your own companion, your brother to whom you were swoin?

I did, salub, I did, yet why call it muider? He would have died in a short time, I did but rid him of his misery

It was a foul deed, Ameer Ali, and one that haunts your memory, I doubt not

Sometimes, was the careless answer of the Thug, and I bade him proceed

We wrapped the body in the sheet which was around its waist, having taken the money from the waistband. Laloo and myself carried it to the grave, now nearly filled to the top

"So he is dead!" cried the lughaces, "he could not have lived long after that cut the fellow who gave it would have done for more of us had not some of us seized on him, but we have laid him quietly,—he will break no more good men's heads and as for poor Anundee, he must be buried with the rest, for to burn him is impossible in this lonely place"

And he was buried, they deepened the centre of the pit, put some heavy stones over him, and covered him with earth, and I felt a load taken from my heart as he was covered from my sight for ever. Only Laloo knew what I had done, and I knew him to be faithful and silent nevertheless I often afterwards wished either that another had done the deed, or that I had let him die

A rare booty we had, sahib After we had eaten the goor at the next village, we hastened on to the end of the stage, and before we ungurded our lons I opened the caskets and divided the spoil. Not only had the merchant brought the neckhee I have mentioned before, but a heap of unstrung pearls and on reckoning up their probable value, we estimated the amount at twenty five thousand rupees. Now therefore we had no inducement to tarry away from our homes; we needed no fresh adventure to emrich us, and we pushed on to Jhalone. We reached it in safety and again I clasped Azeema to my heart, and repieced to see that my child was well, and had reached Jhalone without any adventure worth recording so at least he told me. But of Ganesha there was no nows, save that he had diverged to the castward, and was supposed to have gone in the direction of Benares; and I little cared, except that the revenge for the destruction of the moonshies s son rankled in my heart and was not forgotten.

Two years passed at my home without care and in peace Alas! now that I think on it, I can only compare the course of that time to the gentle stream of a river which as it winds among peaceful scenes and between green and flowery banks, ruffled only by the soft winds playing over its bosom, is suddenly arrested, dashed among rocks, and its current changed to turmoil and furious contention with its stony opposers. I saw no mark of my future lot no warn ing was given to me destruction came upon me in one fell swoop, and I was overwhelmed-I and mine! But for that stroke of ill fortune I had lived till now an honest and gentle life, for I had abandoned Thugges and the more I experienced of the soothing pleasures of my home, the more I became estranged from my habits of wandering and of plunder and destruction. Nor was the least urgent reason in the meditated change of my life, that I dreaded every day more and more that some unlucky chance would reveal to Assema the dreadful trade I had followed. I could paint to myself the effect it would have on her loving and gentle disposition, and the prostration of every faculty of her existence, under the shock of knowing that I was a murderer and often, as she lay upon my heart in the dead of night, these thoughts have come so thick on me, that could her soul have held any mysterious commu nion with mine, she would have recoiled in horror from my embrace and fled from me for ever And these fancies recurred so frequently and forcibly that sometimes I almost thought them a warning of coming evil, and I had fully determined to remove my abode and my wealth to Dehli after my daughter a marriage, there to reade for the remainder of the days which might be allotted to me

I have said months passed without incident. I should have mentioned that an English gentleman, some time after my arrival, came to Jhalone, and in the many conferences he held in secret with the rajah, we were given to understand that a treaty of some kind or other had been made, and that he had placed himself under the protection of the English Government. I thought not of it, yet even then a system was working silently yet surely which for a time struck at the power and confederacy of the Thugs a blow as severe, nay more so, as being more lasting, than any they had yet experienced

The Englishman had left Jhalone some time, and his visit was nearly forgotten by us, my daughter's marriage had begun, and everything was rejoicing in my house. About noon one day one of the rajah's hurkaras came with a message that he required my presence and my father's in the durbar on particular business. In vain was it that I excused myself on the plea of the marriage ceremony. The messenger would take no excuse, and at last, seeing no alternative, we girded our loins and accompanied the hurkara.

We were ushered through the various courts to the dewan khana, where the rajah sat in durbar, surrounded by his mutsuddees and soldiers. Leaving our shoes at the entrance, we were as usual advancing towards his guddee to make the customary salutations, when a sudden rush was made upon us from both sides of the hall, and we were at once seized and disarmed. In vain I struggled with my captors, in vain I attempted to shake them off by the most strenuous exertions, it was useless. I was surrounded and overpowered, my turban was torn rudely from my head, and my arms were bound so tightly with it that I thought the blood would have burst from under my nails. I desisted at last, and remained passive in the hands of the soldiers. My hour is come, and my fate has led me on thus far to desert me at last! thought I, it is the will of Bhowanee and of Alla, why should I resist?

Seeing me quiet, the rajah addressed me

"Ah, Ameer Ah," said he, "what is this I hear of thee, that thou art a Thug, a common murderer? Can this be true of one who was looked up to in Jhalone as a merchant and a respectable man? What hast thou to say? Speak, man, and prove if thou canst to me that the accusations I hear against thee are false"

"Rajah," said I, "I know not who hath poisoned thy mind against me or mine, is there any one in your city who can speak one word against me? Have I not been fair and honourable in my dealings with all, and with thyself too? have not I managed villages and brought them to prosperity from desolation, and can any one, young or old, in this durbar say that I have ever wronged him, or defrauded him of a fraction? Rajah, none can say this, and therefore why am I and my old father thus disgraced in the eyes of the city, and torn from our houses in the midst of the rejoicings of marriage?"

2 D

I neems thee not said the rajah "Blugran alone knows whether what I hear is the truth or not but witnesses are many against thee and the old man let them speak, and we will after wards deeded in your case Bring them forth! cried he to an attendant one by one let them give their ordence before these unhappy men we desire no secrecy in this matter

There was a moment's pause in the assembly and every eye—a hundred eyes were upon us. I looked to my father to see the effect his attention had on him but I read no hope in the glance he throw on me his energy had deserted him and he looked like a convicted felon long before he was so in reality. He returned my anxious and meaning glances by a stare of stupid apathy or extreme fear,—I know not which; and it was pitiable to behold him, for his venerable and respectable appearance but ill asserted with the disgraceful situation he was in. I turned away from him to look at the man who entered and then I felt that my doom was scaled. I have never mentioned him, but he had been connected with our gang from the first as a tilhace, or scout, and had afterwards assisted as a bbuttote on many occasions. His name was Sooruj; he had accompanied me on all my first expeditions, and had served under my father for some time before I became a Thug he therefore knew every particular of my career and until I became a Pindharoe described every event with minuteness and fidelity omitting not one nor adding in any way to those I had been so deeply concerned in. He offered to point out the spots upon which travellers had been destroyed, declared the amount of booty we had gained on many occasions, and ended by de-nouncing both my father and myself as the greatest leaders in Bundelkhund, as men who could take the field at any time with two hundred followers or more, and as cruel and remorseless Thugs He dared me to disprove his words, and indeed I quailed under his accusations for they were true, and truth searches the heart and over whelms the guilty But against my father he was the most briter Look on him, Rajah!" cried he look on this heary wretch! One would think that, old as he is, he would have ceased to deprive his fellow-creatures of life that he would have spent the remainder of his days in propristing Bhowanee by sacrifices, and his own Prophet by prayers! yet it has not been so Within the last two months he has returned from an expedition laden with spoil, and the last man he straigled was one of thine own subjects, O Hajah,—one who was respected and beloved here, and whose bereaved family will rue this day that I have declared his fate in your durbar

"One of my subjects! cried the raph "thou canst not mean

it. Speak and let not fear prevent your disclosing the truth "Fear! Rajah, I know it not. If I feared him, that old man, should I have dered to speak as I have done? Lasten you know

Jeswunt Mul, one of the most respectable of the shroffs of Jhalone ""
"Knew him, O Messenger of ill tidings! Jeswunt Mul is not dead?"

"Ask him," said the man hoarsely, "or stay, ask the other man you have here, let him be brought forward, he will tell the tale. I saw it not. But Jeswunt Mul will never speak more, and let those who believe the good man safe at Saugor shave their moustachies and mourn, for he will never more be seen. Yes, he is dead, and that old man looked on while he writhed out his last agony under the roomal of the bhuttote," and he pointed at my father, while he regarded him with a look of grim and revengeful pleasure

There was a general shudder through the assembly, as the deep tones of the informer's voice fell on the ears of those who heard it; and "Jeswunt Mul dead!" was repeated by many in an incredulous tone as they drew into knots and whispered together. Nor was the rajah himself least struck by the melancholy information. He sat on his mushud in silence, though it could be seen by the working of his features how much he was affected. But he aroused himself at last

"Thou didst not then see this murder?" said he to the informer "I did not, Maha Rajah, but send for Bodhee, he will relate the particulars"

Bodhee! thought I, then there is indeed no hope. Until his name was mentioned, I had a faint idea that the accusation might be a fabricated one! especially as I had heard nothing of the sahoukar's fate from my father, but Bodhee had been with him, and he was the chief of the lughaees, and it was more than probable that he had dug the grave for the victim

"Let Bodhee be brought forward," cried the rajah

He came, his fetters clanked as he moved, and it was not until he had advanced into the midst of the durbar that he beheld my father and myself bound and as criminals. The sight staggered him, and well it might, he had been trusted by us, raised to the rank he held by my father, and ever treated by him as a son, though he was of a different faith to ours. His face was convulsed by his emotions—they might have been those of a faithful heart struggling against ingratitude, and I looked with a breathless anxiety to the first words which should fall from him. But before he spoke the rajah addressed him

"Miserable wretch!" said he, "your life has been spared on the condition that you speak the truth, and reveal, without reservation of a single circumstance, every deed of murder you have been engaged in, this has been promised you by the English, and you have now to prove that you will perform your engagement. If you do perform it, well, if not, though the English are your protectors, I swear to you that you shall be dragged to death by my elephants ere a glurree of time has passed over you. Bid the elephant be brought? cred he to an attendant; "and see that the chaus are ready By Gunga! there will be work for him ere long. And now continued he to the approver knowest thou aught of the death of Jesuum Mal of the town, he who used to manage my pravate affairs or if he indeed be dead? Speak, and remember that truth alone can save you.

There was a breathless silence my father gazed at the informer with an intense anxiety it was ordent to me that he thought one word from him would seal his fate for ever or that, should he deny the dead, he would escape. Earnestly imploringly he locked at him, and the informer was well nigh evercome: he trembled in every limb, and the big drops of sweat stood out on his face, while the reins of his forehead swelled almost to bursting

"Speak Bodhee! said my father in a hollow voice,—yet still he smiled,— speak, and tell the rajah that his poor servant Ismail is not guilty of this deed.

"Silence!" exclamed the rajah gag him if he attempts to utter a word to influence the informer we will do justice in this matter. And you, Meer Sahib (turning to a respectable-locking person who was sected near him) you shall be able to tell the Sahib-logue that justice can be done in the durbar of Jhalone. Bring up the elephant, he cried to the attendants and do you, Bodhee, look your last on the earth and sky for by Gunga! I swear thou art night to death if thou deceivest me. I read it in thy face that this matter is known to thee."

But still Bodheo heatated there was evidently a struggle within him whether he should die in defence of his old protector or betray him to save his own life. For a moment the former feeling prevailed he turned to the rujsh, and said distinctly and firmly 'May I be your sacrifice, Maha Rajah! I know nothing of this matter of other murders I can tell you, but I know naught of this.

"He hes! said the other approver he was with Ismail Jemadar he is afraid to speak out, and has hed to you, O Prince.

You hear him, orned the rajah to Bodhee you hear what your fellow Thug says yet, much as you have deserved death, I give you a few moments more the shadow of the verandah is now close on my mushed till it reaches it thou shalt live beyond it, one finger's breadth, and you due!"

There was not an eye in the growd that was not fixed on the ad vanuing shadow barely a hand s breadth of light remained, and the Thug gazed on it as though he were facinated by the eye of a tiger My father! oh, he was fearful to look on! his eyes were glazed, his lips were tightened across his teeth, fear agony was depicted in his countenance in stronger lines than I had ever before seen. I could not look on him his face was altered, and his usual bland expression had been usurped by that I have described. I felt sick, I could have died I thought, and would that I had died, to have been spired what followed "Fool!" cried the other approver, "will you sacrifice your life for those who will be instantly put to death?" He spoke in Rama-

966

The words rallied the man to whom he addressed them, and they saved him

"Pardon, pardon!" he cried; "O mighty Prince, I have told hes Jeswunt Mul is indeed dead, these hands dug his grave and bore his yet warm body to it"

"At Bhugwan! At Secta-ram!" cried the rajah, "and is it even so? My poor friend, and art thou dead?" and for a moment or two he wept. "This is womanly," said he, rallying himself, "proceed, O kumbukht! let me know all, and what share he had in it"

"We met the sahoukar at—," said the Thug "Ismail well knew that if we were all seen by him he would suspect us, so he sent the greater part of the band out of the village, and prevailed upon Jeswant Mul to come and sleep in our camp, instead of remaining where he was, he went to the village and brought him away lainself, else he would not have come. The grave was dug long before he arrived, and he had not been an hour with us after the sun had set, when he was strangled in the jemadar's presence by two bhuttotes, and his two servants shared the same fate. I buried them all. The sahoukar's pony we sold the next day for twenty-five rupees, and we got but little else, for he had no money but in hoondees, which we burned."

"Enough, enough," said the rajah, "this is ample proof"

"Nay, if your Greatness requires more proof, I can give you some now," continued the approver, "look at the jemadar's hand he wears on it a ring he took from the body himself, and it may be recognised even by you, Maha Rajah"

My heart sank within me at this new and desperate stroke of fortune I saw the ring torn from my father's finger, all examined it A sahoukar who was in the assembly declared it to have belonged to Jeswunt Mul, and, more than all, his name was engraven on its inner surface

"Enough!" again cried the rajah, "I know it myself, I could have sworn to that diamond among a thousand Away with him! chain him to the elephant, let him be dragged through the town, and proclamation made that he was a Thug"

"Stay," cried the syud, who had not as yet spoken, "he may have something to urge in his defence, ask him and hear him."

you that you shall be dragged to death by my elephants ere a glurree of time has passed over you. But the elephant be brought! cred he to an attendant 'and see that the chains are ready By Gunga! there will be work for him ere long. And now "continued he to the approver knowest thou aught of the death of Jeawunt Mul of this town he who used to manage my private affairs or if he indeed be dead? Speak, and remember that truth alone can save you

There was a breathless silence my father gazed at the informer with an intense saxiety it was evident to me that he thought one word from him would seed his fate for over or that, should he deny the dead, he would escape. Earnestly impleringly he looked at him, and the informer was well nigh overcome he trembled in every limb and the big drops of sweat atood out on his face while the yeans of his forehead swelled almost to bursting

"Speak Bodheo! said my father in a hollow voice,—yet still he smiled,— speak, and tell the rajah that his poor servant Ismail is not guilty of this deed.

Silence!" exclamed the rajah gag him if he attempts to utter a word to influence the informer; we will do justice in this matter. And you, Meer Sahib (turning to a respectable-looking person who was scated near him) you shall be able to tell the Sahib-logue that justice can be done in the durbor of Jhalone. Bring up the elephant, be orned to the attendants "and do you, Bodhee, look your last on the earth and sky for by Gunga! I swear thou art night to death if then decouvest me. I read it in thy face that this matter is known to thee."

But still Bodhee heatated; there was evidently a struggle within him whether he should die in defence of his old protector or betray him to save his own his. For a moment the former feeling prevailed he turned to the raich, and said distinctly and firmly. May I be your sacrifice, Maha Rajah I Know nothing of this matter of other murders I can tell you, but I know naught of this

He has! said the other approver he was with Ismail Jema-dar he is alread to speak out, and has hed to you, O Prince

"You hear him, cried the rajah to Bodhee; you hear what you for fellow Thing says yet, much as you have deserved death, I give you a few moments more; the shadow of the verandah is now close on my mushed till it reaches it thou shalt live beyond it, one fingers breadth, and you due!"

There was not an eye in the crowd that was not fixed on the ad vancing shadow berely a hand s breadth of light remained, and the Thing gazed on it as though he were fascinated by the eye of a tiger. My father! oh, he was fearful to look on! his eyes were glazed, his lips were tightened across his teeth, fear agony was depicted in his countenance in stronger lines than I had ever before seen could not look on him his face was altered, and his usual bland expression had been usurped by that I have described I felt sick, I could have died I thought, and would that I had died, to have been spared what followed

"Fool!" cried the other approver, "will you sacrifice your life for those who will be instantly put to death?" He spoke in Rama-

The words rallied the man to whom he addressed them, and they saved him

"Paidon, paidon!" he cried, "O mighty Prince, I have told hes Jeswunt Mul is indeed dead; these hands dug his grave and bore his yet warm body to it"

"At Bhugwan! At Secta-ram!" cried the rajah, "and is it even so? My poor friend, and art thou dead?" and for a moment or two he wept "This is womanly," said he, rallying himself, "proceed, O kumbukht! let me know all, and what share he had in it"

"We met the sahoukar at-," said the Thug "Ismail well knew that if we were all seen by him he would suspect us, so he sent the greater part of the band out of the village, and prevailed upon Jeswunt Mul to come and sleep in our camp, instead of remaining where he was, he went to the village and brought him away himself, else he would not have come The grave was dug long before he arrived, and he had not been an hour with us after the sun had set, when he was strangled in the jemadar's presence by two bhuttotes, and his two servants shared the same fate buried them all The sahoukar's pony we sold the next day for twenty-five rupees, and we got but little else, for he had no money but in hoondees, which we burned"

"Enough, enough," said the rajah, "this is ample proof"

"Nay, if your Greatness requires more proof, I can give you some now," continued the approver, "look at the jemadar's hand wears on it a ring he took from the body himself, and it may be recognised even by you, Maha Rajah"

My heart sank within me at this new and desperate stroke of I saw the ring torn from my father's finger, all exammed it A sahoukar who was in the assembly declared it to have belonged to Jeswunt Mul, and, more than all, his name was engraven on its inner surface

"Enough!" again cried the rajah, "I know it myself, I could have sworn to that diamond among a thousand Away with him! chain him to the elephant, let him be dragged through the town, and proclamation made that he was a Thug

"Stay," cried the synd, who had not as yet spoken, "he may have something to urge in his defence, ask him and hear him."

'Speak! cried the rajah to my miserable father; "speak, O

And then my father a proud spirit broke out. With the certainty of death before his eyes he qualled not. While hope remained of life, he had clung to it as every man will and when I had expected a grovelling entreaty for his life to be spared from his previous demeasour, he asked it not, but gloried in the cause for which he died.

Yes," said he, drawing humself up, while his eye glistened proudly "I scorn to die with a he upon my lips. I killed Jeswunt Mul because he was villain, as you are, Rajah! because he employed Thurs and would not reward them, but wrung from them every rapee he could as you do I have murdered hundreds of men because they were given into my hands by Alla, but I never destroyed one with the satusfaction I did your friend. Ay you were friends and brothers in guilt, and you know it. My life! I care not for it. What has an old man to do with life? his emovinents are cone, his existence is a burdon to him. A short time and nature would have claimed me you have anticipated the period. Yet, O Rajah, Bhow ance will question you for this deed-for the destruction of her votary My blood be on your head and the curse of a dving man be with you! You have deceived me, robbed me, shared my spoils, taken the produce of murder-nay be not impatient, you know it is the truth, and that Alla, who is the Judge of all, knows it also. He will east your portion in Jehanum, as a kafir and Bhowance will rejoice that the destroyer of her votary writhes in the terments of the damned."

"Gag him! strike the kafirs mouth with a shool roured the rajah in a fury more like that of a beart than a man, as he foamed at the mouth. "Away with him. And let his son look on his dying scony"

And they dragged us both forth; I should not say my father for his step was firm. I struggled against my tormentors, but it availed me not. "One word, my father! cried I to him as we were brought near each other will then not speak to thy son?

He turned his head and a tear stood in his eye "I leave thee, Ameer Ah but thou knowest a believer's Paradise, and the joys which await him—the seventy virgins and everlasting youth. Thou art not my son but I have loved thee as one, and may Alla keep thee!

No more! aned the rough soldiers, striking him on the mouth and dragging him forward.

"Revenge me!" exclaimed my father in Ramasce "tell the English of that monsters conduct to us, and when he is torn from his seat of pude my soul will be happy in Paradisc. He spoke no more, I was held forcibly, so that I saw the end of that butchery. They seemed him by a chain round his loins to the forefoot of the elephant, and they tied his hands behind him, so that he could not save himself by elinging to it. He still continued repeating the Kulma. But now all was ready—the mahout drove his ankoos into the head of the noble beast, which uttering a loud scream dashed forward. A few steps, and my father's soul must have been in paradise

Note —The raph of Jhalone died from an inveterate leprosy, which all Thugs declare to have broken out soon after the death of the Thug in the manner described, and that it was a judgment upon him sent by Bhowanee.

CHAPTER XLV

King Richard —My conscience hath a thousand several tongues,
And every tongue brings in a several tale,
And every tale condemns me for a villain

Methought the souls of all that I had murdered Came to my tent

Richard III Act v, Sc 3.

Sahib, can I describe to you the passions which then burned in my heart? I cannot A thousand thoughts whirled through my brain, till I thought myself mad, perhaps I was Revenge for my father was uppermost, and oh that I could have got loose! By Alla! unarmed as I was, methinks I would have sprung on the rajah and strangled him But resistance was unavailing, the more I struggled, the tighter my arms were bound, until they swelled so that the pain became excruciating, and I well-nigh sank under it I suffered my guards to lead me away from the durbar, I was thrust into a vile hole, and at last my arms were unbound

That day—Alla, how it passed! Men gazed at me in my cage as though I had been a tiger, and mocked and derided me. The boys of the town hooted me, and thrust sticks at me through the iron gratings. One and all reviled me in the most opprobrious terms they could devise,—me! the respectable, nay, the wealthy, to whom they had bowed before, when I basked in the sunshine of the rajah's favour, but I was degraded now. Alas! my dreams, my forebodings had come to pass they had been indefinite shadows, this was the reality. Alla! I raved, I called upon Azeema's name, I implored those who still lingered about my prison to fly and bring me news of her, and to comfort her, and I cursed them when they derided me, and mocked my cries. Azeema, the name that might not have been breathed by mortal out of the precincts of my zenana, became a word in the mouths of the rabble, and they jested on it, they leaded it with obscene abuse and I heard it all In vain I strove to stop my cars -it provoked them the more they shouted it close to the iron bars and spat at me. Night came and I was left in my loveliness. I should have been in her foul embrace now I shared the company of the rat, the lizard, and the scornion. It was in vain that I courted sleep to steep my senses in a temporary oblivion of their misery my frame was too strong and my anguish too great for it to come to me. I wrestled with my agony but I overcame it not, and I had to drink the bitter cup to the dregs. At last the morning broke I performed the Namaz-the dust of the floor served me instead of sand or water for my ablutions Water I had none I had begged for it, for my mouth was parched and dry with anxiety yet no one gave it. Again the court was filled old and young women and children, all came to look at the synd-to look at Ameer Ah the Thug-to decide him and torment him! But I was now sullen like a tiger when his first rage, after he has been entrapped, has subsided, I cowered into the corner of my cell, and covered my face with my wanthand, nor heeded their savage unfeeling mirth, nor the bitter words they poured out against me. In vain was it that I now and then looked around to see whother one kind pitying glance rested on me Alas I not one every face was familiar to me but the eyes either spoke a brutal satisfaction at my sufferings, or turned on me with the cold leaden stare of indifference. I tried to speak several times, but every murmur was hailed with shouts from the rabble before me, and my throat was perched and my tongue swelled from raging thirst.

The whole day passed-I had no food, no water It was in the height of the burning season, and I, who had been pampered with luxuries, who in my own abode should have drunk of refreshing sherbets, prepared by Ancema, was denied a drop of water to cool my burning throat. In vain I implored those nearest to me in words that would have moved aught but hearts of stone, to inter cede with the jemadar who guarded my prison to allow me a draught of the pure element. I might as well have spoken to the scorohing blast that whistled into my cage-bringing with it clouds of dust, which were increased by the unfeeling boys when they saw I shrank from them. Thus the day passed evening came, and still no water no relief, no inquiry into my condition "Had I been placed there to die? And no sooner had the thought flashed across my mind than I brooded over it. Yes, I was to die to expire of thirst and hunger And then, oh how I envied my father a fate! has was a quick transition from the sorrows and suffering he had un dergone during one short hour to paraduse and the hours.

And from evening night. I had watched the declining sun, till its last flery and soorching beams fell no longer on my prison floor —I watched the reddened west until no glare remained, and one by one the stars shone out dimly through the thick and heated an—and I thought I should see the blessed day no more, for I was sick and exhausted, even to death—I lay me down and moaned, in my agony of spirit and of body, and at last sleep came to my relief. For a time all was oblivion, but horrible dreams began to crowd my prison with unsightly shapes and harrowing visions, my life passed as though in review before me, and the features of many I had strangled rose up in fierce mockery against me,—faces with protruding tongues and eyes, even as I had left them strangled

Why describe them to you, sahib? why detain you with a description of the horiois of the scene which rose to my distempered fancy, and at last woke me, burning as though a fire raged in my bowels and would not be quenched? But morning broke at last, and the cool an once more played over my heated and fevered frame, and refreshed me Yet I was still in agony,—who can describe the sufferings of thirst? Hunger I felt not thirst consumed me, and dried up my bowels. How anxiously and impatiently I looked for the first man who should enter the court where my prison was! One came, he passed through and heeded not my pitcous cries, another and another, none looked on me, and again I thought I was to die. Another came, I called, and he turned to regard me. He was one that I knew, one who had eaten of my bread and my salt, and had been employed about my house, and he had pity, he had a remembrance of what I had done for him he came, and looked on me. I spoke to him, and he started, for my voice was hollow, and thin and hoarse. "Water!" cried I, "for the sake of the blessed Prophet, for the sake of your mother, one drop of water! I have tasted none since I was confined."

"Alas!" said he in a low tone, "how can it be, Meer Sahib? The rajah has threatened any one with death who speaks to you or brings you food "

Again I implored, and I who had been his master prostrated myself on the ground and rubbed my forehead in the dust. He was moved—he had pity and went to fetch some, fortunately no one saw him, and he brought a small earthen pot full, which I diank as though it had been that of the well of paradise. Again and again he took it and refilled it, and at last he left me, but not before he had promised to visit me in the night, bring me a cake of bread if he could, and, more than all, news of Azeema and of my house

The next day passed, and I had no food I treasured up the water which had been left with me and sipped it now and then, but by nightfall again I was in torment Yet I had hopes, for I knew that the young man would not deceive me, he had sworn by his mother's head to bring me food and he could not break his onth.

And he came I had sat watching with that anxiety which can only be known by those who have been in a situation like mine. listening to every distant footfall, to every noise, as though it were the step of him I looked for I have said he came he was muffled in a blankot, and had stolen in unobserved by the laxy sentinel at the cate: he brought me food, a few coarse cakes, and an carthen pot of milk. "Eat! said he in a low tone I will sit here and will tell you the news you bade me inquire for afterwards. I was ravenous, and I ate; coarse bread, such as I should have loathed three days before was now a luxury sweet and grateful I ato it, drank the milk, and was thankful and I called him and blessed him for his venturous daring and for his gratitude to one who could no longer do him a kind turn. 'And the news, Gholam Nubbee ? can you tell me aught of ker and my child ?

My news is bad, Meer Sahib, and I am the unwilling messenger of tidings which will grieve your soul and add to your misery "Say on said I "tell me the worst tell me she is dead, and you will only my what my soul has forewarned me of.

He paused for awhile. "You must know it sooner or later Meer

Sahib-she is dead." "And my child? She is with the good moolla who protected your wife when she had no longer a house to cover her and who performed the last rites of our faith to her when she was dead." "No home! cred I they did not drive her forth?

"They did. Meer Sahib. The raph sent soldiers your house was stripped of everything and your gold and silver they say was a prize he little expected your wife and child were turned into the street, with only the clothes they had upon their persons. But to her it little mattered, for I have heard she never spoke from the time she knew of your father a fate and the cause of your imprison ment. They say she sat in stupor like a breathing corpse, without speaking a word to say where her pain was."

Enough! said I, go may Alla keep you! I would now be alone, for grief sits heavy on me."

Then she was dead-my Azeema, my beloved! she for whom I could myself have died, she whom I had loved as man can only love once she was dead she had known that I was a Thug and that had killed her It was well-better far that she should have died, than lingered on to be scoffed at and maulted as the wife of one who was now a convicted murderer Had she lived I could never have dared to approach her for she was pure, and I---!

I may say I almost rejoiced at her death, sahib I did not grieve

as I should have done had the blow fallen on me while I was yet in prosperity then it would have been hard indeed to bear, but now I was altered, and she was dead, and again I say it was well in His mercy had taken her from her scene of suffering, almost be-411 fore she knew to its full extent the horrible reality And my child too was safe, she was in friendly hands, and the moolla would be a father to her

The day after the nocturnal visit of my humble friend, food was allowed me It was scanty to be sure, but still I existed, though worn down by sufferings, which I have no words to express, to a shadow of what I was Three months passed thus, and they appeared to me like years when I looked back on them

At the end of this time I was taken to the rajah's durbar were the words he spoke to me, but those were bitter ones, for he had shaled my spoil, taxed me for protection, and, after putting my father to death, he had plundered my home, and his booty was the accumulation of mine for years past I say my father, and yet he had told me he was not my parent But what mattered that now? He was dead, and the mystery of my birth, if any had ever existed, was gone with him What mattered it too who was my father? I was alone in the world, not a tie, save one, bound me to exist-My daughter was with strangers, and in a few years she would forget me, truly I might say I was alone

I was in the rajah's durbar—I had no friend, no one of all those by whom he was surrounded, who had formerly courted me, eaten of my bread, and flattered me that I was yet to rise to greatness under his patronage—not one spoke for me, not one interceded to avert my shame The rajah spoke to me

"Ameer All," said he, "I had trusted thee, I had thought thee honest (how he hed as he spoke!), I had believed thee a 11ch and fortunate merchant, but, O man! thou hast deceived me, and not me alone, but thousands, and thou art a Thug and a murderer shee I do not seek the death. Inches has been satisfied in the thee, I do not seek thy death Justice has been satisfied in the destruction of the hoary villain who made thee what thou art, and who led one who might have been an ornament to the world to be a wretch upon whose head is the blood of hundreds Ali, I speak truth, and thou knowest it And though I desire not thy death, yet thou canst not be released without a mark on thy brow that men may know and beware of he to the attendants, "and let him be branded!" $Y_{\mathrm{es},\ Ameer}$

They threw me down Sahrb, what could my attenuated and wasted frame do against men who had suffered no misery like mine? Throw him down," cried I struggled, yet it was unavailing, they held my arms, and legs, and head, and a red-hot pice was pressed upon my forehead, it was held there as it burned down to the bone, and my very brain seemed to be scorched and withered by the burning copper. They took it off and raised me up. Alla! Alla! the agony that I endured—the agony of pain and, more than that, of shame to be branded publicly that the world might think me a thief—to have a mark set on my forchead that! I must curry to my grave—a mark only set on the vile and on the outcasts from society! Sahib, it was a bitter out to quaff!

"Away with him! cried the rajah, away with him! Release him at the boundary of my territory. And mark me," he continued addressing himself to me, "I have given thee thy life, Ameer Ali, go and be wise learn by what has happened to be an houest man for the future and, above all, remember that if ever thou art seen in Jhelme arana, or in any of my towns or villaces, nothing will be able to save thee from the feet of an elephant.

He rose and strode out of the durbar and in pain and misery I was conducted in two days to the frontier of his country and un bound. Two rupees were given to me and again the wide and cruel world was before me. I hurried from my late Leepers. I bound my turban over my still burning and aching brow so that man might not see my shame, and took the road before me I wandered almost unconscious of anything save the pain I was suffering until night fell around me, and I directed my steps to a village, the lights of which were a short distance before me Exchanging one of my rupees, I sat down at the shop of a bhuttours and satisfied my craving appetite there I slept, and when I arose I was refreshed, and again believed myself to be Ameer All. The morning breeze blew fresh on my face as I took my way out of the town the refreshing rest of the night had invigorated me, and I bounded along with a light heart-yes, with a light heart, for I was free! I had no thought for the past now It was my fate which had been ful filled what had been written in my destiny had come to pass. As I proceeded, a jackness brayed on my right hand and I hailed the favourable omen with a joy I can feebly express. Yes, great Bhow ance, mother of men! oried I sloud, I answer to thy omen I am ready and again devoted to thy service. I have sinned against thee I had wilfully avoided thy warning omens, led on by an arremstible destiny and by a proud heart. I have been punished, and have bought a dear experience but henceforward no votary of thine breathing shall excel Ameer Ali in devotion to thee and therefore, great goddens, vouchsafe the thibao and pilhaoo And they were granted the omen on the right was followed by that on the left, and I felt that I was pardoned, and again accepted as a Thug

And so you believe, Ameer Ali, said I, that your not observing the omens in the instances you related was the cause of your father s till then, as I have told you, but Assuredly, sahiler one Had I it them then, should I have the I was now no longad, had I obeye looted in my heart? No, no! of the omens? and committed stilled, and I have never known an heavy crime I have not be disoberere a band has been led to destroy omens cannot, da they were, or whillowance, that they were not all the wishes of B with domestic misfortune, iminstance in which vengeance, eitherng you know, and he will tell you a person against ath. Ask any This afterwards, and have allowed punished by her prisonment, or defer doubted omerause I feared that they were not I nevo escape me, bed the same some rich prizes ssed forward, I again untied my nous.

death and your munortunes?

I pre my waist, and I welcomed it to completely propit continue. Well, sahib, to and never quitted he embrace of an old and valued nould have done t I, I cannot be unsuccessful, and 100mal, for that 1 ch omens, thoughe Roostum himself, I can gain a my grasp as I sl friend With su traveller, were hd some pice, my clothes were in but one rupce an others before I could venture to over any single victory I had and I must have hope to lead them rags about me, with Thugs, and no person alone, and when noon associate myself d long, and met come me, I lay down under a tree But I travellen's heat had over a well, and having washed and came, and the su, near which wased to see what chance would throw by the road side he Namaz, I waitime, but no one passed me, and bathed and said are I sat a long teep I was awakened by a touch The I dropped as beheld a middle-aged Mussulman in my way overcome by fatind looking up Iy, and returned his "Salam Alei-I arose rapidlist Fortunately my face remained from some one, a gazing upon me as he had given in my forchead could not be seen, koom" as kindly, and the brand chimself, and as he was weary, he well wrapped up a traveller like nversation such as usually passes he took me to be entered into coele After he had been seated for sat down and w situated as we will wallet from his shoulder, and between persons he loosed a sma and mango pickle, to which he a few minutes, ayed some cakes justice, but seeing that I looked opening it displined to do ample join his repast, which I was right seemed to be in he invited me to ce the morning When we had wistfully at ther I had fasted sin "Meer Sahib, you say there is no cled to do as I had fasted sin "Meer Sahib, which is not the same and therefore if you glad to do, as 1, he said to me I am going, and therefore, if you finished our me oss in the directio arms, I will bathe in this well" water for some ch my clothes and no hurry to be gone, and you will will kindly wat ephed, "I am in gan to strip, and taking with him "Surely," I i As I said it he bihe well, and I soon after heard the not delay me" aded the steps of ed it over himself a lota, he descel water as he pour

Now is my time, thought I: he will be defenceless, and will fall an easy proy to me and I prepared my roomal for work.

He soon returned, and began to dress. I lostered near him, till I saw him take up his garment and put both his arms into the sleeves to draw it over him. It was a capital opportunity, and I closed behind him as if to assist him he turned to me, and as he had inst accomplished his purpose, I had finished mine. The roomal was about his neck, and in a few moments he was dead at my feet! had no time to lose so hastily stripping the band from his waist, in which there seemed to be money I dragged the body to the edge of the well, and threw it in. I then arranged his clothes at the head of the steps, as though he had taken them off to bothe and left them there his lota I left also with them and taking up his sword and shield I girded the first to my waist, and the shield to my back, and pursued my way at as quick a pace as I could. No one will imagene he has been murdered, thought I the clothes on the brink of the well will cause it to be supposed that he died in the water and I chuckled over my success and strode along joyfully But, the more to avoid detection, I struck off from the road I was travelling and seeing the groves and white temple of a village at some distance I bont my stop towards it there I purchased some goor and ate the tupounce, as a good Thug ought to do, and after that I opened the humeans to see what my good fortune had sent me.

And so you murdered the first man who had shown you any kind ness after your misfortunes. Oh, Ameer Ali, you are indeed a villain! you ato of his bread and salt, and murdered him! The ro-compense of a Thug certainly

But what could I do, sahib? I should have starved most likely had I not killed him. Beaules he was the first traveller I met after those good omens he was neither blind nor lame assuredly therefore he was bunij. It must have been his fato to die, or I should not have gone to sleep under that tree. Had I met him in the road, I should have heintacted to attack him. Indeed, unarmed as I was, I dared not have done so. But, as I was saying I examined the humeams. I found in it nineteen rapees, a gold nose-ring and two gold rings for the fingers which were worth at least forty rapees. Ul humd ul ills I cried, this is rare fortune here is enough to last me for three months, and to provide me with new olothes and it will be hard but in that time I find out some of my brethren.

I searched around the village to endeavour to find some traces of Thugs in the mange and tamarind groves by which it was environed and though I discovered some fire-places with the peculiar marks of my brethrem in them, yet they were old, the rain had more than half washed them away and the marks would have been undistinguish able to a less experienced Thing than myself. I could discover no further clue from them, though I walked for some time in the direction they pointed

Wandering along the next day, I reached Calpee on the Jumna, and sitting one morning at the shop of a pān seller, some persons stopped at it, and talking among themselves, I understood that they were going to Chutterpoor Chutterpoor, thought I,—what an owl I have been! there must be Thugs there, and I had forgotten it So I immediately determined if possible to accompany them. I watched them to a bunnea's empty shop, before which, in the street, were tied four tattoos and some bullocks, and without ceremony I told them I had overheard their conversation, that I was also going to the town to which they were journeying, and if they would allow me and pardon my intrusion, I should be glad to travel in their company, as I was alone, knew not the road, and was afraid of robbers

"Since you are alone, you may come, and welcome," said the man I addressed "But we are going by Bandah, which is not exactly in the direct road to Chutteipoor, and our business may detain us there a day or two, if, therefore, delay is of no consequence to you, come with us, you seem to be a soldier, and we are poor merchants who will be glad of your protection"

"Such as I am, good sir," said I, "I am at your service, and will gladly accompany you to Bandah"

"Good!" replied the man, "we start early, and you had better be with us betimes, or you can spread your carpet here,—as you please"

"I will do the latter," replied I, "and be with you by the evening"

Bandah! thought I; another place full of Thugs—at least it used to be I shall see in any case, and if I find any, I may then alter

my route

I joined them in the evening, as I had promised, and we reached Bandah in a few days by long marches. Here they declared they would stay four days, so that I had ample time before me to search the place for Thugs, should any reside there. Not was I disappointed in my hope of meeting them. I was sauntering through the town in the evening of the day we arrived, when I met Hoormut, an old follower of Ganesha. He did not at first recognise me, as may readily be imagined, and when I gave him our token of recognition he stared as though I had been an apparition, however, he was soon convinced of my reality, and I accompanied him to his house. The relation of my adventures and mishaps occupied a long time, and after I had finished them I naturally asked for an account of my old associate Ganesha. What I heard was gratifying to me. Hoormut declared him to be in misfortune, abandoned by his followers, and that he was wandering with one or two men somewhere in the neighbourhood of Saugor preferring the precarious chance of booty in the jungles between that place and Angpoor to frequenting the more open and travelled country. Next followed questions as to my present plans, and when he heard I was alone and travelling with merchants, of course it naturally followed that some plan should be undertaken for their destruction.

"Look you, Meer Sahib, said he I believe I can muster as many as fifteen Thugs, in and near this place. I am not suspected as yet, but the country is getting too het for us and we must either quit it or give up Thuggee, which no man, you well know can do after he has caten the goor the others are of the same way of thinking and we had determined that we would leave this place for good after the rains, and go wherever our fate might lead us.

We soon afterwards separated for the time, Hoormut promising to collect the men by the next evening

I joined him again by the time appointed and found the whole assembled. I was received with exultation, for they had wanted a leader in whom they could confide, and mine was a name which, in spite of my recent misfortunes, they could look up to. I know none of them, but they swore on the pickaxe to follow me Hoormut vouched for their several capabilities and fidelity and I was satisfied.

Our plan was soon formed. They were to go by two stages to a village they knew there they were to wait for my arrival with the merchants. Beyond the village was a favourite bhil of theirs, and they would have everything prepared against our coming up.

All this bong settled, we fixed the next morning (it bong Mon day and a lucky day) to observe the omens and open the expedition with due form. The omens were declared to be satisfactory and by noon my new companions had started with their families for their station on the read.

CHAPTER XLVI.

So farewell hope and with hope farewell foar; Parewell remores all good to me is lost. Evil, be thou my good!

Milton.

Ws strangled the merchants at the place we had fixed on them and their bullock-drivers,—nine in all, and yet we were only seventeen Things but we were desperate. In our route we had travelled towards Jhalone, and I could no longer delay my project of proceeding thither and making over my concealed treasure to the good mobils who had charge of my child. Hoormut volunteered to accompany me, and desiring the remainder of the band to make the best of their way to Calpee, and there to await our arrival, we pushed on to Jhalone

Considering the risk we ran, in approaching a place where incyitable death awaited me should I be discovered, we did well to We covered our bodies with ashes, disguise ourselves as gosaeeus matted the hair on our heads with mud, hung gourds at our waist, and in this mean and wretched disguise we entered the town—that spot where I had passed so many years of happiness, where my fairest prospects had been blighted, and the resolutions I had formed of leading a new life and forsaking Thuggee rendered alike impracticable and distasteful to me My emotions on entering the town, and more than all on passing the house where I had resided, were overpowering, but I rallied my heart I passed through the city, and my friend and myself took up our abode for the day near a well outside the gates, which was not far from the spot where I had buried my treasure We had selected the best disguise possible for my purpose, we were visited during the day by some Hindoos, who came, some out of curiosity, and a few to offer alms to us, my companion replied to their inquiries, and declared me to be under a vow of silence, which satisfied them, and they departed, leaving us to prosecute our plans

As the evening approached, I strolled towards the trees under which was deposited the sum I had hoarded up to serve me at any time of need. It was a deserted burial-place, overgrown by custard-apple bushes and other brushwood, and the rank grass had sprung up from the frequent rain. My heart beat quick as I approached the spot, my hoard might have been discovered, and if it had been removed my child would be a beggar, dependent upon the charity of strangers, she might even be thrust into the street, to herd with the vile and worthless, when the care of her became irksome or expensive to her present protectors. But anything, thought I, is better than that she should accompany me, where a life of hardship would be her portion, and where she could not escape the contamination which scenes of guilt and murder would effect in a short time, and from which, alone as I was, I could not protect her

I reached the tomb in which, by removing a stone, I had placed the vessel containing the money. I hardly dared look at the well-remembered spot, hardly dared attempt to remove the stone, but I did remove it, and, O joy of joys! there was my treasure undisturbed. I hastily seized the earthen vessel, and crawled with it into the thickest of the underwood ere I ventured to open and examine it. I had forgotten what it contained, and the contents surpassed my expectations. I found thirty ashruffees and four small bars of gold, a box containing two strings of pearls of some value and some newels, and tied up in a rag were some loose stones of value, one of them a diamond of great lastre and beauty The lowels I de termined to keep as they might be afterwards of use to me, not only from their value, but to enable me to assume the character of a dealer in precious stones, which is always a respectable calling and for which in the jewels before me I had ample stock for trade I replaced the vessel and its precious contents, which could not have been worth less than a thousand rupees and I felt my heart lightened of a load, both at seeing my treasure safe and at the assurance it gave me that by means of it my daughter would be decently provided for I returned to my companion, who had been anxiously watching my proceedings, and he too rejoiced at my good fortune

2 E

I did not proceed into the town till it was dask the enter I knew would be open until long after dark, and I went alone to avoid any chance of being remarked. I soon reached the house of the moolin when, abandoning my character of a gosacen I asked for alms in a lusty voice in the name of Moula Ali of Hyderabad. Fortunately the old moolla was sitting alone in his verandah; I saw him through the open gate, and advanced rapidly shutting it behind me Ho was engaged in reading his Koran, and was rocking himself to and fro apparently absorbed in the book before him, so that he did not observe my approach nor was he aware of my presence till I had prostrated myself before him.

Punah i Khoda! he exclaimed "what is this, a grosneen? Thou must be mad, good friend or what seekest thou with the old moolla? Speak, thou hast almost frightened me, and disturbed my meditations on the holy volume.

"Pardon, Moollajee! I cried "you see one before you who has risked his life to speak with you, and you must listen to me for a few moments. I know you well, though you do not recognise me in this disguise."

I know thee not, friend, he said "nevertheless, if I can do aught to serve thee, speak yet it is seldom that the Hindoo seeks the house of the prost of the Moslem faith and I am in astonish ment at thy garb and address." Moolla! I said, I would fain speak with thee in absolute secrecy are we secure from interruption here? Fear me not: I come with good intent, and am not what you think me, but one of thine own faith " and I repeated the Belief. Strange, most strange is this," said the old man rising doubt thee not-no one would do the old moolls harm and so, as thou requirest secrecy I will but fasten the outer gate and join thee metantly He did so, and returned. "Moolia," said I, when he was once more seated, and was prying into my face with a look of mingled emissity and wonder, "Moollajee! O Wullee Mahomed! dost thou not recognise me?"

"Thy voice is familia to mine cars," said the old man, "yet I remember not thy features. Who art thou?"

' Mine is a name which may hardly be pronounced in Jhalone," I replied, "but we are alone Have you forgotten Ameer $\Lambda h P^n$

"Punah!" exclaimed the moolla, sidling away from me to the edge of his carpet, "Punah i Khoda! do I behold that bad and a eckless man ?"

"Bad I may be. Moolly," said I quietly, "and reckless I certainly am, yet I wish you no haim You were kind to one I loved-you have my child in your house—it is of them I would speak, not of myself Tell me, for the sake of Alla, whether my child is welltell me whether she lives, and I will bless you" I gasped for breath while he replied, lest I should perchance have to hear of further misfortune

"This is madness, Ameer Ah,' said he, "know you not that your father's fate awaits you if you are discovered here?"

"I know, I know all," said I, "and I have braved everything I have sought you despite of danger—for my heart clove to my child, and I would fain hear of her Ah, friend, think not of what I was, and be merciful to me."

"Unhappy man!" he cried, "thy crimes brought with them their own reward, but I will not speak of the past Know then that thy daughter is well, but she grieves still for thee and for her mother, whom Alla in mercy removed from her sufferings before she knew her degradation"

"Shooki Khoda!" I exclaimed "Ah Alla, Thou art merciful

even to me And my child is well, and iemembers me?"

"She does, Meer Sahib, she often speaks of you, but we have told her you are dead, and she no longer thinks of you as one whom she may ever meet again "

"And you are right," said I, "you are wise in having done this May Alla repay your kindness to a deserted child, for I cannot I have sought you for a purpose which you must promise to agree to, even before I speak it—it is the only request I shall ever make for my child, and from henceforth you will never see my face again nor hear my name"

"Speak," said the moolla, "I promise nothing, Ameer Ali; thou hast deceived thousands, and the old moolla is no match for thee in deceit"

"Briefly then," said I, "there was a small treasure which I buried in a field here long ago, I have returned and found it safe. It is a trifle, yet it is of no use to me, and I would give it over to you, both as a portion for my daughter when she is married and as some provision for her until that can be effected."

The spoil of the murdered, said the old man, drawing himself can never enter the house of the moolla it would bring a curse with it, and I will have none of it Keep it yourself Ameer Ali and may Alla give you the grace to use it in regaining the honest reputation you have lost!

No no " cried I " the money was my wife a she had hearded it up for our child she brought it with her from the Dukhun, and it lins remained as she placed it in the vessel. I swear to you that it is honest money would I curso my child with the spoil of murders?

"Swear to me on the Koran that it is, and I will believe you,

Ameer Ali, but not else and he tendered me the holy book.

I raised it to my lips. I kassed it, and touched my forehead and eyes with it. I swore to what was false; but it was for my child Are you satisfied now? I asked now that you have humbled me by obliging me to swear?

I am, he replied; your trust shall be carefully and religi ously kept. Have you the money with you?"

No," said I "but I will go and return with it instantly

Admit me alone I will cough at your gate when I arriva."

I hastened to the spot I have before described I hastily seized my treasure and returned to the moolla he was waiting for me at the gate of his house and we entered it together Here is all I have," said I, pouring out the contents of the vessel on the carpet "it is not much, but it is the only portion of my wealth which remains to me.

Think not of the past, Meer Sahib, what happened was predestinated, and was the will of the All powerful!"

I have indeed no alternative but to submit, good Moolla. But my time is short, and night advances ero morning breaks, I must be far away from this, where my associates expect me One favour I would beg -it is to see my child one look will be sufficient for my soul to dwell on in after years, for I am assured that it will be the last—you will not deny me?

'I will not, Meer Sahib she is now at play with a neighbour s child in the zenama, and if you will follow mo I will show her to you One look must be sufficient for you after that she is mine, and I will be a father to her Follow me"

I did I followed him through a court-yard to the door of a second which was the entrance to his zenana. I heard the merry voices of the children, as they played with light and joyful hearts, and I could distinguish the silvery tones of my precious childs voice so like those of her mother which were now silent for ever

We will not disturb them Meer Sahib said the moolla in a whisper as he pushed open the door gently, "look in, so that you may not be seen. you will easily distinguish your daughter"

Yes, she was there, my child, my be intiful child! still delicate and fragile as she had ever been; but her face had a joyous expression, and she was as merry as those by whom she was surhounded Long long I gived, and oh, my heart yearned to rush in, and for the last time to clasp her to my bosom and bless her But I restrained myself, she would not could not have recognised ane in the disguise I wore, and I should have only needlessly alarmed and terribed her. Yet I put up a fervent prayer to Alla for her protection and happiness, and I fore myself from the spot -dejected yet entisfied that she still lived and was happy

"Enough!" said I to the moolla when we regumed the outer apartment, "I now leave you, be hand to my child, and Alla will more than repay you for aught of cure or anxiety she may cause you What I have given you will be ample for a dowry to her in marriage with any person you may select—any one who may be ignorant of her fither's shame"

"I will, and rest assured that wherever you are, whatever your after-lot in life may be you never need give one anxious thought about Meeran, for, I again repeat it, I am now her parent, and she has also found another mother"

"I believe you," said I; "and if ever I am again favoured by fortune and in a situation to come to you without shame to her, you shall take me to her and present a father to his child until then you hear not of me again"

I left him I had borne up against my feelings, I had struggled against and overcome them so long as I was with him; but as I passed his threshold the fond love of a parent would not be stifled I was overcome by bitter grief, and I sat down and wept, for I felt that I had seen my child for the last time,—and it was even so, I have never beheld her since, sahib, not ever been able to get a clue to her fate May Alla grant she is happy, and knows not of mine! But of this more hereafter

I wept 'yes, I sat at the threshold of what had been my own home and wept, yet not aloud My eyes were a fountain of tears, and they welled over their lids, and coursed down my rough visage, and fell hot upon my hands My memory was busy with the past, that period of bliss when all earthly joy was my portion, and with it wealth and fame All was gone—gone like the fleeting dream—a mockery which, gorgeous or blissful as it may be while it possesses the sleeping senses is broken. sesses the sleeping senses, is broken—even the remembrance of it lost—by awakening to reality Alla help me! I said in the bitterness of my heart at that moment; I am indeed desolate, and it matters not what becomes of me I have no hope

How long I thus sat I know not but arousing myself by a sud den thought of the danger I was in, I rose up took one long sad survey of what was once my own but which was now descried. and harrying away from the spot, I reached the gate as it was about to be shut, and soon afterwards joined my companion.

At longth we reached Calpee where we found the band and their families; and at a council of all assembled, after many plans of proceeding had been discussed and many plans proposed for our final settling place by the different members, I opened to them one of my own which I had long entertained. It was, to proceed to Lukhnow by a boat, which could be easily hired, and to remain there, as it was a city which promised an ample harvest to a Thug and from the not over-strict character of its government a more likely one than any other to emble us to pursue our calling with security The plan was agreed on and the next morning I betook myself to the Ghant, to hold communication with the mangers of the boats, and so strike a bargain for their conveyance of my party

All was arranged to the satisfaction of my associates and at the hour appointed, which had been declared a lucky moment by some astrologer employed by the boatmon the anchor was raised, and a fair wind carried us rapidly over the smooth waters.

Day after day passed in this manner and there was a kind of dreamy pleasure about the voyage which was indescribably grateful to me. Here I had no alarms, no fatiguing journeys, no anxiety

my mind became calm and unruffled and I was once more at peace. At Lukhnow we lived for some time upon the proceeds of our last booty and I established a small traffic in pregions stones upon those I had brought with me; but it yielded small returns to me and I only delayed commencing operations till I could fix upon some settled plans. I had erred deeply in leaving my own country needs must have left it, I ought to have gone to the Dakhun there I should have succeeded I should have rusen,-for the Dukhun Thugs required leaders, and, as you may have heard whenever a Hindostan Jemadar led them, they behaved well and became the terror of the country Here, I was in a place of which I was agnorant, and I dared not venture to take to the reads. At length I thought I would attempt the same system we had practised so successfully at Hyderabad. No sconer had the idea possessed me than I longed to put it into execution the more so as my associates received it with ardour and seemed strongly convinced of its practicability We were unknown in that growded and victors city hved m an obscure part, and could never be suspected in our daily perambulations through the basars in search of bunn And so it turned out we were in great luck for two months, money flowed m upon us, and we had killed upwards of thirty persons, mostly travellers to distant parts, whom we decoyed from the serais, and as we succeeded, I had more money at my disposal and was enabled to bribe several of the serai-keepers, and, by allowing them to participate to a large amount in our gains, I secured admission to the serais, and had facilities of speaking with travellers which I should never have enjoyed had I neglected to secure their goodwill But fortune was against me despite of this cheering commencement, and we did not long enjoy our easy and profitable career

We had one day taken out of the city a party of seven travellers, we being sixteen Thugs in number I well remember it was a Friday, an unlucky day at best Among the Thugs was an old man, one of the old Murnae stock, a capital bhuttote, who had joined us a short time before, he had known my father, and me when a child, and had recognised me in a street in Lukhnow, which led to his joining us We had taken the travellers to a favourite bhil of ours about four coss distant, and were in the act of strangling them, -some even lay dead on the ground, and the rest were in their last agonies,—when by the merest chance a body of horse, which were on their way from the city to a distant pergunnah, came upon us We had grown too confident from our frequent success,—it was still far from moining, and we had neglected to place scouts The horse came upon us unheard and unseen, and, as I have told you, caught us in the very act Nine of us were seized after a faint resistance, the rest, fortunate men! made their Our hands were bound behind us and we were dragged into the city, objects of wonder and terror to the inhabitants. The bodies were brought in after us, and two of the travellers who had been only half strangled, and were revived by the horsemen, gave so clear an account of our whole proceedings, how we had inveigled them and accompanied them on their march till we attacked them unawares, that no doubt remained of our guilt, and after our brief trial had been concluded before the kazee, we were cast into prison, to await our fate The old Thug and myself had been bound together, and we were in this state thrust into one of the narrow cells of the jail There we were told we should remain till the pleasure of the king was known regarding us.

OHAPTER XLVII

The sigh of long imprisonment, the step Of feet on which the iron clanked the grean Of death, the improcation of despair

Dyron.

Queen.—O speak to me no more!
Thy words like daggers enter in mine cars

Hamlet Act III. Bo 4

AGIN I was in prison and although not in such wretched plight as I had been at Jhalone, for the cell was roomy and tolerably clean, yet still it was a prison,—confinement to my limbs and to my spirit a conviction which threatened my life lung over me and as I saw no prospect of escape I was resigned to die, and to meet my fate like a man and a Thing who lad been familiar with death from his childhood. We sat in silence, and my wretched companion old as lie was, clung to the idea of life with a fondness that I felt not Ho had no ties on earth to bind him to it, he had never lad any yet he longed to live I had possessed them,—they were all broken, and hife had no charms for me. I could not say that I wished for death, but I was indifferent to my fate

A week passed thus—a long, interminable week. In vain was it that I implored my judiers to relieve me from suspense, to tell me whother I was to live or die either they knew not, or their hearts were hardened towards me-they would not tell me.

But after the expiration of this period, we were not long ignorant of our sentence. We were informed that seven of our companions had been hanged, as they had been detected in the act of strangling travellers. But there was no oridence against us so conclusive the merchants who had escaped the fate of their associates could not swear that we had murdiered any of those who had perished and the horsemen who had captured us know no more than that we were of the party. If this had been all, we should probably have been released but one of the miserable nen who had been exceuted, in a vain attempt to preserve his life, confessed his crimes and by this last stroke of ill fortune we were convicted, and the decree went forth that we were to be imprisoned for hife

Depair sensed on my faculties at the announcement of this hard sentence. Death in its most horrible shape would have been courted joyfully by me in preference to it. To linger out years and years in that wretched hole, never to be free again! I could not believe it I tried to shut out the dreadful reality from my mind, but in vain. I implored that they would lead me to instant execution, that I might be impeded, or blown away from a gun, or hung—anything rather than have my miserable emittence protracted in the solitude and suffering of a prison But my entreaties were laughed at or scorned I was loaded with a heavy chain, which confined my legs, my companion the same, and we were left to our fate Still my restless spirit held out to me hopes of escape,—hopes that only mocked me, for every plan I formed became utterly impracticable, and this only increased my misery. One day I bethought me of the money I had collected before I was seized. It was hidden, and it was not improbable that my hoard had remained undiscovered. With this I fondly hoped I should be enabled to bribe one of my jailers, and the idea comforted me for many days, while I waited for an opportunity to put in into execution

There was one among the guards of the prison, a young man, who was always kinder in his deportment to us than any of the others The food he brought us was better, and the water always pure, and in a clean vessel He used to cheer us too sometimes with the hope that our imprisonment would not last so long as had been decreed, and he instanced the cases of several criminals who had been sentenced like us, but who had been released when the memory of their crimes had ceased to occupy the minds of the officers in charge of the prison He had our clothes washed for us, and did a thousand kind acts—trifles perhaps, but still more than we experienced from any other of his companions

It was with him, therefore, that I proposed to my fellow-captive to try our long-brooded and cherished scheme of deliverance The next time it was his turn to attend us, I begged he would come to the cell at night or in the evening, when he would be secure from observation, for that I had something particular to communicate to He came in the evening of that day, and seated himself, muffled in a dark-coloured blanket, close to the bars of our cell

"You have something to say, I think," said he in a low tone, "and I have done your bidding, I am here"

"I have, good Meer Sahib," said I (for he was also a syud), "listen, for what I would communicate to you will be for your benefit, if you will enter into my plans"
"Say on," replied the youth, "you may command my utmost

"To be brief, then," I continued, "you must endeavour to effect oui escape"

"It is impossible," he said
"Not so," cried I, "nothing is impossible to willing hands and stouthearts You can manage everything if you will but listen to me When we were apprehended, we had saved a round sum of money, which is concealed in a spot I can tell you of, if you will be faithful to us Half of it shall be yours, if you will only aid us "How much is it?" he asked

"Unwards of five hundred rupees, said I 'it was securely hidden and no one can have discovered it. I repeat, half of it shall be yours if you will assist us.

"How can I? cried he, in a tone of perplexity ' how is it possible that you can pass these doors and walls, even were you as free as I am at this moment?

"Leave that to me, said I "do you accept the offer?"

"I will consider of the matter and will be here at this time tomorrow to give you a final answer" May Alla send you kind thoughts to the distressed! We shall look for your decision with impatience."

The next evening he came at the same time and seated himself as hoforo.

"What would you have me do Meer Schib? he asked ready to obey your commands if they are practicable First how over I must be secure of the money you have mentioned I must receive it before I peril my situation, and, more than that, my life in your behalf

"Liston then, Meer Sahib, said I I trust you,—you are a synd and I also am one you dare not deceive me, and mear the wrath of Alla.

I will not, by the Prophet, whose descendant I am, said he were the Koran in my hands this moment, I would swear upon it.

"No no," said I, "do not swear; the word of an honest man is far more binding than an oath. I believe that you are true, and therefore it is that I trust you. First, then, as regards the money do you remember two old tombs, one of them much broken, which stand near the river a brink over the north side of the city about a cannon shot from the walls?

"I do perfectly
"Then, I continued, "in that broken one is an carthon vessel, containing the money the vault where of old the body of the person over whom the tomb was creeted was deposited, can be opened by removing four stones, which are loose, from the eastern side of it they are neither large nor heavy and you can manage the matter alone. In the cavity you will find the vessel, and the money is in it. I shall require half for my expenses. Now all I ask you for the present to do in return is, to procure us two small and sharp files and some ghee and when we have cut through our chains, and one of these bars, I will tell you how you can aid us further
"I will perform all you wish," said the youth and, Inshalls!

you shall have the files to-morrow night by this time, if I find that your statement about the money is true

He then left us, and we anxiously and impatiently awaited his coming the next day Nor did he disappoint us.

"I have come, as you see, Meer Sahib," he said; "and, behold, here are the files for you—they are English, and new and sharp, here too is the glee — I have fulfilled my promise"

"And the money " I asked

"Without it you would not have seen me to-night, I can tell you, Meer Sahib I have got it, the amount is five hundred and fifty rupees, and you shall be welcome to your share when you have got out of this hole And how do you intend to manage this part of your scheme?"

"Are the gates of the prison shut at night?" I asked

"No," he replied, "that is, the gate is shut, but the wicket is always open"

"And how many men guard it?"

"Only one, Meer Salub, the rest sleep soundly after midnight "

"It is well," said I, "we can but perish in the attempt, and I for one would gladly die, rather than linger out a wretched existence here"

"And I also," said my companion

"I fear I cannot assist you," said the man, "yet stay, suppose you were to attempt your escape when I am on guard. I shall have the last watch to-morrow night"

"May the blessing of Alla rest on you!" said I, "you have anticipated my thoughts We will attempt it then, and may the Prophet aid us All night we will work at our irons and one of these bars, and to-morrow night we shall be free Go, kind friend, you do but risk detection in being seen here"

He left us, and we set to work with a good will to cut the irons on our legs and the bar All night we worked, and the morning's light saw the iron bar nearly cut through at the top and bottom, to cut it at the top, one of us sat down by turns, while the other, standing on his shoulders, filed till his arm was tired. Despite of the ghee however, the files made a creaking noise, we tried to prevent this by using them slowly, but in the excitement of the moment this was at times forgotten, for we worked hard for our liberty

The morning broke and we rested from our labour, one strong shake would have separated the bar, and our mons were so nearly cut through at the ankles and the waist, that a slight wrench would have divided them. Our friend we knew was faithful, for he had proved himself so, and we enjoyed a silent anticipation of our eventual triumph.

"This time to-morrow," I exclaimed, "we shall be free, far from Lukhnow, and the world again before us, wherein to choose a residence!"

My companion was as full of hope as I was, and we passed most of the morning in delating whither we should go, and calling to mind the names of our former associates who would welcome us and join us in seeking now adventures. It was about noon, I think, that a party of the soldiers of the prison, headed by the darogha, approached our cell. My heart sank within me as I saw them coming and the haste with which they advanced towards us increased my alarm and apprehension. We are lost! and I to my companion they have discovered our plans. He did not reply, but despair was written on his countenance

The dategha applied his key to the lock at was opened, and the whole party rushed in and seared us.

"What new tyranny is this? I exclaimed "what new crime have we committed, that we are again to be ill treated?"

"Look to their irons! cried the darogha to his mon.

"You have been busy it seems, said he to us, when they found them in the state I have described. Let me give you a piece of advise when you next file your irons, either use more ghee or make less noise. But you will hardly have another opportunity I think. Search them well, continued he to the men see where these in struments are which they have used so cleverly"

They stripped us stark naked, and the files were found in the bands of our trousers through which the string that ties them runs.

The darogla examined them carefully

"These are now Moer Sahib, and English. Inshalla! we will find out who supplied you with them. The fellow who has done this assuredly has outen durt.

We brought them here with us," said I doggodly "Ye were sons of asses that ye did not search us when we entered your den of tyranny

We may be sons of asses, he replied granning but we are not such owls as to believe you, O wise and canning Synd Thug as you are, we are not going to eat dirt at your hands. Some friend you have had among my men one is suspected and if these filter can help us to trace him—and it is probable enough—he had better say the Kulma, for his head and shoulders will not long remain to gether. But come, said he to his men, your work is only half done examine every foot of those lata; for my worthy friends here, rely upon it, have not half done their business."

They obeyed him, and as you may suppose, soon found the bar which had been cut.

"Enough! said the daroghs. "You were a fool, O Mear Sahib, for this wild attempt. Had you been content to bear your deserved impresonment, meroy might in time have been shown to you; but now give up all hope you have forfeited that mercy by your own impredence, and you will long live to repent it. Bring them along " and he to his men, " we must put them into narrower and safer lodgings"

Yn Alla Salub, what a place they led us to ! A narrow passage between two high walls, which but met admit it of a man's passing along it, contained, about half was down two cells, more like the dens of wild beasts than anoth the . They were more strongly grated than the last we had been in, and were not half the size I in heavier irons than those we had bet worn were fistened on our legs by a black-mith, and we were thing tanto our horrable abodes.

"Now," and the datogles, "get out if you can Meer Salah. If walls and iron bus can hold you, you are pretty sate here, I think "

They left us and once more we were estimate the abyse of despine, nor was there one my of hope left to theer our gloomy and wretched thoughts. Here am I to live, here am I to die, thought I, as I surveyed the narrow chamber,— I who have round for year over the world, I who have never known restrant. Alla! Alla! what have I done that this should be? O Bhowance, hast thou so utterly forsaken Amer Ah? I cast myself down on the rough floor, and ground magons. I could not weep, tears were denied me, they would have soothed my overburdened soul. A cup of misery was before me, and I was to drain it to the diegs. Hope had fled, and despin had seized and benumbed every faculty of my mind.

Months rolled on Though only a strong grating of non bars divided me from my old compinion, we seldom spoke to each other; at most it was a word, a passing remark hazarded by the one, and scarcely heeded by the other, so absorbed were we in our misery. I ate and drank mechanically, I had no eraving for food, and what they gave us to eat was of the coar-est kind. The filth which accumulated in our cells was removed only once a week, and it hied vermin which sorely termented us. Oh that I could die! I cried a thousand times a day. Alas! my prayer was not granted. The second year of our captivity passed—the same unvarying

The second year of our captivity passed—the same unvarying rotation of misery,—no change, no amelioration of our condition. We existed, but no more, the energies of life were dead within us I used to think, were I ever released, that I could not bear the rude bustle of the world, that I should even prefer my captivity to its anxieties and cares. It was a foolish thought, for I often yearned for freedom, and occupied my mind with vain thoughts and plans for future action, should any lucky chance give me my liberty, but no ray of hope broke in upon the misery of my dangeon

I mean not to say that my companion, the old Thug, and I never conversed, we did so now and then, we recounted our exploits again and again, and by thus iccalling mine to my memory, from the beginning of my career, I stored up in my mind the adventures and vicisatudes I have related to you. One day we had been talking of my father and his parting words to me 'I am not your father flashed across my thoughts. I mentioned the circumstance to the old Thug and carnestly requested him to tell me what he know of Ismail, and of my early state.

What's he asked, 'so you know not of it Meer Sahib? Surely Ismail must have told you all? And yet continued he after a pause "he would not have done it—he dared not.

Whint can you mean cried I by saying he dared not? Was I his son, or did he say truly when he declared I was not?"

'Ho spoke the truth, Meer Sahib. I know your origin, and it is just possible there may be one or two others who do also, and who are still living one of these is Ganesha.

'Ganesha! I exclaimed "by Alla! my soul has over told mo that he knew something of me I have striven in vain to bring any scene in which he was concerned with me to my recollection and always failed By your soul! tell me who and what I was.

"Tu a long tale, Ameer Ali, said the old man, but I will en doayour to remember all I can of it, it is one too which, were you not what you are, would hornly you.'

"My parents were mardered than P and I, my heart sinking within me. I have sometimes thought so, but my conjectures were yearne and massinfactory

You have guessed truly Meer Sahib But listen, my momory as still fresh, and you shall know all.

"Ismail, your father as he called himself to you, became a Ting under Hoosen Jemadar whom no doubt you remember I wall recollect the day he jouned us, at a village not very far from Debh. I was then a youth, and belonged to the band of which Hoosem was one of the best bluttotes.

"I know Ismail a history" said I "he related it to me.

"Then I need not repeat it," he contained. In time Ismail, by his bravery and wisdom, rose far above Hoosem, and became the jamadar of a band of thirty Tings. It is of this time I would speak. We were one day at a village called Eklera, in Malwa, en camped outside the place, in a grove of trees near a well. We had been unlinely for some time before, as it was the season of the rains, when but few travellers are abroad, and we were cagerly looking for burn!

Ismail and Gauceba, had been into the bear and returned with the joyful news that a party was about to set off towards Indoor and that we were to precede them by a march, and halt when ever we thought them secure to us. I and another Thing were directed to watch their movements, while the main body went on. The information was correct, and we dogged them till the third or fourth march, when at a village, whose name I forget, we found the band halted, and rejoined it. The party consisted of a respectable man and his wife and child an old woman, and some young men of the village who accompanied them. The man rode a good horse, and his wife travelled in a palankeen. They were your parents, Meer Salub.

"Go on," said I in a house voice, "my memory seems to follow your narration" O salish! I was fearfully interested and excited "Well' continued he "not long after they had arrived, Ismail

"Well' continued he "not long after they had arrived, Ismail and Ganesha went into the bizar, diresed in their best clothes, to scrape an acquaintance with your father, and, as Ismail told us afterwards, this was effected through you. He saw you playing in the streets, gave you some sweetments, and afterwards rescued you from the violence of some of the village boys, who would have robbed you of them. This led to his speaking with your mother, and eventually to his becoming acquainted with your father. The end of all was, that they agreed to accompany us, and dismissed the young men by whom they had been previously attended. Does your memory aid you now, Meer Sahib, or shall I finish the relation?"

"It does," said I, "most vividly as you proceed But go on, without your assistance, I lose the thread of my said history." He resumed

"Ismail in those days always rode a good horse, as also did Ganesha. He grew fond of you and you of him, and he used to take you up before him and carry you most part of the march, or till you became fatigued. This went on for some days, but we were approaching Indoor, and it was necessary to bring the matter to a close, besides, our capidity was strongly excited by the accounts we heard from Ismail of your father's wealth, as he had told him that he carried a large sum of ready money with him. At last the bhil was determined,—I could show it you now: it was close to a river, and, before the party had crossed, the jhinnee was given. We strangled them all. Ganesha killed your mother, the old woman was allotted to me, Ismail had his share also, and I believe it was your father. You had been riding upon Ismail's horse all the morning, at least after the rain had ceased, and when the jhinnee was given you were half across the river, I saw you fall, and as you did not move afterwards, I thought you were killed. You moved, however, and Ganesha ran towards you he threw the roomal about your neck, and was in the act of strangling you, when Ismail, who had uttered a cry of despair on seeing Ganesha's action, arrived just in time to prevent his deadly purpose. They had a serious quarrel about you, and even drew their swords, but Ismail prevailed, and led you to where the bodies were lying and being stripped by the lughaees.

You became frantic when you saw your mother; you clung to her body and could hardly be torn from it; you mired and cursed us all but terror overcame you at last and perhaps pain also for you famted. Ismail, when the bodies had been disposed of, and the plander collected, mounted his horse and took you up before him and turning off the road, we travelled in another direction

"How you over bore that journey I know not you were a thin and delicate child and we all said you would do but you bore it well, and when we reached a place in the jungle, I was sent to a village for milk, and you drank some. Here again Ismail and Ganesha had a second quarrel about you Ganesha said that you were too old to adopt, that you would remember all that had happened, and that how would strangle you and the abuse that you poured upon him made him still more savage. Again they drow their swords, and would have fought about you but we prevented thom.

You were taken away by me to a distance I rubbed your swellen neck, and Ismail gave you a strong dose of opium, which put you to sleep, and we again resumed our flight.

Ganesha and he were never cordinal friends after that day; they never acted in concert again until, as I heard, in your last expedition and though they preserved an outward show of civility to each other their hate was as strong as ever

"Izmail took you to his home. He was married, but had no children and as you grow up and improved under his kind and fatherly treatment, he became proud of you, and used often to say to us that he regrotted your father had left your sister behind when he undertook his fathl journey to Indoor

' My mater!" cried I, in an agony of apprehension.

Yes, Meer Salub your nator I, for one, heard your father say that he left her behind, as she was too young to be moved. You might get news of her at Eklera if you over get out of this cursed.

But he now spoke to one bereft of sense—of any feeling save that of choking, withering blighting agony. Why did not my heart strings crack in that moment? Why did I live to drag a load of remores with me to my grave?

Yet it has even been so I live and I have borne my misery as best I could. To most I appear onlin and cheerful, but the wound rankles in my heart and could you but know my sufferings, sahih, you would perhaps pity me. Not in the daytime is my mind disturbed by the thoughts of the past it is at night, when all is still around me, and alseep falls not upon my weary cyclids, that I see again before me the form of my unfortunate sitter again I fancy my hands busy with her beautiful neck, and the vile piece of cour for which I killed her seems again in my grasp as I tore it from her warm bosom. Sahib, there is no respite from these hideous thoughts, if I eat opium—which I do in large quantities, to produce a temporary oblivion—I behold the same scene in the dreams which it causes, and it is distorted and exaggerated by the effects of the drug. Nay, this is worse to bear than the simple reality, to which I sometimes become accustomed, until one vision more vivid than its predecessors again plunges me into despair of its ever quitting me

Sahib, after that fatal relation, I know not what I did for many days. I believe I laved, and they thought me mad, but my mind was strong and not to be overthrown. I recovered, though slowly, and again and again I retraced in my memory the whole of my life till that miserable day on which I murdered my sister! It could have been no other

I tried in vain to cheat myself into the belief that it was another, but no effort that I made could shake the conviction that it was she. My unaccountable recollection of Eklera, the relation of my father's death by the old man there, his almost recognition of me, and, more than all, the old and worthless coin for which I destroyed her, and which I now remembered perfectly,-all were undeniable proofs of my crime, and conviction, though I tried to shut it out, entered into my soul, and abode there Alla help me, I was a wretched being! My hair turned grey, my form and strength wasted, and any one who had seen me before I listened to the old Thug's tale would not have recognised me two months afterwards A kind of burning fever possessed me, my blood felt hot as it coursed through my veins, and the night, oh, how I dreaded it! I never slept except by day, when exhausted nature claimed some respite night, for months and months, I either solled to and fio on my miserable pallet, or sat up and locked myself, groaning the while in remorse and anguish No other act of my life rose up in judgment against me-none but that one, I tried even to think on others, but they passed from my mind as quickly as they entered it, and my sister was ever before me

You know the worst, sahib—think of me as you will, I deserve it I cannot justify the deed to myself, much less to you, and the only consolation I have—that it was the work of fate, of unerring destiny—is but a weak one, that gives way before the conviction of my own guilt—I must bear my curse, I must wither under it—I pray for death, and as often too pray that I may hive, and that my measure of punishment may be allotted to me here, that my soul may not burn in Jehanum—I may now as well bring my history to a close, to the time when, by accepting your boon of life, I became dead to the world would fain have had him deny the tale he told me of my father's destruction, but he would not; he was dying when I arged him to do so and again declared in the most solean manner that what he had related was true in every particular and again he referred me to Ganesha, my roother's murderer for confirmation of the whole.

My old companion died in the fourth year of our captivity

He died and I was left to solitude to utter solitude which was only broken by the daily visit of my jailer who brought me food and attended me during a short walk up and down the passage This favour alone had I exterted after these years of misery and it was grateful to me to stretch my cramped limbs, and again to feel the pure air of heaven breathe over my wasted features.

The seventh year had half passed the daregia of the jail was dead or had been removed another supplied his place and some amelioration of my condition ensued. I was removed from the lonely cell into one near where I had been first confined it was more spaceous and airy and people passed to and fro before it. I used to witch their motions with interest, and thus in some degree diverted my mind from brooding over the past

In the twelfth year of my imprisonment the old king died, and his successor the late monarch ascended the musinud. Many a heart best quickly and with renowed hope—hope that had almost died within the hearts of those wretches who were immured within the walls—and of mme among the rest. We had heard that it was customary to release all who had been sentenced to perpetual imprisonment and you can hardly imagine, salish, the intense anxiety with which I looked for the time when the mandate should be issued for our release, or when I should no longer dare to lope.

It came at last after some days of weary expectation, the order reached the darcpia, and it was quickly conveyed to me I was brought forth, the chains were knocked off my legs and I was free. Five rupees were given to me, and a suit of coarse clothes in place of those which lung in rags about my person. After more than twelve weary years I assued from those prison walls, and was acrain thrown upon the world to seek my fortune.

Beware Meer Sahib, said the darogha, as he presented me with the money beware of following your old profession you are old, your blood no longer flows as it used, and what you have been you should forget. Go! follow some penceful calling and fortune may yet smile upon you.

I thanked him and departed I reamed through the city till inght-fall, and after satisfying my hunger at the shop of a blutteare, I begged from him shelter for the night. It was readily granted and I lay down and empyed the first quiet and refreshing sleep I had known for years. I arcse with the dawn and went forth,—whither I cared not—all places in the wide world seemed alike to me I knew no one, I could find no one who knew me in that large city, and I felt the desolation of my condition press heavily upon me What to do, or whither to go, I knew not, but a faint hope that I might discover some of my old associates if I could reach Bundelkhund impelled me to travel thither

A change in my dress was soon effected. From a kalundur fakeer I purchased a high felt cap and a chequered garment for a small sum, and thus equipped, with a staff in my hand, I left the city by the north gate, and travelled onwards

It was as I thought I was never without a meal, though it might be of the coarsest food, and when I reached Jhalone, my little stock of money was nearly as large as when I had left Lukhnow I went direct to the house of the moolla, for my thoughts were ever with my daughter, and my soul yearned to know her fate Alas! I was disappointed His house was inhabited by another, whom I knew not, and all he could tell me was that the old man had gone to Dehli, he believed, some years before, and that he had not heard any tidings of him since I asked after his daughters, but the man knew nothing of them, except that one he had adopted had been married in Jhalone to a person who resided in a village of the country, but of his name or direction he was ignorant

I turned away from the door,—I dated not pass my own, and I withdrew to an obscure part of the town where there was a small garden in which a fakeer usually resided. Him I had known of old, he had eaten of my bread and received my alms, and now I was his equal. He will not recognize me, thought I, in this dress, and changed as I am no one knows me, I will seek him, however, and if he is as he used to be, I may learn some news of my old friends

I found the fakeer I sought, old I had left him, he was now aged and infirm, his garden, which he had always kept with scrupulous neatness, was overgrown with weeds and neglected, and he had barely strength remaining to crawl about the town for the small supply of flour or grain which sufficed for his daily wants. I was much shocked to see him thus, and representing myself to be a wandering kalundur desirous of remaining in Jhalone, I begged to be allowed to reside and share with him whatever I got. My offer was readily accepted, and there I took up my abode, in the hope that some wandering party of Thugs might pass Jhalone, to whom I could disclose myself

Gradually I discovered myself to the old man I led him to speak of old times and of persons by allusion to whom he must know I was a Thug He did not hesitate to speak of them, and in particular of myself, whose fate he mourned with such true grief that I could control myself no longer, and to his wondering ear I related the whole of my adventures, from the time I had been released by the rajali, to the period of my taking up my abode with him And much had I to hear from him in return, much that distressed and grieved me: many of my old companions were dead others had been seized and executed, and hardly one of the old leaders of Bundelkhund were in the country or in the exercise of their voca tion new leaders had sprang up, and he spoke in warm terms of a young man named Feringhea, who, when I had last seen him was a mere boy

Four months passed thus. To support the old falcer as well as myself, I was obliged to perambulate the town daily and I asked and received alms, given in the meanest portions, in the place where my hand had over been open to the poor A sad change in my fortune sahib! yet I bore up against it with resignation, if not with fortitude, hoping for better days and new adventures

Now adventures, Ameer Alt! I exclaimed had not the punish ments you had received turned your heart from Thuggeo?

No, sahib! cried the Thug with fervour why should they? had not my heart become hardened by oppression and musery? They had aroused within me a spirit of revenge against the whole human race I burned to throw off my wretched disguise and again take to the road-it mattered not whether as a leader or a subordinate so that I could once more be a Thug Nor was I old true, my beard had become graziled and grey and care had scamed my countenance with many wrinkles but I was still strong and powerful, and my hands had not forgotten their cunning Four months, I have said had elapsed, and as no Thugs came near Jhalone, I set off with a few rupees I had saved from the produce of my daily alms, for Tearce, where I hoped to meet the brahmin astrologer who had so materially aided me in the affair of the pearl merchant. His share of that booty had been duly remitted to him immediately on my arrival at Jhalone and though I had never heard from him after wards, yet I felt assured that the letter could not have miscarried.

I reached Tearce after many days I know that bands of Thurs were abroad, for I saw their fire-places and marks at many villages and upon the roads but I met with none, to my disappointment and on my arrival I hastoned at once to the temple, where I found the brahmin and, notwithstanding my minfortunes, I was kindly nay warmly welcomed. The brahmm still kept up his connection with Thugs, and I learned from him to my joy that a bend, under a jamadar named Ramdeen, about twenty in number had passed through the town only the day before, and were on their road towards the Nerbudda.

You can easily overtake them Meer Sahib, he said "and if your old fame as a leader fails in procuring you a welcome reception, a few lines from me may aid you. And he wrote a note to the jemadar, informing him who I was, and how I had been connected with him of old. I did not long delay after I had received it, and again set off in search of my future companions. I came up with them on the second day, and warm indeed was the welcome I received, one and all were amazed to see me, whom they had long thought dead. I was clothed in decent raiment by them, admitted as one of their band, and treated as a brother. Truly their kindness was refreshing to my almost withered heart. Ramdeen insisted that I should take an equal rank with him in the band, and after the necessary ceremonics. I resumed my roomal, and in a few days.

again ate the goor of the tupounce

Sahib, you must by this time be weary of my adventures with travellers, and I met with none during my connection with Ramdeen's party worthy of relation. We avoided the Company's territories and kept to those of Sindia, penetrating as far as Boorhanpoor, and on our return visiting the shrine of Oonkar Manduttee, on the Nerbudda. From this latter place we were fortunate in enticing a party of pilgrims, and a large booty fell into our hands at the bottom of the Jam Ghat, whither we escorted them on their return to Oojem. Upwards of four hundred rupees was my share of this so again you see me independent and fortune smiling upon me. But Ramdeen became jealous of me, and of my superior skill and intelligence. We had many quarrels, and at last I left him and determined, with what I had, to travel to the Dukhun, and to seek my fortune in the Nizam's country, where I knew that Thuggee still flourished unchecked

But it was fated not to be so My road from where I left Ramdeen lay through Saugor, and there I met with my old acquaintance Ganesha, at the head of a small band, apparently in wretched plight I could but ill dissemble my feelings of abhorrence at meeting with him, my own misfortunes and history and the tale of my companion in imprisonment were fresh in my recollection, nevertheless I disguised the dislike I felt, though ievenge still rankled in my heart, and I would gladly have seized an opportunity to satisfy it Among his band was a Thug I had known in former days, he was weary of Ganesha, whose temper was not improved by age, and he advised me to put myself at the head of a few men he could point out to me who would be faithful, and who, he thought, would prove the nucleus of a large band, for my name was still fresh in the memory of the older Thugs, who would gladly flock to me when they heard I was determined to set up for myself without connection with others he was right; in a few months I was at the head of forty men, and we were fortunate Taking a new direction we passed through the territories of the Rewah Rajah, returning to our home, which we fixed in a village not far from Hindia, in a wild and unfrequented tract, where we were secure from treachery and from the operations against the Thugs then being carried on from Sauger

Two years passed in this manner and I was content, for I was, as I wished to be, powerful and actively employed. Two seasons we went out and returned laden with plunder and the name of Ameer All was again known and feared Another season and it shall be my last, said I I had discovered some clue to my daughter and thought (vain idea!) if I could only collect a few thousand rupees, that I could dare to seek her to live near her and to abandon Thug gee for ever Why was I thus infatuated? what else could it have been but that inexerable fate forbade it? The destiny which had been marked out for me by Alla I was to fulfil and I blindly strove The vain purposes of man urge him to pursue some plantom of his imagination, which is nover overtaken but which leads him on often by smooth paths and buoyed up by hope, till he is suddenly precipitated into destruction.

I had planned an expedition, on a larger scale than over towards Calcutta, and we had sworn to Bhowance to pay our devotions at her shrines of Bindachul and Calcutta the omens were favourable and we left our home in joy and high excitement. And what cared I then, though I know that the English had set a price of five hundred rupees upon mo? It was a proof that I was dreaded and feared, and I rejoiced that Ameer Ali, the oppressed and despised for a time had again emerged from his obscurity and I braved the danger which threatened me. I was a fool for this, yet it was my destiny that impelled me and of what avail would have been precautions, even had I taken any? I knew that treachery could not reach me where I was, and I trusted to my apparently lasting new run of good fortune, and to the omens with which our expedition had begun, to escape apprehension in the districts of the Company s territories, where operations against Thugs were being carried on with much success.

Saugor lay directly in the route which we proposed taking and it was here that the greatest danger was to be apprehended. I might have avoided it, perhaps, but I trusted to the celerity and secrecy of my movements for a few days until we should pass it and as my band were unanimous in refusing to change the route after it had been determined on and annotioned by favourable omens, I under took to lead them at all hazards. We travelled by night therefore, and avoided all large villages, reating either in waste spots or near miserable hamlets. Nor did we seek for bunil,-the danger was too imminent for any time to be lost; and though one or two persons died by our hands, yet this was rather to enable us to eat the goor of the tupounce, and to perform such ceremonies as were absolutely necessary for the proputation of our patroness, and our consequent success.

CONCLUSION.

Pistol —Trust none, For oaths are straws, men's faiths are wafer-cakes. And Hold-fast is the only dog, my duck Therefore, Caveto be thy counsellor!

Henry V Act 11, Sc 2

SAUGOR, I have said, lay directly in our route, and we reached a village close to it on the evening of a day of severe travel We were fatigued already, but the town was now so close to us that we did not hesitate to push on, and we arrived at the well-known spot shortly after dark Selecting an empty shed in as lonely a part of the town as we could, we cooked a hasty meal and lay down, determined to rise before dawn and again pursue our journey One of our number was set to watch ere we retired to rest, and we depended upon him to give us warning should any suspicious person be ob-

The night passed, and I arose, roused my followers, and long before day had dawned we were beyond the gates of the town said I to my friend, "our much-dreaded danger is past, we are now again on our way, and we shall leave this spot at least ten coss behind us before noon, beyond that there is nothing to fear, and we shall travel with light hearts" Alas! I spoke as my sanguine hope prompted me to do, but it was not fated to be as we thought Again treachery had been at work, and when I conceived I possessed a band free from all suspicion, two traitors, as I afterwards heard, had already laid a deep plan for my apprehension Of this however I will tell you hereafter, you are now with us on the road, and you see us urging our course with the utmost speed

Already had we lost sight of the town, and before us was a broad, well-beaten road, which I well remembered, yet I feared so public a route, and determined to strike off into a bye-path as soon as I could see one which diverged in the direction we were going have proceeded a coss or two perhaps, and the day was now beginning to dawn, a nulla was before us a short distance, and as none of us had washed before leaving the town, I proposed that we should perform our ablutions there, the better to enable us to sustain the latigue of the stage before us. My proposal was agreed to, and when we reached the running stream, one and all ungirded their loins and sat down by the water, we had not been engaged thus for more than a few minutes when a sudden rush was made upon us by a number of horse and foot soldiers, who must have been lying in wait for us on the road we were to travel

I had left my weapons at some little distance from the water, and my first impulse was to endeavour to possess myself of them, but in thus I was foiled Two of my own men threw themselves upon me and held me, and as I vanily struggled to free myself some footsoldiers seased me I was thrown down and bound The surprise was not complete A few of my band drew their swords, and some blows were exchanged between them and the party who had como upon us, and a few of my Thugs were wounded; but we were all everyowered, and the whole affair was concluded in less time than it requires to relate it only a few of my men escaped.

Bitterly did I upbraid the men who had prevented my getting at my neapons. Had I but possessed them, Ameer Ah would nover have been taken alive I would have sold my life dearly sahib, and sooner than have been sexued I would have plunged my sword into my heart, and ended a life which had no charms for me, and which I only wubbed to prolong to wreak vengeance on mankind, the source of all my misery

As I royaled them they mocked and jeered at me Where is now your journey to Calcutta, O Meer Sahib? said one; "behold, the long travel is saved thee, and thou att returning to Sangor to live no fine house and to keep company with many old friends who are in it. Yes, said the other the grandars day is past, and his wit descrited him when he must needs approach the den of the tiger as if he would not be smelt ent! Why didst then come to Sangor O Jemadar? Hadst then forgotten the promise of reward and free pardon which was offered for thy apprehension? Truly we have done a good deed "said he to the other and the Sahib-logue will be beleased with us.

But their idle talk was silenced by the lender of the party who warned them to be careful, and not to boast, lest their expectations should not be realized and they strank behind, unable to bear the glances of soorn and contempt works were cast on them by all by all, I say for even the soldiers who had sensed as oursed the means of their success for having been treacherous and unfaithful to the salt they had caten.

And thus, in latter agony of spirit, and indulging vain regrets at my sonseless imprudence in approaching Sangor they led me, bound and guarded, by the road I had just travelled, free then as the morning breeze which played on me. For the third time I was a prisoner and new I sew no hope I had retained some on each of the former occasions, but it all vanished now. Then I was young and a young heart is always buoyant and self-comforting but the fire of my spirit had long been quenched, and it was only in the wild excitement of a life of continual adventure and unrestrained freedom, when I resembled what I had formerly been, that it re-kindled within me. Death too was now before me for I knew the inextorable laws of the Europeans, and that no mercy was shown to

Thugs of any grade,—how much less to me for whom a reward had been offered! It was a bitter thought—I should be hung,—hung like a dog,-I who ought to have died on a battle-field! there death would have been sweet, and followed by an everlasting paradise Alas! even this hope deserted me now, and I felt that the load of crime with which my soul was oppressed would weigh me down into

Who can describe the myriad thoughts which crowd into the heart at such a moment? One by one they hurry in, each striving to displace the foregoing—none staying for an instant,—till the brain reels under the confusion It was thus with me I walked mechanically, surrounded by the soldiers, vainly striving to collect my wandering senses to sustain me in the coming scene, the scene of death, for I verily believed I should be led to instant execution why should the mockery of a trial be given to one so steeped in crime as I was ?

A short time after our arrival at the town, I was conducted, closely guarded, to the officer who was employed by the English Government to apprehend Thugs A tall, noble-looking person he was, and from the severe glance he cast on me I thought my hour was come, and that ere night I should cease to exist I had prepared myself however for the worst, I saw no pity in his stern countenance, and I confess I trembled when he addressed me

"So, you are Ameer Ah, Jemadar," said he, "and at last you are in my power, know you aught of the accusations against you, and wherefore you are here? Read them," he continued to an attendant moonshee, "read the list which has been drawn up, yonder villain looks as though he would deny them"

The man unfolded a roll of paper written in Persian, and read a catalogue of crime, of murders, every one of which I knew to be true; a faithful record it was of my past life, with but few omissions Alla defend me ' thought I, there is no hope, yet still I put a bold face on the matter

"The proof, Sahib Bahadur," said I, "you English are praised for your justice, and, long as that list is of crimes I never before heard of, you will not deny me fair hearing and the justice you give to thousands"

"Surely not, whatever your crimes may be, do not fear that your case shall be inquired into Call the approvers," said he to an attendant, "bring them in one by one, and the jemadar shall hear what they have told me about him"

The first man who entered was an old associate of mine in former days, before my misfortunes commenced he had been with me in the expedition just before my father had been put to death by the rajah of Jhalone, which I have minutely described to you, and he related the whole from the murder of the moonshee and his child down to the last event the destruction of the pearl merchant. His story took a long time in relating and the whole was so fresh in my recollection, and he was so exact and true in its details, that I could not answer a word nor put a single question to shake his testimony In conclusion he referred the officer to the raigh of Jhalone for corroboration of the whole and he appealed to me to declare whether aught he had said was false Not only ' said he do you know Meer Sahib that it is all true, but there are others as well as myself who can speak to these facts and know, moreover that many graves have been opened, and the remains of your victims have been disinterred."

' Say yours as well as mine I replied, thrown completely off my guard at last, and nettled by the emphasis he had placed on the words

You had as much to do with thom as myself your victims. besides, did you not aid that villain Ganesha when I would have saved the child of the moonshee?

"He has confessed! cried many voices Silence!" said the officer let no one dare to speak. Do you know Ameer Ali, what you have said? Are you aware that you have admitted you are a Thug ?"

It is useless now to attempt to rocall my words," said I don make the most of them, for after this you shall wring no more from me no, not by the most horrible tortures you can inflict."

The examination, however proceeded. Others were brought for ward who had known me or been connected with me in Thugger, and at last those who had earned the reward of the Government by betraying me. They had been associated with me for the last two yours, and they related what I had done and where the bodies of the murdered were lying. After this was finished and all the depositions recorded, I was remanded to prison and the better to secure me, I was not only loaded with irons, but confined in a cell by myself.

After many days, which elapsed without my being sent for and when I had concluded that my fate was decided, the moonshee whom I had seen in the court, with a jemadar of Nujech s and two of the approvers, came to me.

"Ameer Ah, said the first, "we are sent by the Sahib Bahadur to tell you of your fate.

"I can guess it, and I - I am to suffer with the rest. Well! many a good Thug has thus died before me, and you shall see that Amour Ali fears not death."

"You have guessed rightly said the moonshoe, there is no hope for you your final trial will come on in a day or two, and there is such an array of facts against you, and the accounts from the rajah of Jhalone so entirely agree with the statements of all the approvers, that it is impossible you can escape death, or if you do escape it, nothing can save you from the Kala Panee"

"Death!" cired I, "death at once! Ah, Moonshee! you have influence with my judges, you can prevent my being sent away over the far sea, never to behold my country more, and to linger out the remnant of my days in a strange land, condemned to work in irons These hands have never been used to labour, how shall I endure it? Death is indeed welcome, compared with the Kala Panee"

"But why should it be either, Meer Sahib?" asked the jemadar, "your life or death is in your own hands these men will tell you how they are treated by the master they serve, and you may be like them if you are wise."

"Never!" cried I; "never shall it be said of Ameer Ali that he betrayed an associate"

"Insten, Kumbukht!" said the moonshee, "we are not come to use entreaties to one who deserves to die a thousand deaths, to one whose name is a terror to the country; you are in our power, and there is no averting your fate: an alternative is offered, which you may accept or not as you please, no force is used, no arguments shall be wasted on you Say at once, will you live and become an approver like the rest,—have good clothes to wear and food to eat, and be treated with consideration,—or will you die the death of a dog? Speak, my time is piecious, and I have no orders to bandy words with you"

"Accept the terms, Ameer Alı," said both the approvers, "do not be a fool, and throw your last chance of life away !"

I mused for a moment. what was life to me? should it ever be said that Ameer Ali had become a traitor, and, for the sake of a daily pittance of food and the boon of life, had abandoned his profession and assisted to suppress it? No, I would die first, and I "Begone '" said I, "take this message to your emtold them so ployer,—that the soul of Ameer Alı is too proud to accept his offer, and that he scorns it Death has no terrors for him, yet shame, everlasting shame has!"

They left me, and I mused over my lot I was to die, that was determined Did I fear death? not at first I looked at the transition as one that would lead me to eternal joys, to paradise, to my father and Azeema But as I thought again and again, other reflections crowded on my spirit: I was to die, but how? not like a man or a soldier, but like a miserable thief, the scorn of thousands who would exult in my dying struggles; and then I remembered those of the wretch who had been hung before my eyes when Bhudrinath was with me, and I pictured to myself the agony he must have suffered ere life was extinct—the shame of the deaththe ignoming which would never leave my memory. All these weighed heavily on me. On the other hand was life-one of servi tude at was true, but still at was life; I should be protected and I might once more perhaps be free if the Europeans relented towards me, and I did them faithful service.

Thus I debated with myself for many days At last I was warned that my trial would come on the next day; it was clearly the crisis of my fate, and, I must confess it, the fear of the horrible death of hanging the dread of the Kala Pance, and the advice of the moon shee caused my resolutions of dying with the rest to give way to a desire of life. Ganesha, too, crossed my thoughts; I can revenge myself now thought I, and his death will not he at my door know too how carnestly his capture was desired, and that I alone could tell where he was to be found, and of his probable lurking places, in case he ever escaped from us. My determination was made, and I requested that the moonshee who had formerly spoken with me on the subject might be sent for He came, and I told him at once that I was willing to accept the alternative he had offered.

Ah! you speak like a wise man now said he, "and if you exert yourself in the service you have embraced, and prove yourself faith ful and trustworthy you may rely upon it indulgences, as far as can be granted to a person in your condition, will be allowed to you hereafter; but you must first descrye them, for with the Europeans nothing goes by favour"

I am ready I replied, "point out what I am to do, and you will find that Ameer Alı can be true to the salt he cats.

"Then come it is still early and I will take you at once to the court, there you will receive your instructions."

My prison irons were struck off and a light steel rod with a ring attached to it fastened about my right leg, so that it left me at perfect liberty to walk but not to run, and I was duly admitted as an approver under the threat of instant execution in case I over neglected my duty failed to give information where I really possessed it, or almosed in any way the confidence which had been reposed in me.

"Know you aught of Gancaha? and the officer to me.

'I do Sahib Bahadur "I replied, I know him well you have offered a reward for him as you did for me, and yet you know not that even at this moment he is within a few coss of Sangor

"Can you guide my people to him? he asked. "Remember this is the first matter with which you are entrusted, and I need not say that I require you to use your utmost intelligence in it. Ganesha is wary, and has hitherto evaded every attempt which has been made to apprehend him.

"I will undertake it, I exclaimed. 'It is possible he does not know of my capture, and if you will give me six of your own men, I will disguise them, and pledge myself to bring him to you, and not only him, but Himmut, who is, I know, with him "

"Ha!" cried the officer, "Himmut also! he is as bad as the other"

"He is as good a Thug," I replied, "and more cannot be said But we lose time, select your men, let them be the bravest and most active you have—their weapons may be needed I will too ask you for a sword "

"Impossible," said he; "you must go as you are, what if you were to lead my men into destruction?"

I drew myself up proudly "Trust me or not as you will,-Ameer Alı is no liar, no deceitful villain to the cause he serves Trust me, and you make me doubly true to your interests, doubt me, and I may doubt you"

"Thou speakest boldly," said he, "and I will trust thee Let him have his own weapon," he added to an attendant. "And now you must begone early, Ameer Ah, the men await you without"

"This instant,—food shall not pass my lips till I have taken Ganesha"

I left him I found the men, six resolute-looking fellows, well armed, I stripped them of their badges of office, and made them throw dust on their garments so that it should appear they had The iron on my leg I secured so that it should make travelled far no noise, and not be visible under my trousers and I put the party in motion

It was nearly evening, and avoiding the town I struck at once into the open country "If we travel well," said I to the men, "we may be up with him by midnight"

"Where is he?" asked the leader of the band

"At —, he lives with the patel there, and passes for a Hindoo fakeer."

"By Gunga! I have seen him then," rejoined the fellow, "he is tall, and squints, does he not?"
"That is the man," said I, "you would hardly have thought of looking for him so near you?"

"No, indeed! had we known it we might have captured him a week ago"

"Now you are sure of him," said I, "but we must be wary Will you trust me ?"

"I will, but beware how you attempt to escape or mislead me"

"I have a heavy reckoning to settle with Ganesha—he murdered my mother!" was my only reply.

We reached the village in the very dead of night, everything was still, and it was perfectly dark, which aided my purpose, for my companion a face could not be distinguished, and my own approach to the patels house would not be noticed. Now, said I to the Nigeob "you alone must accompany me let the rest of your mentary here I will bring Gaucalia here, and then you must bind him Do you fear me? (for he appeared irresolute) 'nay, then, I will go alone and tell your master that yo are cowards.'

"That will not do either" cried the man "I must not let you out of my sight my orders are positive so go I must And if I do not return, said he to his associates, do you make the best of your way to Saugor alone and say that I am murdered.

I laughed "There is no fear said I in half an hour or less we shall return; are you ready?

"I am Meer Sahib lead on and remember that my sword is loose in the scabbard. I may die but then shalt also Fool! saul I cannot you trust me?

Not yet, he replied I may do so hereafter

Not yet, he replied: I may do so hereafter "Remember I continued, that you are nother to speak to Ganesha nor the other if he is here. I will get them out of the house after that look well to your weapons. If they attempt to eccepe, or show suspicion of our real errand, fall on Himmat when I ask you how far it is to Sauger leave me to deal with Ganesha — we are two to two and Ganesha is a better swordsman than the other You will remember this.

"I will, he replied I will stick by you-I fear not now for I see you are fathful.

A few more steps brought me to the patel shouse, and I called for him by name. "Jeswunt! Jeswunt! rouse yourself and come out, man. Thou knowest who I am" I spoke in Ramasee, which I know he understood He answered me from within, and soon after I heard the bars and bolts of his door removed, and he came forth wrapped in a sheet. "Who calls me, he asked.

"I, your friend Amoor Ali," I roplied where is Ganosha?"

Asleep, within why do you ask?"

"And Himmut?

'Asleep also what do ye want with either? and what brings you.

New Ship so lets or as and what brings you.

here, Meer Sahib, so late or so early which you please? we thought you were half way to Calcutta.

"Ah, sand I, that matter has been given up the Nuceebs were out, and there was rad. But go and rouse Ganesia, I have some work in hand for him, and have no time to lose at must be finished by daylight.

I understand," said the patel, some buny ch?"

Do not stand chattering there or your share may be forgotten, Patelee bring Ganesha to me,—or tell him I am here, he will come fast enough."

"Now be ready!" said I to the Nujceb, "do as I He went in do, and remember the signal"

I heard the patel awaken Ganesha, I heard the growling tones of his voice as he first abused him for rousing him, and afterwards his eager question, "Ameer Ali heie! ai Bhowance, what can he require of me?" At length his gaunt figure appeared at the door-Ya Alla! how my heart bounded within me, and then sickened, so intense was my excitement on beholding him

"Where art thou, Ameer Ali?" said he, "I can see nought in this accursed darkness"

"Here," said I, "you will see well enough by-and-by when your eye is accustomed to it Give me your hand, now descend the step, that is right" We embraced each other

- "Are you ready for work?" I asked, "I have only two men with me, and we have picked up some buny, there will be good spoil too if you will join us,—alone we can do nothing, there are four of them" "Where?" he asked
 - "Yonder, in the lane, I have pretended to come for fire"

"Who is that with you?"

"A friend, no fear of him, he is one of us"

"Does he speak Ramasee?"

"Not yet," said I, "he is a new hand, but a promising one; but where is Himmut?"

"Within, snoring there, you may even hear him wait for me a moment, I will go for my sword and shoes, and rouse him up Four men you said, and we are five, enough, by Bhowance ' we will share the spoil "

"Before you are two hours older, be quick, or they may suspect me"

He went in, and returned in a short time fully equipped, Himmut accompanied him, and we exchanged salutations

"Now, come along," said I, "there is no time to lose"
"Hark ye!" said Ganesha, "there is a well in yonder lane, will that do for the bhil?"

"Certainly," I replied, "you will see the men directly" after I had spoken we approached our party. "Who goes there?" cried one of them

"A friend—Ameei Ali!"

"Then all is right," was the reply, and in another instant we had joined them

"There are your men, seize them!" cried I, throwing myself upon Ganesha with such violence that we fell to the ground together, struggling with deadly hate, but two of the Nujeebs came to my aid, just as Ganesha had succeeded in drawing a small dagger he wore in his girdle, and as I had fortunately seized his hand.

Bind him hand and foot said I disengaging myself from him, and gag him or he may alarm the village by his cries This was done, and he was disarmed; a cloth was tied round his mouth so that he could not speak, and we hurried our prisoners along as fast as the darkness and the roughness of the read would allow

None of us spoke nor was it till the day had fully dawned that I looked upon Ganesha then our eyes met, and the furious expression of his face I shall never forget. Take the gag from his mouth" said I to one of the Najcobs let him speak if he wishes." It was

aroh

'You are revenged at last, Ameer Ali, he said may my curses cleave to you for ever and the curses of Bhowance fall on you for the destruction of her votary! May the salt you cat be bitter in your mouth, and your food poison to you!

"Ameon! said L. You have spoken like Gauesha. I am in deed revenged, but the debt is not paid yet-the debt you owe me for my mother s life Dovil! you murdered her

Av and would have murdered you, when you were a weak puling child, but for that fool Ismail he met his fate however and vours is vet in store for you.

"You will not see it, said I "and when I behold you hang up like a dog I shall be happy" why do you

"Pence! exclaimed the leader of the Aujeebs waste words on him, Ameer Ali P Because I am glutting my soul with his sufferings, I answered

"and, had I my will, I would stand by and taunt him till the hour of his death. Did he not murder my mother? and if he had not, should I have murdered my sister? Have I not cause for deep and deadly hate? Yet I will be silent now

We reached Saugor and the delight with which the officer recoved Ganesha from my hands could not be concealed. "A deep blow has been struck at Thugges in the capture of this villain, said and thou hast done thy duty well, Ameer Ali.

From that hour I rose in his confidence and estimation, and I have never forfeited it.

Ganeshas trial came on, and I was the principal witness against I told all I knew of the murders he had committed, and others corroborated my statements in the fullest manner centenced to die

In vain was it that I entreated to see him before his execution. I wanted to taunt him with his fate, and to embitter his last hours, if anything I could have said might have done so. It was denied me the officer knew of my purpose, and was too humane to allow it. But I saw him die-him and twenty others-all at the same moment. He saw me too and cursed me, but his curses were impotent. They all ascended the fatal drop together, refused the polluting touch of the hangman, adjusted the ropes round their own necks, and, exclaiming, "Victory to Bhowanee!" seized each other's hands, and leaped from the platform into eternity. I watched Ganesha, and I joyed to see that his struggles were protracted beyond those of the others. I was satisfied,—he had paid the debt he owed me

And now, sahib, after this event, my life became one of dull routine and inactivity. One by one I tracked and apprehended my old associates, till none of them remained at large. The usefulness of my life to you has passed away, and all that I can do is at times to relate the details of some affair I may either have witnessed or heard from others. Why should I live? is a question I often ask myself, why should an existence be continued to me in which I have no enjoyment, no pleasure, no care, not even grief? I have remorse but for one act, and that will never leave me. Yet I must support it until Alla pleases to send the angel to loose the cord which binds my life to the clay it inhabits.

I used often to think on my daughter, but her too I have almost forgotten, yet I should not say forgotten, for I love her with a parent's affection, which will last to the latest moment of my existence But she is happy, and why should she know of me?

I fear that I have often wearied you by the minute relation of my history, but I have told all, nor concealed from you one thought, one feeling, much less any act which at this distance of time I can remember Possibly, you may have recorded what may prove fearfully interesting to your friends If it be so, your end is answered you have given a faithful portrait of a Thug's life, his ceremonies, and his acts, whilst I am proud that the world will know of the deeds and adventures of Ameer Ali, the Thug.

GLOSSARY OF INDIAN WORDS USED IN THE TEXT

Aftib peer a large run screen.
Aftib wonderful.
Allia alkber God is victorious!
Allia lakfir God protect you!
Allia kefir God protect you!
Allia kefir God protect you!
Asker amen.
Askor sin elephrut goad.
Askunfee a gold coin.
Askul, an intendant—governor

B
Barik Alla, praise to God!
Bahddar valiant.
lawarchee cook
Beh Thug gra e-digger Bháse Pán lao brother bring Pin! A Thun stepal.

Bhordare, wife of Siva, the destroys in lindous mythology

Bhong A preparation of hemp leaves, Bhonges a streeper Bhottetts among Thuga the strangler Bhottetta, eating bouse keeper. Blaygood Hindoo supellation for God Bhyroopers come actors. Boorle, a thick val.

Boorle, a thick val.

Bu if the Thug designation for vic time.

Bunnees, a linekster Burrdes a earpentar

Char Mindr the four minarcia, a noble building at Hyderabad.
Coss two mines.
Chostree the public hall of a town or village.
Choop be silent!

D Ddooo a dacoit,—gang robber Ddil, boiled pulses Deves, vide Bhowanes. Devds kha a, reception rown. Dker Hindoo of low caste. Dhoues, washerman. Dkotes, washerman.

Dooly a light palankeen. Danfadar a anisattem officer Daphra a large tambournee. Dathdr court assambly Dargah a shrine Darroha superintendent. Duefra A Hindoo festival.

P
Fakeer religious mendicant.
Francees the French.
Fernaghee Frank, a term for Europeaus.

G Gond an aboriginal tribe
Goor naw sugar molas es
Gooroo a reingious tracher
Goorfee, a male professional singer

Iddia, ruler governor
Hookun order direction.
Hookun order direction.
Howards hill of exchange
Howards, physician.
Howards advanced guard of an army
Howards advanced guard of an army

Inshalla, please God!
Ir rakman rrukeem the most clement and mercial!

Jehonnum, heil.
Jenedar an officer a captain Jannee the Thun signal to murder Jian gunit.
Jo-kooksm a ordered.
Jonather large millet. Holeus or gatum.
Jisylee a kind of swestiment.
Junum Hindoor parred th rad.
Junum hindoor parred th call.
Junum annum applied to soldere

E bobs pieces of ment dressed on

Kafir, unbeliever Kálá pánec, the sea Kálce, vide Bhownnec Kázec, a law officer, a judge Khánum, a khan's wife Khayet, a caste of Hindoon, usually clerks Khidmutgar, personal servant Khoda, God Khôdawund, my lord Khoob, good! capital! Kicherce, rice and pulse dressed together Kórla, a whip Kótwal, town magistrate Kubool-hooa, it is accepted Kulundur, a sect of Mahomedan men-Kumbukht, unfortunate, miserable.

Lóhár, a blacksmith Lota, a small drinking vessel Lubhur, a division of Pindharees Lugháecs, those of the Thugs who bury the dead

Madressa, a college

Mahal, palace, private apartments Mang, the lowest caste of Hindoos Máshalla, praise be to God! Meca, a term of endearment for a boy Mohorum, a Mahomedan festival Moolla, a Mahomedan priest Moonákib, hymns sung in the Mohorum Moonshee, teacher, secretary Mudárce fakcers, a sect of Mahomedan mendicants Muntra, an incantation, charm Murseca, Mohorum hymn. Mutsuddee, a clerk

Nagáras, large drums Namáz, daily prayer Namurd, coward Nanuh shace, a class of mendicants Naráyun, Hindoo appellation for God Nika, a form of marriage Nishan burdar, standard-bearer Nujeebs, police Nujoomee, an astrologer Nulla, a watercourse Nuwáb, nobleman, nabob. Nuzzur, present, offering.

ľ

Pan, betel-leaf Páll, an open tent Patcl, head officer of a village Pecr-o-Moorshid, lit saint and teacher A respectful salutation Pergunna, a country Pulla walla, gram porter Pundit, a learned Hindoo Punjah, a hand—emblematic of the Creator Punuh-i-Khoda, protection of God. Punuh, protection Purrat baah, a man tiger Puthán, a tribe of Mahomedans Querut, gymnastic exercise. Qoodrut, power, ability.

Ramasce, the Thugs' slang dialect Rohurca, a professional treasure-car-Roomal, a handkerchief—used by Thugs to signify their strangling cloth Roostum, a valiant Persian hero

S.

Saecs, a groom Sálub, sir Sáhib-zádah, son, used in a respectful Sahib-logue, English gentlemen Salam Alcikoom, salutation and peace! Sahoukar, banker or meichant Ságce, cup bearer Saringhee Indian violin Seer, a weight of two pounds Seth jec, seth, a merchant, jec, a respectful termination Scin or Syn, title of a religious mendi-Shah básh, bravo! well done! Shitan or Shytan, the devil Shookr, thanks Sikhs, a tribe of Hindoos. Sitár, Indian guitar Sotha, among Thugs, the invergler

Sund, a sect of Mahomedans who claim descent from Mahomed.

Tailees olimen.
Tailees olimen.
Tailees olimen.
Tailee a poory
Tejaka a short erooked sabre.
Takkoor a Hindoo chief.
Toubet, for shame !—fa!
Tumhéte a seller of batel and tohacco eto

Tupounce the sacrificial ceremony by Things after a nutritor Tupos a musical mode, a balled. Tupos a dancing girl. Ulkumd ul illa praise be to God!

Umbdra a canopled sest for an elephants back.

Ungrer the Luglish.

ll'aghyra un officer ll'ah wah/ bravo

Z. Zendug female private apariments. Addah, a son a male child.

A LIST OF KEGAN PAUL, TRENCH & CO.'S PUBLICATIONS.

A LIST OF

KEGAN PAUL, TRENCH & CO'S PUBLICATIONS

CONTENTS

GENERAL LITERATURE PARCILIENT LIBERT	21	MILITARY WORKS POETRY WORKS OF FICTION	7AGE 33 34 42
PULPIT COMMENTARY INTERNATIONAL SCIENTIFIC SERIES	23 30	BOOKS FOR THE YOUNG	43

GENERAL LITERATURE

- A K II B From a Quiet Place A Volume of Sermons. Crown 8ro, 5r
- ALLEY Rev R., MA -Abraham his Life, Times, and Travels, 3500 years ago With Map. Second Edition. Post 870, 67
- ALLIES T W MA -Per Crucem ad Lucem The Result of a Life. 2 vols. Demy 810, 250
 - A Life's Decision Crown 810, 1 (d)
- ALLNATT F J B B D The Witness of St. Matthew An Inquiry into the Sequence of Inspired Thought pervading the First Gospel and not its Result of Unity Symmetry and Completeness, as a Perfect Portrait of the Perfect Van. Crown 8ro 57
- AMOS Professor Skelden—The History and Principles of the Civil Law of Rome An aid to the Study of Scientific and Comparative Junepudence. Demy Sto. 160
- Ancient and Modern Britons. A Retrospect. 2 rols. Demy 810,

- ANDERDON, Rev W H.—Fasti Apostolici; a Chronology of the Years between the Ascension of our Lord and the Martyrdom of SS Peter and Paul. Second Edition. Enlarged. Square Svo, 5s
 - Evenings with the Saints Crown 8vo, 5s.
- ANDERSON, David "Scenes" in the Commons Crown 810, 55
- ARMSTRONG, Richard A, BA—Latter-Day Teachers. Six Lectures Small crown 8vo, 2s 6d
- AUBERTIN, F J-A Flight to Mexico With Seven full-page Illustrations and a Railway Map of Mexico Crown Svo, 7s 6d
- B.1DGER, George Percy, DCL—An English-Arabic Lexicon In which the equivalent for English Words and Idiomatic Sentences are rendered into literary and colloquial Arabic Royal 4to, Sos.
- BAGEHOT, Walter The English Constitution. New and Revised Edition Crown Svo, 7s 6d
 - Lombard Street. A Description of the Money Market. Eighth Edition Crown Svo, 7s 6d
 - Essays on Parliamentary Reform Crown 8vo, 5s
 - Some Articles on the Depreciation of Silver, and Topics connected with it. Demy 8vo, 5s
- BAGENAL, Philip H—The American-Irish and their Influence on Irish Politics Crewn 8vo, 5s
- BAGOT, Alan, CE-Accidents in Mines their Causes and Prevention Crown 8vo, 6s.
 - The Principles of Colliery Ventilation. Second Edition, greatly enlarged Crown Svo, 5s.
 - The Principles of Civil Engineering in Estate Management Crown 8vo, 7s 6d
- BAKER, Sir Sherston, Bart The Laws relating to Quarantine. Crown 8vo, 12s 6d
- BALDIVIN, Capt of H—The Large and Small Game of Bengal and the North-Western Provinces of India With 20 Illustrations. New and Cheaper Edition Small 4to, 10s 6d
- BALLIN, Ada S and F L—A Hebrew Grammar With Exercises selected from the Bible Crown 810, 75 6d
- BARCLAY, Edgar Mountain Life in Algeria. With numerous Illustrations by Photogravure Crown 4to, 165
- BARLOW, James H—The Ultimatum of Pessimism. An Ethical Study. Demy 8vo, 6s.
- BARNES, William —Outlines of Redecraft (Logic). With English Wording Crown 8vo, 3s.

- BAUK Frituand Dr Pk.—A Philological Introduction to Grock and Latin for Students, Translated and adapted from the German by C. Alegay Paul, M.A., and L. D. Stoyr M.A. Third Edition. Crown Sto &
- EELLARS Ret B The Testimony of Conscience to the Truth and Divine Origin of the Christian Revelation. Berner Prize Lisary Small grown Sec 31 64
- PELLASIS Lewert The Money Jar of Plautus at the Orntory School An Account of the Account Representation. With Appendix and 16 Histartations. Small 4to sewed, 22
- BELLIAGHAY Henry VP-Social Aspects of Catholicism and Protestantism in their Civil Bearing upon Nations. Translated and adapted from the French of M le Bacow de Haulleville. With a Preface by His Eminence Cardinal Manning, Second and Cheaper Littlem, Crown Sto, 31 64
- FELLINGHAM II Belaku Graham—Ups and Downs of Spanish Travel Second Edition Crown 8rg &
- BEAV 41/red II —The Greek Philosophers. 2 vols. Demy Sto, St
- BENT 7 Therefore —Genoal How the Republic Rose and Fell With 18 Illustrations. Demy 8ro, 18s.
- Bible Folk-Lore A Study in Comparative Mythology Crown Sector 6d.
- BIRD Claric F CS Higher Education in Gormany and England Being a brief Practical Account of the Organization and curriculum of the German Higher Schools. With critical Remarks and Suggestions with reference to those of England. Small crown 8ro. _ 1 6d.
- ELACALE) Rev IV S -- Essays on Pauperism. 16mo. Cloth, 11. 6d; sewed, 11
- BLECKLY Houry -- Socrates and the Athenians: An Apology Crown 8ve 2: 6d
- BLOOMFIELD The Lady—Reminiscences of Court and Diplomatic Life New and Cheaper Edition. With Frontispiece. Crown Sto. 6r
- BLUNT The Ven Archdman —The Divine Patriot and other Sermons. Preached in Scarborough and in Cannes. New and Chenper Edition. Crown for 4s 6d
- ELUYT Wiffred S .- The Future of Islam. Crown Sto. 64.
- FODDY Alexander A To Kairwan the Holy Scenes in Muhammedan Afron. With Route Map and eight Illustration by A. F. JACASEY Crown Sto., 6r
- BOOLE, Mary Symbolical Methods of Study Crown 810, 51

- BOUVERIE-PUSEY, S E B—Permanence and Evolution.
 An Inquiry into the Supposed Mutability of Animal Types Crown 8vo, 5s
- BOWEN, H C., MA -Studies in English. For the use of Modern Schools Seventh Thousand, Small crown 810, 15 6d
 - English Grammar for Beginners Fcap Sto, 15
 - Simple English Poems English Literature for Junior Classes In four parts Parts I., II, and III, 6d each Part IV, is Complete, 3s
- BRADLEY, F H-The Principles of Logic Demy Sto, 16s
- BRIDGETT, Rev T E —History of the Holy Eucharist in Great Britain. 2 vols Demy 8vo, 18s
- BRODRICK, the Hon G C-Political Studies Demy Svo, 14s
- BROOKE, Rev S A -Life and Letters of the Late Rev. I W Robertson, M.A. Edited by
 - I Uniform with Robertson's Sermons 2 vols With Steel Portrait 7s 6d
 II Library Edition With Poitrait 810, 125

 - III A Popular Edition In 1 vol, 810, 65
 - The Fight of Faith Sermons preached on various occasions Fish Edition Crown 8vo, 7s 6d
 - The Spirit of the Christian Life, Third Edition Crown 8vo, 5s
 - Theology in the English Poets Cowper, Coleridge, Wordsworth, and Burns Fifth Edition Post 8vo, 5s
 - Christ in Modern Life, Spitcenth Edition Crown Sto, 53
 - Crown Sto, 55 Sermons First Senes. Thirteenth Edition
 - Sermons. Second Series Sixth Edition Crown 810, 55
- BROWN, Rev J Baldwin, BA The Higher Life Its Reality, Experience, and Destiny Sixth Edition Crown Sco, 5s
 - Doctrine of Annihilation in the Light of the Gospel of Love. Five Discourses Fourth Edition Crown Sto, 2s 6'
 - The Christian Policy of Life A Book for Young Men of Business Third Edition Crown Sto, 3s 6d
- BROWN, S Boston, BA-The Fire Baptism of all Flesh, or, The Coming Spiritual Crisis of the Dispensation Crown Sio, Gs
- BROWN, Horatro I -Life on the Lagoons. With two Illustrations and Map Crown Svo, 6s
- BROWNBILL, John Principles of English Canon Law.
 Part I. General Introduction Crown 800, 65
- BROWNE, W R-The Inspiration of the New Testament With a Preface by the Re. J P. Normis, D D Tcap Svo, 2.6'

- FURDETT Heary C .- Help in Sickness-Where to Go and What to Do Crown 810 Ir 6d
 - Helps to Health The Habitation-The Nursery-The School room and-The Person. With a Chapter on I leasure and Health Resorts Crown Sto, 11 6/
- PURTON Mrs Ackned The Inner Life of Syria Pulestine and the Hely Land, Post 8re 6r
- PUSBECO Orker Ghirden de -His Life and Letters. Dy CHARLES THORNTON FORSTER M L and I II BLACKBURNE DANIELL M.A. 2 vols. With Frontupleces. Demy 8ro 24s
- CARPENTER II B LLD MD, FR.S. e —The Principles of Montal Physiology With their Applications to the Training and Discipline of the Mind, and the Study of its Morbid Conditions. Illustrated, Sixth Ldition, Sec 121
- Catholic Dictionary Containing some Account of the Doctrine, Discipline Rites, Ceremoules, Councils and Pel gross Orders of the Catholic Church By WILLIAM E. Addis and THOMAS ARNOLD M 1. Second Ldition, Demy Svo, 11
- CERVANTES.-Journey to Parmassus. Spanish Text, with Translation into En lish Tercets, Preface and Illustrativ Votes, by TAMES Y GIRSOY Crown Syo, I.
- CHEYNE Ray, T A -The Prophecies of Isaiah. Translated with Critical Notes and Dissertations, 2 vols. Third Edition. Demy Sto 25
- CHICHELE May -- Doing and Undoing A Story 1 rol Crown Syo.
- CLAIRAUT Elements of Geometry Translated by Dr KAINES. With 145 Figures. Crown 810, 44 6d
- CLARKE Rev Henry James A K C The Fundamental Science Demy 8vo 10r 6d
- CLAYDEN P II -Samuel Sharpe Egyptologist and Translator of the Bible Crown 8vo, 6r
- CLIFFORD Samed What Think Ye of the Christ? Crown Sen for
- CLODD, Edward FR.A.S .- The Childhood of the World: a Simple Account of Man in Early Times. Seventh Edition. Crown Sto. 3r
 - A Special Edition for Schools 11
 - The Childhood of Religions. Including a Simple Account of the Buth and Growth of Myths and Legends. Eighth Thousand. Crown Svo. 54 A Special Edition for Schools. 11 6d.

 - Jesus of Nazareth. With a brief sketch of Jewish History to the Time of His Buth. Small crown 8vo, 6s.

- COGHLAN, J Cole, D D—The Modern Pharisee and other Sermons. Edited by the Very Rev H H DICKINSON, D D, Dean of Chapel Royal, Dublin. New and Cheaper Edition. Crown 810, 75 6d.
- COLE, George R. Fitz-Roy The Peruvians at Home. Crown Svo, 6s.
- COLERIDGE, Sara Memoir and Letters of Sara Coleridge. Edited by her Daughter. With Index. Cheap Edition. With Portrait. 75 6d
- Collects Exemplified. Being Illustrations from the Old and New Testaments of the Collects for the Sundays after Trinity By the Author of "A Commentary on the Epistles and Gospels" Edited by the Rev JOSEPH JACKSON Crown 8vo, 5s
- CONNELL, A K—Discontent and Danger in India. Small crown Sto, 3s 6d
 - The Economic Revolution of India. Crown 8vo, 4s 6d
- CORY, IVilliam —A Guide to Modern English History Part I MDCCCXXV -MDCCCXXX Demy 8vo, 9s. Part II MDCCCXXX -MDCCCXXXV., 15s
- COTTERILL, H B—An Introduction to the Study of Poetry.

 Crown 8vo, 7s 6d
- COUTTS, Francis Burdett Money The Training of the Instinct of Love With a Preface by the Rev Edward Thring, M A Small crown 8vo, 2s. 6d.
- COX, Rev Sn George W, MA, Bart—The Mythology of the Aryan Nations. New Edition Demy 8vo, 16s
 - Tales of Ancient Greece. New Edition Small crown 8vo, 6s
 - A Manual of Mythology in the form of Question and Answer. New Edition Fcap 8vo, 3s
 - An Introduction to the Science of Comparative Mythology and Folk-Lore Second Edition Crown 8vo 7s 6d
- COX, Rev. Sir G IV, MA, Bart, and JONES, Enstace Hinton—Popular Romances of the Middle Ages. Third Edition, in I vol. Crown 8vo, 6s.
- COX, Rev Samuel, DD—A Commentary on the Book of Job.
 With a Translation Demy 8vo, 15s
 - Salvator Mundi, or, Is Christ the Saviour of all Men? Ninth Edition Crown 8vo, 5s
 - The Larger Hope. A Sequel to "Salvator Mundi." Second Edition 16mo, 15
 - The Genesis of Evil, and other Sermons, mainly expository Third Edition Crown Svo, 6s.
 - Balaam. An Exposition and a Study Crown 810, 55
 - Miracles. An Argument and a Challenge Crown 810, 2s. 6d

CRAIEV Mrs -A Years Meditations. Crown See 61

CRAILFURD Ornald - Portugal Old and Now With Illustrations and Maps. New and Cheaper Ldition. Crown 8vo, 6r

Crimo of Christmas Day A Tale of the Latin Quarter By the Author of My Ducats and my Daughter 11 CROZIER John Beattle MB - The Religion of the Future

CROZIER John Beattle ME - The Religion of the Future
Crown Sto Gr

DANIELL, Clarmest — The Gold Treasure of India. An Inquiry into its Annount the Caree of its Accumulation and the Proper Means of using it as Money Crown Svo, 5t

Danish Parsonago By an Angler Crown Sto, Gr

Darkness and Dawn the Peaceful Birth of a New Age. Small crown 810, ω 6d

DAVIDSON Rev Semmel D.D LL.D.—Canon of the Bible Its Formation listory, and Fluctuations. Third and Revised Edition. Small crown 8vo 5r

The Doctrine of Last Things contained in the New Testa ment compared with the Notions of the Jers and the Statements of Church Creeds. Small crown 8vo 3r 6d.

D 11 IDSO \ Thomas.-The Parihenon Frieze and other Danys.
Crown 810, 60

DAU'SO V, Gra., M.A. Prayers, with a Discourse on Prayer Edited by his Wife. I not Series. Eighth Edition. Crown 8ro. 6r

* Also a New and Cheaper Edition. Crown 8vo 3s. 6d

Prayers, with a Discourse on Prayer Edited by George St Clair. Second Series. Crown 8vo, 6s

Sermons on Disputed Points and Special Occasions Eduted by his Wife Fourth Eduton. Crown 870, 61

Sermons on Daily Life and Duty Edited by his Wife. Fourth Edition. Crown Sro, 6r

The Authentic Gospel and other Sermons. Edited by George ST Clark, Third Edition. Crown 870 for

Three Books of God: Nature, History and Scripture. Sermons edited by Gronge ST Clair Crown 870 fr

DE JONCOURT Madams Maris - Wholesome Cookery Third Edition. Crown 810 31 6d.

DE LONG Licit Com G W-The Voyage of the Jeannette
The Ship and ice Journals of Edited by his Wife EMMA DE LOVE With Portraits, Maps, and many illustrations on wood and stone. 2 vols. Demy 810, 367

Democracy in the Old World and the New By the Author of The Sucz Canal the Eastern Question, and Abyssinin, etc. Small crown 8 to, 22 64.

- DEVEREUX, W Cope, R N., F R G S Fair Italy, the Riviera, and Monte Carlo. Comprising a Tour through North and South Italy and Sicily, with a short account of Malta Crown Svo, 6s
- Doing and Undoing. A Story. By MARY CHICHELE 1 vol.
- DOWDEN, Edward, LLD—Shakspere a Critical Study of his Mind and Art. Seventh Edition Post 8vo, 12s
 - Studies in Literature, 1789-1877 Third Edition Large post 810, 65
- DUFFIELD, A J—Don Quixote his Critics and Commentators. With a brief account of the minor works of MIGUEL DE CERVANTES SAAVEDRA, and a statement of the um and end of the greatest of them all A handy book for general readers. Crown 8vo, 3s 6d
- DU MONCEL, Count The Telephone, the Microphone, and the Phonograph With 74 Illustrations Second Edition Small crown 810, 51
- DURUY, Victor History of Rome and the Roman People Edited by Prof Maharry With nearly 3000 Illustrations 4to. Vols I II and III in 6 parts, 30s each vol
- EDGEWORTH, F Y—Mathematical Psychics An Essay on the Application of Mathematics to Social Science. Demy 810, 75 6d
- Educational Code of the Prussian Nation, in its Present Form. In accordance with the Decisions of the Common Provincial Law, and with those of Recent Legislation. Crown Sto, 2s 6d
- Education Library. Edited by Philip Magnus
 - An Introduction to the History of Educational Theories. By OSCAR BROWNING, M.A. Second Edition 3s 6d
 - Old Greek Education By the Rev Prof MAHAFFI, MA Second Edition 3s 6d
 - School Management Including a general view of the work of Education, Organization and Discipline. By JOSEPH LANDON Third Edition. 6s
- Eighteenth Century Essays. Selected and Edited by Austin Dobson With a Miniature Frontispiece by R Caldecott Parchment Library Edition, 6s, vellum, 7s 6d
- ELSDALE, Henry -Studies in Tennyson's Idylls Cionn Sto, 5s.
- ELYOT, Sir Thomas The Boke named the Gouernour. Edited from the First Edition of 1531 by HENRY HERBERT STEPHEN CROFT, M.A., Barnster at-Law. 2 vols. Fcap 4to, 50s.

- Emorson's (Ralph Waldo) Life By Oliver Weynell Holurs, English Copyright Edition, With Portrait, Crown Sec 6:
- Enoch the Prophet. The Book of Archbishop LAURING'S Translation with an Introduction by the Author of The Licolation of Christianity Group for 57
- Eranus. A Collection of Exercises in the Alcake and Sapphic Metree Edited by F W. Connini Assistant Master at I fon. Second Edition. Cronn Sto. 4.
- EVANS, Mark—The Story of Our Father's Love told to Children. Suth and Cheaper Lutton. With Four Illustrations. Feap 8ro, it 6d
- Fan Kwao* at Canton before Trenty Days 1825-1844 By an old Resident. With Frontispiece Crown 8 o 51
- TEIS Mand-Shakspere and Montaigne in Endeavour to Explain the Tendency of Hamlet from Allusions in Contemporary Works, Crown 870, 57
- ILECKER Ret Elicier—Scripture Onomatology Being Critical Notes on the Septuagent and other Versions, Second Edition. Crown Stor 3 67
- FIOREDICE II H-A Month among the Mere Irish Small crown Sto, G
- FOIVLE R.- T II -The Divine Legation of Christ. Crown 810 71
- Frank Leward Edited by Charles Banerov Crown Sto, 7: 6d
- FULLER Rev Vorus —The Lord's Day or Christian Sunday Its Unity History Philosophy and Perpetual Obligation Sermons. Demy Svo, 101 6d
- GARDINER Samuel R and T BASS MULLINGER MA-Introduction to the Study of English History Second Edition. Large crown for 0, 9
- GARDNER Derzy —Quatre Bras, Ligny and Waterloo A Narrative of the Campelgo in Belgium, 1815 With Maps and Plans. Demy 8vo, 16t
- Genesis in Advance of Present Science. A Crilical Investigation of Chapter L-Th. By a Septragenarian Reneficial Presbyter Demy Sto. 102 6d.
- GEVNA E Irresponsible Philanthropists. Being some Chapters on the Employment of Gentlewomen. Son 21 64.
- GEORGE Histy-Progress and Powerty: An Inquiry into the Causes of Industrial Depressions, and of Increase of Westlin. The Remedy Fifth Library Edition Post Stro, 7: 6d Cabinet Edition. Crown Sto. 2: 6d Also a Cheap Edition. Limp cloth, 1: 6d. Paper covers, 1:

GEORGE, Henry-continued.

ţ

- Social Problems. Fourth Thousand Crown 810, 5s. Cheap Edition. Paper covers, 1s
- GIBSON, James Y Journey to Parnassus. Composed by MIGUEL DE CERVANTES SAAVLDRA Spanish Text, with Translation into English Tercets, Preface, and Illustrative Notes, by. Crown Svo. 12s.
- Glossary of Terms and Phrases Edited by the Rev H Percy Smith and others. Medium Svo, 12s
- GLOVER, F, MA—Exempla Latina. A First Construing Book, with Short Notes, Levicon, and an Introduction to the Analysis of Sentences. Second Edition—Feap 8vo, 2s
- GOLDSMID, Sn Francis Henry, Bart, QC, MP—Memoir of With Portrut. Second Edition, Revised. Crown 8vo, 6s,
- GOODENOUGH, Commodore & G—Memoir of, with Extracts from his Letters and Journals Edited by his Widow With Steel Engraved Portrait. Third Edition Crown 810, 5s.
- GOSSE, Edmund —Studies in the Literature of Northern Europe. New Edition Large crown 8vo, 6s.
 - Seventeenth Century Studies. A Contribution to the History of English Poetry Demy 8vo, ros 6d
- GOULD, Rev S Baring, MA —Germany, Present and Past New and Cheaper Edition. Large crown 810, 75 6d
- GOWAN, Major Walter E—A. Ivanoff's Russian Grammar (16th Edition) Translated, enlarged, and arranged for use of Students of the Russian Language Demy Svo, 6s
- GOWER, Lord Ronald My Reminiscences. Cheap Edition With Portrait Large crown Svo, 7s 6d
- GRAHAM, William, MA—The Creed of Science, Religious, Moral, and Social Second Edition, Revised Crown 8vo, 6s
- GREY, Rowland —In Sunny Switzerland. A Tale of Six Weeks Small crown 8vo, 5r
- GRIFFITH, Thomas, A M The Gospel of the Divine Life a Study of the Fourth Evangelist Demy 8vo, 14s
- GRIMLEY, Rev H N, M A.—Tremadoc Sermons, chiefly on the Spiritual Body, the Unseen World, and the Divine Humanity Fourth Edition. Crown 8vo, 6s
- G. S. B—A Study of the Prologue and Epilogue in English Literature from Shakespeare to Dryden Crown 8vo, 5s
- GUSTAFSON, Alex—The Foundation of Death. Third Edition, Crown 8vo, 5s.

II/AECAEL, Prof. Ernst.—The History of Creation Translation revised by Professor L. RAY LA KYSTER, M.A. F.L.S. With Colorned Plates and Genealogical Trees of the various groups of both Plants and Animals. 2 vols. Third Edition. Post 8to, 322

The History of the Evolution of Man With numerous Illustrations, 2 vols, 1 ort 810, 321

A Visit to Coylon Fot Sro, 7: 6/

Freedom in Science and Teaching With a Prelatory Note by T. H. Huyum, I.R.S. Crown 8 o 5

HALF CROWN SERIES :--

A Lost Love. By ANNA C. OGLE [\shford Owen]

Sister Dora a Biography By MARGARET LONSDAIL.

True Words for Brave Men a Book for Soldiers and Sallors. By the late CHARLES KINGSLEY

Notes of Travel t being Extracts from the Journals of Count V by English Sonnets. Collected and Arranged by J. Dennis, London Lyries. By F. Locker.

Home Songs for Quiet Hours. By the Rev Canon R. H. BAYYES.

HARRIS William - The History of the Radical Party in Parliament. Demy 8vo 15s HARROP R vor -Bolingbroke. A Political Study and Criticism.

Demy Svo 141

HART Re J W T—The Autobiography of Judas Iscariot. A Character Study Crown 870, 3r 6d

IIAWEIS, Re. II R. VA—Current Coin Materialism—The Deril—Crime—Drunkenness—Pauperism—Emotion—Recreation —The Sabbath. Fifth Edition Crown Sro. 5.

Arrows in the Air Fish Edition. Crown Sec, 54.

Speech in Season Fifth Edition Crown 8vo, 5s

Thoughts for the Times. Thirteenth Edition. Crown 8ro, 5.
Unsectarian Family Prayers. New Edition. Fcap. 8ro, 11 6d

HAWKINS Educards Converford.—Spirit and Form Sermons preached in the Parish Church of Leatherhead. Crown 810 6s

IIAN THORNE Nathaniel -- Works. Complete in Twelve Volumes.
Large post 810, 71. 6d. each volume.

Vol. I. Twice told Tales.
II Mosses from an Old Manse.

IIL THE HOUSE OF THE SEVEN GABLES, AND THE SHOW INAGE

- IIAWTHORNE, Nathamel-continued
 - VOL. IV. THE WONDERBOOK, TANGLEWOOD TALES, AND GRAND TATHER'S CHAIR.
 - THE SCARLET LETTER, AND THE BLITHEDALE ROMANCE THE MARBLE FAUN [Transformation]

 - VII OUR OID HOME, AND ENGLISH NOTE BOOKS.
 - IXAMIRICAN NOTE-BOOKS
 - I RENCH AND ITALIAN NOTE-BOOKS
 - SI PTIMIUS FELTON, THE DOLLIVLE ROMANCE, FANSHAWE, IZAND, IN AN APPENDIX, THE ANCISTRAL FOOTSTEP TALES AND ESSAYS, AND OTHER PAPERS, WITH A BIO-
 - IIXGRAPHICAL SKETCH OF HAWTHORNE.
- IIAYES, A. A., Juni -New Colorado, and the Santa Fé Trail With Map and 60 Illustrations Square 8vo, 9s
- IIENNESSY, Sir John Pope—Ralegh in Ireland With his Letters on Irish Affairs and some Contemporary Documents Large crown Svo, printed on hand-made paper, parchment, 10s 6d
- HENRY, Philip Diaries and Letters of Edited by MATTHEW HENRY LEE, M A Large crown 8vo, 7s 6d
- IIIDE, Albert The Age to Come. Small crown 8vo, 2s 6d
- HIME, Major H W L, R A Wagnerism. A Protest. Crown 8vo, 2s 6d
- HINTON, F-Life and Letters With an Introduction by Su W W GULL, Bart, and Portrait engraved on Steel by C. H Jeens Fifth Edition Crown 8vo, 8s 6d
 - Philosophy and Religion Selections from the Manuscripts of the late Tames Hinton Edited by CAROLINE HADDON Edition Crown 8vo, 5s
 - The Law Breaker, and The Coming of the Law. Edited by Margaret Hinton Crown 8vo, 6s
 - The Mystery of Pain. New Edition Fcap Svo, is.
- Hodson of Hodson's Horse, or, Twelve Years of a Soldier's Life in India Being extracts from the Letters of the late Major W S R Hodson With a Vindication from the Attack of Mr Bosworth Smith Edited by his brother, G H Hodson, M A Fourth Edition Large crown 810, 5s
- IIOLTHAM, E G-Eight Years in Japan, 1873-1881 Work, Travel, and Recreation With three Maps Large crown 8vo, 9s
- Homology of Economic Justice. An Essay by an East India Merchant Small crown 8vo, 5s
- HOOPER, Mary -Little Dinners. How to Serve them with Elegance and Economy. Eighteenth Edition. Crown Svo, 25 6d.

- HOOPER Mary-continued
 - Cookery for Invalids, Persons of Delicate Digestion, and Children Fourth Edition. Crown 8ro ... 6/
 - Every-Day Meals. Being Economical and Wholesome Recipes for Breakfast, Luncheon and Supper Sixth Edition. Crown 8ro. 2t. 6d
- HOPKIVS Ellict Work amongst Working Men Fifth Edition. Crown Svo, 3r 61
- HOSPITALIER E.—The Modern Applications of Electricity Translated and Enlarged by Julius Marra, Ph.D 2 vols. Second Edition, Revised with many additions and numerous Illustrations. Demy 8ro, 122 6d. each volume.

VOL. I —Electric Generators, Electric Light.
VOL. II —Telephone: Various Applications: Electrical

- Vol. II —Telephone: Various Applications: Electrica Transmission of Energy
- Household Rondings on Prophecy By a Layman. Small crown Sro, 3r 6d
- HUGHES Heary -The Redemption of the World Crown 8 o 3 6d.
- IIUVTINGFORD Rev. E. D.C.L.—The Apocalypse. With a Commentary and Introductory Essay. Demy 870, 51
- III. TCHI VSOV II.—Thought Symbolism and Grammatic Illusions. Being a Treatise on the Nature Purpose and Material of Speech. Crown 870 5.
- HUTTON Ref C F—Unconscious Testimony or The Silent Witness of the Hebrew to the Truth of the Historical Scriptures. Crown 8to L. 6d.
- HVNDMAN II M .-- The Historical Basis of Socialism in England, Large crown 8vo, 8r 6d
- IM THURN Everard F—Among the Indians of Guiana, Being Stetches, chiefly ambropologic, from the Interior of British Guiana. With 53 Illustrations and a Map. Demy 8vo, 18.
- Jiccoud Ref S-The Curability and Treatment of Pulmonary Phthisis. Tansised and edited by Montagu LUBSON VI D Demy 870 15:
- Jaunt in a Junk A Ten Days Cruise in Indian Seas. Large crown 8ro, 7r 6d.
- JENAINS E. and RAYMOND J-The Architect's Legal Handbook. Third Edition, revised. Crown 870, 67
- FENNINGS Vrs Vaughan,-Rahel : Her Life and Letters, Large post 8vo 7s 6d.

,

- FERVIS, Rev W. Henley The Gallican Church and the Revolution. A Sequel to the History of the Church of France, from the Concordat of Bologna to the Revolution. Demy 8vo, 18s.
- FOEL, L—A Consul's Manual and Shipowner's and Ship-master's Practical Guide in their Transactions Abroad. With Definitions of Nautical, Mercantile, and Legal Terms, a Glossary of Mercantile Terms in English, French, German, Italian, and Spanish, Tables of the Money, Weights, and Measures of the Principal Commercial Nations and their Equivalents in British Standards, and Forms of Consular and Notarial Acts. Demy 8vo, 12s.
- JOHNSTONE, C F, MA—Historical Abstracts being Outlines of the History of some of the less known States of Europe Ciown 8vo, 7s. 6d.
- FOLLY, William, FRSE, etc—The Life of John Duncan, Scotch Weaver and Botanist. With Sketches of his Friends and Notices of his Times Second Edition. Large crown 8vo, with Etched Portrait, 9s.
- JONES, C. A.—The Foreign Freaks of Five Friends. With 30 Illustrations, Crown 810, 61.
- FOYCE, P. W., LLD, etc.—Old Celtic Romances. Translated from the Gaelic. Crown 8vo, 7s. 6d.
- KAUFMANN, Rev M., B A.—Socialism its Nature, its Dangers, and its Remedies considered. Crown 8vo, 7s 6d.
 - Utopias; or, Schemes of Social Improvement, from Sir Thomas More to Karl Marx. Crown 8vo, 5s.
- KAY, David, FR G.S Education and Educators. Crown 800, 78 6d.
- KAY, Joseph —Free Trade in Land. Edited by his Widow. With Preface by the Right Hon John Bright, M.P. Seventh Edition. Crown 8vo. 5s.
- KEMPIS, Thomas d—Of the Imitation of Christ. Parchment Library Edition—Parchment or cloth, 6s, veilum, 7s 6d The Red Line Edition, fcap 8vo, red edges, 2s. 6d The Cabinet Edition, small 8vo, cloth limp, 1s, cloth boards, red edges, 1s 6d The Miniature Edition, red edges, 32mo, 1s.
 -  All the above Editions may be had in various extra bindings
- NENT, C-Corona Catholica ad Petri successoris Pedes Oblata. De Summi Pontificis Leonis XIII. Assumptione Epigramma. In Quinquaginta Linguis. Fcap 4to, 15s.

- KETTLE HELL, Rev S.—Thomas a Komple and the Brothers of Common Life 2 rols. With I contispletes. Demy 8ro
 - * Also an Abridged Edition, in one volume. With I ortrait Crown
- AIDD Joseph MD The Laws of Therapoutics or the Science and Art of Medicine Second Edition. Crown Svo &
- AIVGSFORD Anna WD-The Perfect Way in Diet, A Treatise advocating a Return to the Natural and Ancient 1 ood of our Race. Small crown 8to 2t
- AIVGSLF: Charles MA Lotters and Momories of his Life Edited by his Wife. With two Steri Lagraved Jottmits, and lygocites on Wood Fuffeenth Cabuset Edition. 2 old. Crown 800 1...
 Also a People's Edition. in one volume. With Portrait. Crown
 - Sto Gr
 All Saints Day and other Sermons. Educed by the Rev W
 - HARRISON Third Edition. Crown Sec 7: 6d

 True Words for Bravo Mon A Book for Soldiers and Sallors Libraries. Eleventh Edition. Crown Sec, 2: 6d.
- AAO! Alexander A The Novy Playground or Wanderings in Abretia. New and Chemer Ldition. Large grown 870 ft.
- LANDON Jarreli -School Management Including a General View of the Vork of Education, Organization, and Descipline Third Edition Crown See, 6a.
- LAURIE S. S -The Training of Teachers, and other Educational Papers. Crown Sec. 7: 66
- LEE Rev F G DCL.—The Other World, or Glimpses of the Supernatural 2 vols. A New Edition. Crown 8 to 150
- Lotters from an Unknown Friend By the Author of Charles Londer With a Preface by the Rev W II CLEAVER. Fcap.
 800. 11
- Letters from a Young Emigrant in Manitoba. Second Edition Small crown 8vo, 3r 6d
- Leward Frank Edited by CHARLES BAMPTON Crown 810, 1. 6d LEHVIS, Edward Dilles.—A Draft Code of Criminal Law and Procedure. Demy 870, 211
- LILLIE Arthur M.R.A.S.—The Popular Life of Buddha Containing an Answer to the Hibbert Lectures of 1881 With Illustrations. Crown 800, 60.
- LLOID Walter—The Hope of the World An Empy on Universal Redemption. Crown Sec, 5r
- LONSDALE Margard -Sister Dora: a Biography With Portrait.
 Chem Edition. Crown 8ro 21 66

- IOUNSHEAR, I represented Fenimere Cooper. With Pertrut Cio a Sto, 5%
- ION DER, Cor. A Biography. By the Author of "St. Teresa" New coll Carrell least Creambro With Portrut 35 6 %
- TICATS, I -- C I -- Lectures on General Nursing, delivered to the Project over of the Icodon Ho pital Framing School for Nor -- Count See, 2003.
- Li III. II.. R., D. Proponeia Prophetica, or, The Level Depos of the Old Lettment Lemmed. New Edition With Notice 1, Ground C. Privson, M. V., Hon Canon of Carling Picu. Svo.
- Remains, P. 1 of -Life, Letters and Literary Remains, P. 1 of a the Latron, With Portraits, The ratio and Laurence Vol. 1 and H., 32s.
- M'CHE'S, G'C-Francis Beaumont, A Critical Study Crown Sec, 5
- M.'C CILIUM, M' II —Studies in Low German and High German Lift rature. Crown Sco., 6.
- MICHITICAL A A Life and Times By Prof VILIARI Tradition Linda VIII at 4 vols. Large post, 8vo, 48s
- Michial Fill, A "-Discourses on the First Decade of Titus Livius, Translated from the Italian by Minian Hill Thouson, MA Large crown Sto, 125
 - The Prince. Irinslated from the Italian by N. II. T. Small crown Svo, printed on hand made paper, bevelled boards, 6s
- MACKLAZII, Alvarda Hovr India is Governed. Being an Account of England's Work in India Small crown Svo, 2s.
- M 1CA AUGIIT, Rev. John Coma Domini An Essay on the Lord's Supper, its Primitive Institution, Apostolic Uses, and Subsequent History Demy Svo, 145
- MACHAILTER, Rev. G. S-Life of Antonio Rosmini Serbati (Founder of the Institute of Charity) 2 vols Demy 8vo [Vol. I now ready, price 12s
- M.1GNUS, Mrs —About the Jews since Bible Times From the Babylonian Exile till the English Exodus. Small crown Svo, 6s.
- MAIR, R S, MD, FRCSE—The Medical Guide for Anglo-Indians Being a Compendium of Advice to Europeans in India, relating to the Preservation and Regulation of Health With a Supplement on the Management of Children in India Second Edition. Crown 8vo, himp cloth, 3s 6d
- MALDEN, Henry Ellio Vienna, 1683. The History and Consequences of the Defeat of the Turks before Vienna, September 12th, 1683, by John Sobieski, King of Poland, and Charles Leopold, Duke of Lorraine. Crown 810, 45. 6d

- Many Voices A volume of Extracts from the Reli_oious Writers of Christendom from the First to the Sixteenth Century With Biographical Sketches. Crown 8vo, cloth crtrs, red edges, for
- MARKHAM Cast Albert Hastings, P. V.—Thio Great Frozen Sea:
 A Personal harrative of the Voyage of the Albert during the Artile Expedition of 1875-6. With 6 Full page Illustrations 2 Maps and -7 Woodcuts. Sixth and Cheaper Edition. Crown 8vo, 6r
 - A Polar Reconnaissance: being the Voyage of the Ishern to Noraya Zemlya in 1879. With 10 Illustrations. Demy 870, 161
- Marriago and Maternity or Scripture Wives and Mothers. Small crown 8vo, 4s. 6s.
- MARTIVEAU Gerinde.—Outline Lessons on Morals. Small crown 810, 31 64
- MAUDSLEY II MD—Body and Will. Being an Essay concerning Vill, in its Metaphysical Physiological and Pathological Aspects. 870, 127
- M.GRATH, Terrice -Pictures from Ireland New and Cheaper Edition. Crown 870 21
- MEREDITII M.A.—Thootokos, the Example for Woman Delicated by permission to Lady Agnes Wood, Reused by the Venerable Archdencon DENIGON 32mo, limp cloth, 11 for MILLER Edward.—The History and Doctrines of Irvingism
 - or The so-called Catholic and Apostolic Church 2 vols. Large post 8vo, 25r
 - The Church in Relation to the State Large crown 8vo, 7s 6d.
 - MINCHIN 7 G -Bulgaria since the War: Notes of a Tour in the Autumn of 1879. Small crown 8vo, 3r 6d
 - MITCHELL, Lucy M A History of Ancient Sculpture With numerous Illustrations, including 6 Plates in Phototype, royal 8vo 42r
 - Selections from Ancient Sculpture. Being a Portfolio containing Reproductions in Phototype of 36 Masterpleces of Ancient Art to illustrate Mrs. Mitchelf s "History of Ancient Sculpture" 187
 - MITFORD Bertram.—Through the Zulu Country Its Bottle fields and its People. With Fire Illustrations. Demy 8ro 14r
- MOCALER E.—A Grammar of the Baloochee Language, as it is spoken in Makran (Ancient Gedrosia) in the Persia Arabic and Roman characters. Fup. Sro. 5t
- MOLESWORTH Rev W Assett, MA -History of the Church of England from 1680 Large crown 8ro 7s 6d